UNCOVER EXPENDITURE OF $143,000 BY SHIPBUILDERS

Fact Disclosed at Opening of Investigation of William B. Shearer's Services at the Naval Parley Which Collapsed in Geneva—Clinton L. Bardo, President of the New York Shipbuilding Company, Told of Operations of Shipbuilders in National and International Affairs—Denied That Shearer Was Hired to Interfere With Negotiations Instituted by President Coolidge.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (AP)—Expenditure of $143,000 by shipbuilders for activities here at the time the Jones-White merchant marine act was passed a year ago was discovered today by a senator committee, in opening its investigation of William B. Shearer's services for shipbuilders at the 1927 naval parley which collapsed in Geneva.

Clinton L. Bardo, farm born president of the New York shipbuilding company, told of the operations of the shipbuilders in national and international affairs. He bluntly denied that Shearer was hired to interfere with the Geneva negotiations instituted by President coolidge.

He said $25,000 was paid Shearer by the three companies to learn from him the "trend" of the conference. He said he didn't care about the result and was "disappointed" that the conference failed.

The committee learned from Bardo of the $143,000 expenditures by the shipping industry at the time the Jones-White act was enacted.

Bardo said the Trans-Oceanic company, a subsidiary of the American Brown Boveri Electric Corporation, spent $102,000 in its drive for legislation at the time it was projecting a four-day trans-Atlantic service. The New York shipbuilding company also is a subsidiary of the American Brown Boveri.

A list of the expenditures submitted by Bardo showed that $36,693 advanced to L. R. Wilder, president of the Trans-Oceanic company, and $24,049 for hotel expenses were the largest items. Another item showed $6,750 to the Ivy Lee Publicity organization.

The remainder of the $143,000 fund was made up as follows: Newport Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Corporation—$10,000; Bethlehem Steel Corporation—$10,000. Sun Shipbuilding Company—$5,000; Wothington Pump and Machine Company—$2,500. General Electric Corporation—$5,000; Babcock and Wilcox Company—$5,000; Westinghouse Electric and Mfg., Company—$4,000.

The list of expenditures of $102,000 by the Trans-Oceanic Company was headed "out-of-pocket expenditures for publicity, etc., American merchant Marine."

As a result of the disclosures on the builder fund, Senator Shortridge, republican, California, chairman of the committee, said he would later ask that officials of the companies be summoned to explain the story in which he represented himself as in the employ of the American Patriotic societies at Geneva.

Asked why that constituted double-crossing. Bardo replied:

"You can't ride thos two horses."

"Why not?" inquired Robinson.

"They are going in opposite directions," replied Bardo. "The viewpoints of the Patriotic societies and ours don't correspond at all times."

Bardo said that Shearer's price of $25,000.

Bardo said that at the time Shearer was hired, his company was seeking two government contracts for cruisers, which it received a month later and which cruisers it is now completing.

Shearer who now is suing the three companies for which he 'observed and reported" for $250,000 additional, sat in the front of the crowded committee room throughout the day and heard Bardo refer to his work at Geneva as "bunk." His attorney, Daniel Cohalan, of New York, interrupted the inquiry at the outset to demand that Shearer be called first, but he was firmly and curtly told by Chairman Shortridge, that Shearer would be called "in due course" and when the committee pleased.

After five hours of investigation today, the committee adjourned until tomorrow when Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of directors of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, will appear to tell of his company's relations with Shearer.

Senator Robinson, democrat, Arkansas, called attention to claims that Shearer broke up the Geneva conference.

Bardo replied:—

"I would be a silly ass to talk about hiring this man without power or authority to break up an international conference."

"But his reports indicated he was working to interfere with the conference, persisted Robinson.

"The only three reports of Shearer's I saw didn't show that," replied Bardo. "They speak for themselves."

"No man can read into those reports that he was interfering. I say the reports were only bunk."

Robinson asked why no attention was paid to Shearer's reports after $25,000 had been spent for them.

"We had a very desperate situation when he hired him," said Bardo.

"Inside of six weeks that situation changed and our only interest was to get the disarmament question settled."

"Then you were disappointed in the Geneva failure," asked senator Allen republican Kansas.

"Yes."

Bardo said that Shearer's service were terminated in December, 1927 after the Geneva conference had failed. He said that one reason he insisted upon Shearer's discharge was that he "double-crossed us." Explaining, Bardo said that in October, 1927, Shearer had written a newspaper story in which he represented himself as in the employ of the American Patriotic societies at Geneva.

Asked why that constituted double-crossing. Bardo replied:

"You can't ride thos two horses."

"Why not?" inquired Robinson.

"They are going in opposite directions," replied Bardo. "The viewpoints of the Patriotic societies and ours don't correspond at all times."

JOHN COOLIDGE HAD BACHELOR DINNER

HARTFORD, Sept. 20—(AP)—Major John Coolidge had his bachelor dinner tonight. The son of ex-President Coolidge, who is to marry Miss Florence Trumbull, daughter of Gov. and Mrs. John H. Trumbull in Plainville, Monday, was given a dinner at the Elm Tree inn, in Farmington by a few of his young friends.

Mr. Coolidge, it seems, did not intend to have a bachelor dinner, but his friends thought he ought to have one and quietly arranged it. The proprietor of the inn had no intimation that the dinner was to be Mr. Coolidge's bachelor dinner. It was an informal party, without music.

Twelve young men, including Mr. Coolidge, gathered at the Elm Tree inn about 8:30 p. m. Not until then was it known at the hotel that the party was to be Mr. Coolidge's bachelor dinner. The guests at the dinner besides Mr. Coolidge were:

Stephen Brown, of Northampton, Mass., best man at the wedding; Philip Morehouse, of Brooklyn, N. Y., usher at the wedding; Nathan White, Jr., of New Haven; Emory L. Mallett, of Hartford; Arthur Bushell, of Hartford; Wooster B. Williams, John B. Minor, Jr., Eldred Minor, Eric Waldo, Donald Edwards and Pierce U. Clark, an usher, all of Plainville.

Tomorrow afternoon, Miss Trumbull and Major Coolidge, accompanied by the bridal party, will rehearse the marriage ceremony with the minister at the Plainville Congregational church, just as they expect to go through in two days later.

Outside of the wedding party there will be 82 guests, including ex-President and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, present at the wedding ceremony at the church Monday afternoon. Following this there will be a reception on the lawn of the Trumbull estate at which 400 guests will be present.

Miss Florence Trumbull and her fiance will be the guests at a dinner party and dance to be tendered Saturday night, by Miss Esther Trumbull, cousin of the bride-to-be. Miss Trumbull tonight declined to make known where the event will be held. Miss Trumbull said that in addition to Miss Florence Trumbull and Mr. Coolidge, members of the bridal attendants and a few friends will attend the affair. Miss Trumbull said that all told, 18 persons will be present.

CHILD NOVELIST HELD IN DETENTION HOME

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Sept. 20—(AP)—A desire for freedom and an aversion to school led Barbara Newhall Follett, child novelist of New Haven, Conn., to leave her friends in Los Angeles and come to San Francisco, she told juvenile court authorities today. She is held at the detention home for Los Angeles officers.

Miss Follett, 15 years of age, was arrested last night at a local hotel on a telegraphic warrant from Los Angeles.

Advices from Los Angeles said the girl's detention had been requested by friends. She will be returned to that city and released to "responsible parties," it was said. Both the girl and officers declined to make known who the "parties" are.

Miss Follett is the daughter of Wilson Follett, a writer. She had recently returned from the Hawaiian Islands.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20—(AP)—Federal agents today seized Swiss watches and watch movements valued at $50,000 which they said had been smuggled into the country in boxes marked "chocolates." Louis Poller was arrested in connection with the seizure.

BARRICATED EXCONVICT HOLDS OFFICIALS AT BAY

FORT SMITH, Ark., Sept. 20 (AP)—Behind the corrugated bullet proof walls of his mountain home in Franklin county from which he was routed once before by the National guard, Neil McLaughlin, 42, an exconvict, tonight held off officers of three counties who sought to arrest him on a statutary charge.

McLaughlin, who once was under a death sentence for a statutory offense has been barricaded in his home with his wife and children since last midnight.

His home is a corrugated iron affair and is full of port-holes. In the same structure in 1926 McLaughlin, charged at that time also with a statutory offense, barricaded himself for days. The National Guard eventually was called out and McLaughin surrendered. He was tried and acquitted.

At the last term of court at Ozark, when he was to tried on another statutory charge and a pistol carrying charge, he was said to have waylaid the prosecuting witness and attacked him with the barrel of a gun. He was under bond at the time and the bond was forfeited. It is upon these charges he now is sought.

McLaughlin was sentenced in 1915 to die. He first gained a stay of sentence, then a commutation to life imprisonment. Then he escaped from the penitentiary. In 1922 he startled penitentiary officials by walking in and surrendering. The same day he made a personal plea to governor Charles H. Brough for a pardon which was granted.

Four defense motions were made and denied, and a legal conference held to determine the procedure of final summations.

Declaration that perjury charges would be filed against two defense witnesses, one a woman, was made by Chief Prosecutor James P. Costello. He said he was in possession of "highly sensational information" which came to him too late for use in the trial, which would form part of the basis of the charges. Costello said he had reported the matter to District Attorney Buron Fitts and that it probably would be laid before the grand jury.

SEEKING THE SLAYERS OF FRANK REED WHITESIDE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 20 (AP)—Two young men, one white and the other a negro, were sought by the police tonight as the slayers of Frank Reed Whiteside, landscape artist and treasurer of the fellowship of the Pennsylvania academy of the fine arts and, of the Philadelphia sketch club.

One of the fugitives was seen to throw something into an open cellar window of a house in Lombard street. Detectives later found in the cellar a leather key case containing ten keys belonging to Mr. Whiteside. The keys were found to fit various doors and closets in the Whiteside home.

Col. Lindbergh Starts Caribbean Journey

Dead, 47 Injured In Detroit Club Fire

Havana Accorded Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh an Impressive Reception.

HAVANA, Sept. 20—(AP)—Inaugurating an air mail service from the United States to Dutch Guiana and starting a 7,000 mile tour of the Caribbean, Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh tonight completed without a hitch the first stage of their journey from the American mainland to Cuba.

Off from Miami, Fla., at 9:05 a. m. (E. S. T.) with seven passengers and a crew of four, the flying colonel landed at Camp Columbia military field here at 11:18 a. m. An hour later he took off for Camaguey, halfway down the island, and Santiago-de-Cuba, where the party will spend the night.

The visit to Havana was brief but impressive. Thousands of Cubans waited to greet Colonel Lindbergh and his wife, and Cuban officials and the members of foreign diplomatic corps pressed around his Fokker ten-passenger airplane to congratulate the aviators.

The weather forecast was a little less favorable for the flight to Camaguey and Santiago than it had been for the first lex of the flight.

Murky skies, ocasional tropical showers, and blinding flashes of lightning prevailed when the colonel took off at 12:20 p. m. (E. S. T.) for the eastern end of the island. Showers and northwesterly winds over that region were predicted. The colonel and his party of ten, including as passengers J. T. Trippe, president of the Pan-American Airways, backers of the flight, newspaper reporters and a cameraman, escaped a wetting. A short but heavy burst of rain came just after they were safely in the cabin.

It was Cuba's first view of Mrs. Lindbergh and a fitting ovation was paid the former Anne Morrow who will make the 7,000 mile flight with her husband. She will be his only passenger south of San Juan, Porto Rico, where other passengers will be left behind and a Sikorsky amphibian plane taken for the rest of the way to Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana.

Requests by Colonel Lindbergh for no receptions and simple, extra-official greetings were ignored by government and people who extended as hearty a reception, though a smaller one, as they did in 1928 when he came through here blazing the first air mail trial through Latin America on his epic good-will flight.

President Gerardo Machado of Cuba sent his military aid, Colonel Morales Cuello, to greet Colonel Lindbergh and offered flowers to Mrs. Lindbergh. The secretaries of state, sanitation, communications and interior department were in the long line to greet the Lone Eagle and Mrs. Lindbergh.

European ambassadors, Latin American ministers and numerous embassy dignitaries also were in the group.

The arrival of the plane was uneventful and the departure without mishap. From Santiago Colonel Lindbergh and his party will go on to Port Au Prince, Haiti, Santo Domingo and Porto Rico, spending tomorrow night at San Juan.

The route over which the colonel is carrying 135 nounds of special mail for the east coast of South America is known as air mail route No. 6 of the Pan-American Airways, Inc.

Nine Men and Eight Women on Death List—Cigarette or Match Caused the Fire.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 20.— (AP)—Seventeen dead and 47 injured tonight was the casualty record of the flames and smoke that early this morning swept through the Study club, a cabaret in East Vernor highway that for a year has been one of the bright centers of Detroit night life.

Nine men and eight women made up the death list. The injured were scattered in half a dozen hospitals, many too seriously hurt to tell of their experiences.

Six separate investigations were under way by state and city departments, but the cause of the fire that sent scores of men and women into two small rooms in the rear of the second floor dining room, there to be trampled, burned and suffocated, still was undetermined. Thirty men and women, battered and bruised, were found piled in one of the rooms, a dressing room. A women's rest room, opposite the dressing room, was the other trap for which the panic stricken dancers and diners dashed when the flames swept around the dining room.

The two rooms and the main stairway furnished the only means of egress and the stairway was curtained with flame. Windows of the hall had been sealed to conform with the scheme of decoration.

The supposition of Gabriel S. Goldwater, fire marshal, was that a carelessly thrown cigarette or match started the fire, and that the shout of "fire" caused the panic that followed.

"If there had been one man in the place who could have kept his head, this need not have happened," said Martin Cohn, proprietor of the club.

Cohn was ordered held after he had made a statement to Duncan C. McCrea, assistant prosecuting attorney.

"There is evidence of criminal negligence here and I am going to find out who is responsible," said McCrea. He referred to the Study club, a two-story building on the edge of Detroit's downtown district and near Woodward avenue, the main street, as a "fire trap."

The fire started in the dining room and found ready fuel in the flimsy decorations that covered the walls. As the flames shot around the room there was a wild rush for the dance floor in the center and then for the two small rooms. The small dressing room had no exit and 30 men and women piled up there, unconscious from smoke or fright. In the women's rest room many more crowded in panic. A window, one of two on the second floor that could be opened, was the way more than a score slid to safety before a fire hose, used as a rope, broke and tossed one girl into an alley. After that many others were dropped out by Al Handler, leader of the cabaret orchestra. Then he, too, was pushed through the window by the frenzied crowd.

At the various hospitals it was said many of the injured were in such condition their recovery was uncertain. Coroner Albert French announced an inquest will be held later.

"Surest, Quickest and Best"

Experience is a valuable teacher. For a long time Armour & Co. have been users of newspaper advertising. F. Edson White, president of the company, in a letter testifying to the appreciation of the value of newspaper advertising, has the following to say:

"Powerful news mediums of communication and information have recently come into our lives, and interest in them is great, but nothing has yet taken the place of that remarkable institution, the American newspaper. It stands supreme in its ability to transmit a sales or a news message. Other mediums are splendid for supplementary purposes, but if only one can be used, then the newspaper must be that one. It is the surest, quickest and best means for reaching the public.

"Armour & Company's advertising—both product and institutional—is built around the continuous use of newspaper space, and we are satisfied that the money we spend in the newspapers is well spent."

A word to the wise is sufficient—make use of The Bulletin's advertising columns.

MUST PAY TWO WEEKS' SALARIES TO FIVE ACTORS

NEW YORK, Sept. 20—(AP)—A board of arbitration today ruled that Helen Hayes' approaching motherhood could not be considered an "act of God" and that therefore Jed Harris, producer, would have to pay two weeks' salaries to five actors thrown out of jobs by the abandonment of "Coquette," in which Miss Hayes was starred.

The contract between the actors and the producer provided that if the show was discontinued because of any act of God the two weeks' salary provision would be inoperative. Harris contended that the actress' condition fell under that classification.

Miss Hayes is the wife of Charles G. McArthur, playwright.

MRS. WAGGONER REFUSES TO WAIVE IMMUNITY

NEW YORK, Sept. 20 (AP)—Refusing to waive immunity, Mrs. Mary Belle Waggoner was not questioned by the grand jury today in the federal investigation of the method used by her husband, Charles D. Waggoner, president of the bank of Telluride, Colo., in fraudulently obtaining $500,000 credit in six New York banks.

Mrs. Waggoner arrived yesterday from Colorado in company with her son, Charles D. Waggoner, Jr., and Miss Frances Carison, young clerk of the Telluride bank, in answer to federal subpoenas.

Emanuel G. Kleid, assistant United States attorney, revealed that plans are being made to bring the elder Waggoner, under indictment for mail fraud in connection with his financial coup, to trial within a week or 10 days.

The U. S. attorney here has been notified that Waggoner has signed a waiver of a hearing at Cheyenne, Wyo., on his removal to New York.

LEGAL LIMIT BETWEEN A HOME AND A BEER FLAT

CHICAGO, Sept. 20—(AP)—The legal dividing line between a home and a beer flat was set by Judge Joseph W. Schulman today at 75 bottles of brew.

Mrs. Emily D. Dean, 36, was on trial because Serzeant Clarence Sweeney found 75 bottles in her apartment last week. She insisted they were for home use in connection with a forthcoming party.

"Madam," Judge Schulman ruled, "no home can have 75 bottles of beer and not be a beer flat. There is a beer capacity for homes and that is reached at 75 bottles."

But Mrs. Dean was freed, anyhow, the police, it was found, had entered without a search warrant.

BROKER'S MESSENGER TELLS OF KIDNAPING AND ROBBERY

An 18 Year Old Boy Had Disappeared With Over Half a Million Dollars in Securities—Says Two Men Stopped Him, Ordered Him Into a Car and Let Him Out in the Outskirts of Brooklyn—Telephoned Office Where He Could Be Found—After Questioning the Youth Was Held For Grand Larceny.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—(AP)—An 18-year-old broker's messenger, who disappeared today with over a half million dollars in securities, telephoned his offices late this afternoon that he was in Brooklyn, where he had been taken by two men who had kidnapped him and robbed him of the securities.

Detectives immediately rushed to the Brooklyn corner where he told his office he was and found Milton Alter patiently waiting. He apparently had not been harmed.

Alter was taking the $512,000 in securities, of which $75,000 worth were negotiable, from the Guaranty Trust company to the offices of A. V. Hiscoe and company, where he is employed, when he said the two men stopped him, ordered him into a car and drove away.

After robbing him of his package they drove him on a circuitious route through the city, he said, and finally let him out in the outskirts of Brooklyn.

After several hours of questioning, the boy was locked up in the Greenwich street police station on a charge of grand larceny. Police said discrepancies were found in his story during a grilling conducted by Police Commissioner Grover A. Whalen and Chief Inspector Edward P. Mulrooney.

HOOVER SENT GREETINGS TO Y. M. C. A. CONVENTION

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 20—(AP)—President Hoover, in a letter of greeting read at the national convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union here, today, said that "too many people have come to rely wholly on the strong arm of the law to enforce abstinence."

The text of President's Hoover's letter follows:

"Please present my greetings to the convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. I am daily impressed with the great need for extended work of education in the moral, physical and economic benefits of temperance. Since the adoption of the prohibition amendment too many people have come to rely wholly upon the strong arm of the law to enforce abstinence, forgetting that the cause of temperance has its strong foundations in the conviction of the individual of the personal value to himself of temperance in all things."

CONFERENCES HELD ON SEAPOWER LIMITATION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 —(AP)—Secretary Stimson today began conferences with the diplomatic representatives in Washington of the three naval powers which are to be invited to join with the United States and Great Britain in a seapower limitation conference next January.

His first talk was with Paul Claudel, the French ambassador, and it was indicated that there would be conversations later with the Japanese and Italian ambassadors. Neither the secretary of state nor the French diplomat would discuss the meeting. Since the invitations to the conference are to be issued by the British government, there was speculation as to what the subject matter had been.

France, Japan and Italy have been kept informed of the Anglo-American negotiations for limitation of their cruiser, destroyer and submarine fleets. Consummation of this agreement must of necessity depend on the attitude of the other three powers.

OPPOSES COMMUTATION OF SINCLAIR'S SENTENCE

WASHINGTON, Sept 20—(AP)—The department of justice announced today that the petition of Harry F. Sinclair and Henry Mason Day, for commutation of their jail sentences for jury shadowing, had been forwarded to President Hoover with a strong recommendation from Attorney General Mitchell that there be no executive interference with the sentences.

Attorney General Mitchell held that Sinclair's business interests afforded no reason for claiming clemency and that there was no distinction between the cases of Sinclair and Day.

He said he was convinced there was a sinister and ulterior purpose in shadowing the jury.

To grant executive clemency under the circumstances Mr. Mitchell told the president, "would undermine the confidence of the people in the administration of justice."

CROWD OF 10,000 SEES NIGHT FOOTBALL GAME

NEWCASTLE, Pa., Sept. 20—(AP)—Night time football was inaugurated here tonight at Ben Franklin stadium, 10,000 fans seeing a game in which Newcastle high school defeated Grove City high 13 to 0.

The Newcastle experiment, the first in this part of the country, was declared by football enthusiasts to have been a success from every viewpoint. The local school will play three more evening games before switching to daylight contests during the latter half of the season.

Fourteen huge floodlights, arranged to make for a minimum of shadow, lighted the gridiron and spectators said they were able to follow each play as easily as if it was daylight. A white football was used for the nocturnal sport.

The game was started at 8:15 o'clock. Just as darkness was falling.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY AFTER PAYING BACK $10,000

NEW YORK, Sept. 20—(AP)—A former redemption clerk of the Guaranty Trust company who "used" $10,000 of the banks money and then paid it back after a cleanup at the London race tracks, was held for the grand jury today in $1,000 bail.

Magistrate George W. Simpson denied a motion by Frank R. Galgano, attorney for the clerk, Lorne W. Malley, for the defendant's release on the ground that the bank had not brought complaint until after receipt of Malley's letter and check from London.

DOUBLE LIFE STORY IN PEACOX MURDER TRIAL

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 20—(AP)—A red haired woman of easy friendships was taken out of jail today to testify that Earl Peacox, now on trial for killing his wife, had told her two months before the killing that he planned to "get" Mrs. Peacox.

It was a sordid story this woman, known both as Frances Murray and Frances Newman, told, and one that kept the crowded court room tensely quiet.

When Earl Peacox 21-year-old radio technician, was left by his wife he sought consolation in a New York city dance hall. There he met Frances Newman and her "boy friend", spoken of at this trial as Willie.

Several times the two met and last March she went to the Peacox apartment in Mount Vernon, the apartment in which he admittedly killed his wife in April and from which he carried her body to nearby woods, later to set it on fire.

"That night," Miss Newman said today, after being brought to the courtroom from the jail where she has been held since a few days after the slaying as a material witness, "I learned for the first time that Earl was married."

"I asked him if there was any danger of my getting in trouble by being there and he said his wife had left him and never came back.

"He said she was living with some one in New York and if he ever met up with them he was apt to finish them both."

During cross examination it was brought out that Peacox had said something about his wife living with two men.

"Didn't he mean those two men when he spoke of finishing both?" defense counsel asked.

"He was speaking of his wife at the time," she said.

SANATE TARIFF VOTE FAVORS SOUTHERN MILLERS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (AP)—President Hoover's silence while the tariff controversy rages in the senate was defended today by Senator Watson, of Indiana, the republican leader, who said in a floor speech that he would use all the influence at his command to keep the executive out of the contest while the revision bill is in the making.

The finance committee lost another one of its amendments to the house bill on the floor when party lines split and sent down to defeat 51 to 18, a proposal to eliminate the house provision making Canadian wheat milled in bond in the United States for export to Cuba pay a duty of thirty per cent, which equals the tariff reduction Cuba grants American flour.

The vote scored a victory for the southwestern millers of American wheat growers over the Buffalo millers of Canadian wheat, and by it free milling in bond of foreign wheat now would be restricted only to that wheat which is not sent to countries having preferential trade treaties with the United States.

Twenty-seven republicans joined twenty-four democrats in voting against the committee amendment to strike out, while three democrats voted with fifteen republicans for striking out.

RAILROAD CRAFTSMAN SEVERELY BURNED

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 20—(AP)—Edward Rogers, 22, of 734 Howard avenue, Bridgeport, was severely burned about the face, right hand and feet, this afternoon, when he came in contact with a knife switch at the Cedar street bridge of the New Haven railroad.

Rogers, who is employed by the New Haven railroad as a skilled craftsman helper in the electrical department, was working with a gang when the accident occurred. Eleven thousand volts passed through his body.

Although his condition is considered serious, he has not been placed on the danger list at Grace hospital, where he was taken to after the accident.

STOCK EXCHANGE SCANDAL UNCOVERED IN LONDON

LONDON, Sept. 21 (AP)—The mail today says four men have been arrested on charge of conspiring to obtain money under false pretenses in connection with the recent slump of about $40,000,000 in paper values of seven securities on the stock exchange.

The Stock Exchange committee has now suspended dealings in these securities to halt complete collapse in the prices.

The securities of local industrial concerns without international affiliations, various banks and other interested parties have employed an accountant to investigate the affairs of the Hatry group.

DANIELSON

TRUCK DRIVER SERIOUSLY INJURED IN ACCIDENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 20—Leon Gleckman, 57 Bowen street, Providence, was tossed into the air amidst a small whirlwind of loaves of bread, pies, cakes and sundry other bakery products contained in the motor delivery truck he was operating for the Hathaway Baking company of Providence when the machine was in collision at the Franklin street crossing this morning with a special south-bound train conveying New Hampshire members of the Mystic Shrine to a convention of the order in Atlantic city.

Gleckman was seriously injured, but is expected to live. He is a patient at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam, where he was removed in the hospital ambulance.

There are conflicting accounts of the accident as to just what happened and how it happened, by a considerable number of eyewitnesses, including a number of children. The accounts agree that Gleckman had just left a store in Carter street, after making one of his delivery calls, going into the lower end of Furnace street and around the corner into Franklin street, less than 100 feet from the railroad crossing on a down grade to go wherever he was going. The automatic electric signal gong at the crossing is said to have been sounding its warning of the approaching train and there were those who stated that the locomotive whistle was loudly blown as the train came rushing on at high speed just immediately prior to the acbident.

One group of reports has it that the delivery truck was struck by the locomotive as it was going over the crossing, while an insistently certain different lot of eyewitnesses assert that the truck was driven into one of the cars just back of the locomotive

In any event, the crash brought action aplenty—all are agreed on that. The truck is said to have been spun around like a top. Gleckman, it is claimed by those who watched in horror-stricken fascination, was catapulted out of his seat and shot like a rocket into the air, clearing a guy wire about 20 feet above the ground, to fall in a crumpled heap in a driveway that leads parallel with the railroad to a bakery in a yard just a short distance south of the crossing. To the observers there did not appear to be a chance that the victim of the accident had escaped alive. The train, traveling at high speed, flashed past, but was halted as soon as possible. Included among the Shriners riding on the train were several physicians and one of them, Dr. George McGregor of the New Hampshire State hospital at Concord, gave Gleckman his attention. There were no bones broken and outside the possibility of internal injuries the injured man appeared to have escaped with a deep gash beneath his chin and some other cuts on the head, nose and heel.

While awaiting the ambulance he was made comfortable on an improvised resting place built up of cushions from the wrecked truck and other available material. He was able to converse while awaiting removal with State Officer Henry Mayo, who checked up the accident, and Chief John McFarland of the borough police, who has a speaking acquaintance with the injured man.

The train, special No. 1223, was in charge of Conductor James McVeigh and Philip Tarbell, engineer, and Bert Edsha!, fireman. This crew picked up the train at Worcester shortly after 1 o'clock this morning.

The delivery truck that figured in the affair, a practically new machine, is about ready for the junk heap. The closed body was torn completely off the chassis and there is so much other damage that a small catalogue would be necessary to enumerate it. This accident was the first serious one to happen at the Franklin street crossing in a long time, though a number of others have occurred there.

PURCHASED 60 ACRES OF LAND IN KILLINGLY

DANIELSON, Sept. 20—This afternoon the State of Connecticut closed a deal through which it has acquired in the town of Killingly, three miles east of Danielson near South Killingly, 60 acres of land—or more properly water and land—as a factor in the state's development of state-leased books in this area.

The purchase by the state was made from Arthur Teatreault, owner of farm land that included what is known to old residents as the Pike cranberry bog. The area in question includes the headwaters of Snake Meadow brook, one of the most famous trout streams in southern New England, this brook now state-leased and controlled, has had much consideration from the state during the past few years and is regularly and heavily stocked, and the benefit of those who go fishing.

The bulk of the 60 acres acquired by the state today, after negotiations and inspections that have gone on for months, is under water. Practically all of the water in the area is derived from natural springs. An oldtime dam, just north of the state highway on the Providence route between Danielson and South Killingly, still serves to make more or less of a pond, though the dam is in a bad state of disrepair.

Homer H. Judd of Bristol, field representative of the State Fish and Game commission, in conjunction with local sportsmen brought about the purchase of the property by the state. The property has been purchased, for one reason, to protect the state's other interests along Snake Meadow brook.

The state may, and can do, one or several things with its new purchase. It can use it as a storage place for trout, the spring water being ideal for them. It can, and may, develop a hatchery there. Again, for this purpose, conditions are ideal. The state has no hatchery or storage place for trout in this section of the state. It may have both, if it wishes by developing today's purchase.

As things are, the property merely has been taken over by the state, but there is a certainty that this will be only a first step leading to interesting developments.

Boys Taken Back Home

Boys will run away from home—even good homes—to see the world though they suffer plenty for their curiosity. It so happens that Charles Wiseman and Kenneth Angilly, both 14 of Providence, neither saw much nor suffered much in their venture out into the great beyond. A truck brought them out here, a matter of 45 minutes with an ordinary car, but perhaps a little longer ride, insofar as time is concerned, on the truck that landed them here about midnight last night. Officer Laird Winchell checked them up and decided it would be proper to hold them until more could be learned about how they happened to be in the territory and why. They were locked up at the police station for the night. This afternoon parental relatives of both boys came here to take them back to Providence. The relatives told Chief John McFarland that the boys were good boys; that they left their homes to go to school yesterday morning, did not return when they were expected, and that no more had been heard from them until a telephone call from the Danielson police developed their whereabouts.

PUTNAM

ELDERLY EASTFORD MAN SUICIDES BY HANGING

PUTNAM, Sept. 20. — Brooding over the fact that he was penniless and forced to derive his living from the town of Eastford, Frank Bowen, 80-year-old inmate of the Eastford town farm, was found dead, a victim of suicide by hanging, in his old home in Eastford yesterday. Bowen's lifeless body was found hanging by a sheet, which he had used, by State Officer Heinold of Stafford Springs barracks. Officer Heinold summoned Coroner Arthur G. Bill of Danielson, who viewed the body, pronounced death caused by a suicide motive and gave permission for removal.

Until about two weeks ago, Bowen was a patient at the "Haven" home in Abington. According to Mrs. A. G. Griggs, superintendent of the institution, he was admitted there on June 19, suffering from an infection of the leg. He made a satisfactory convalescence and was able to walk about with the aid of two canes. When his financial reserve became exhausted he was taken to the Eastford town farm. On Wednesday morning he was not to be found. The state police were called to investigate as to his whereabouts. It was learned today that he had walked from Warrenville, a distance of about four miles, when he received a ride from a salesman. He gained admittance to his old home and made his way into the attic, where he took his life. Bowen's body was not found until noon Thursday, but he is believed to have been dead for several hours.

Curtis N. Dean, clerk of the superior courts of Windham county, issued copies of the docket of cases to be tried at the September term of the criminal session to open in this city on Tuesday, September 24, at nine o'clock. Seventeen new cases are slated to be tried and 13 continued cases are on file together with a number of probation cases. The most important hearing of the entire term will take place when the state arraigns Thomas Mazzola of Willimantic on a charge of murder of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Rosia Lorella, also of Willimantic.

Several cases which will attract a widespread local attention are those of the state vs. Ora L. Smart of Woodstock, who is charged with rape; Pasquale (Patsy) Perilli of this city, ex-convict, who will face a serious statutory charge; Elmer Burdict and William Culley, Elmville boys, who will be arraigned on charges of statutory burglary and theft and Welcome Baker, 17-year-old Auburn youth, who is now being held in the county jail to stand trial for breaking and entering the home of Mrs. Joseph Shepherd of Prospect street. Judge Edward M. Yeomans of Danbury will preside at both the criminal and civil terms of court.

Captain of Police William J. Jarvis was in Cranston, R. I., yesterday where he interviewed Arthur Marquis of Livery street, Putnam, who is being held at the state prison there awaiting a hearing before the grand jury. The state of Rhode Island alleges that Marquis is responsible for the thefts of second hand and antique furniture taken from homes situated over the state line on the Providence road and re-sold through a local antique dealer. He was arrested several weeks ago following investigations by Rhode Island, Connecticut, state police and local police and following a period of detainment at the police barracks in Danielson, Marquis was transferred to Cranston to await the decision of Rhode Island grand jury. Captain Jarvis said today that Marquis will appear before the Rhode Island court on Monday, September 30.

The cold snap continued today with the mercury remaining at a record low point of 41 degrees throughout the day. At seven o'clock this morning he temperature dropped to 38 degrees gradually rising during the forenoon to 61. The officials of Putnam high school ordered the institution closed at 9:45 o'clock this morning because of the extreme cold in the building. The school was closed yesterday when disabled boilers could not be fired up to drive out the chill. Frosts were experienced again today and all late season vegetable matter in the gardens and fruit still on vines was nipped. In several places in the rural sections farmers expecting a return of the summer weather maintained a vigil over the crops, keeping fires burning in order to throw a protective veil of smoke over the gardens. The sudden touch of cold and frosty weather will bring about a water shortage if immediate rains are not had, farmers say. Wells have not been satisfactorily replenished and brooks and ponds are still way below their normal water lines.

Coach L. F. Noyes and several members of the 1929 football squad were onlookers at the season's opening clash of the Killingly high of Danielson and the Bartlett high of Webster elevens, which took place at Webster today. Both the Webster and Danielson teams will meet the Noyesmen during the coming season, and the purpose of the trip of the local players was to pick out the strong and weak points of the opposing teams. Putnam meets Bartlett in a few weeks and will take on the Killonians on Thanksgiving day at Putnam.

The town political campaign is at this date well underway. The democrats who have been in the minority for the past number of years have assumed the offensive and will make every effort to gain control of the town government by carrying the majority of votes in the election in November. The republicans who have held the reins and until recently have never met with any real opposition, are confident of victory. It is evident that the real contests lay in the fights of the candidates for the board of selectmen and collector of taxes With two exceeding.y strong figures, Irving H. Miron, who will battle for re-election and Alfred Bonneville, who is seeking the post, the outcome will not be known until after the counting of ballots. The fact that both parties have filed their ticket is certain to draw out all voters on election day. With Edward Girard and Edmund Dubois, democratic nominees for the board of selectman in the race to nose out Clarence E Pierce and William P. Warren, present incumbents, an interesting wind-up of the campaign is promised. On Saturday, September 21, the board of selectmen together with the city clerk will be in session to admit prospective voters to the electors' oath. Both parties have scored large gains on their voting lists but the republicans still retain a majority in voting strength.

Dr. K. T. Phillips of this city has received a fellowship in the American college of surgeons. Dr. Phillips is an assistant surgeon at the Day Kimball hospital.

Thomas Elliott, of Pomfret, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Elliott, is to return to his studies in Flint, Michigan, at the General Motors Tech.

JEWETT CITY

ENTIRE ASHLAND PLANT TO BE UTILIZED FOR RAYON

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Sept. 20.— Jewett City is soon to see, in the contemplated changes at the Ashland plant, a different order of manufacturing, which will involve the expenditure of a large amount of capital. The current issue of the Acco Smile, out today, published for the operatives of the Ashland Cotton Con., makes the following statement.

Shampoo and finger wave $1; marcel, 75c. Tel. 61-5. Maynard Blk.—adv.

COTTON MANUFACTURE TO BE DISCONTINUED AT ASHLAND

Frederick W. Thomas, vice president of the United Merchants & Manufacturers, Inc., visited the plant this week and is authority for the information which we now make public. Within a short time Ashland will cease to process or weave cotton and all machinery used for this purpose will be dismantled.

The plans are completed to utilize the entire five story brick mill as a rayon finishing plant, complete in every detail, including printing. The ground floor of the new mill recently completed will be used for additional looms. This floor will accommodate about 400 and possibly more looms.

The new plans will be rushed to completion and it will be but a comparatively short time before we will be doing the finishing here for three plants owned by the corporation. In the meantime of course it may mean a slack period for some of the help in the cotton division, but when the new installation is in operation it will mean that our number of operatives will be considerably increased.

TRAFFIC UNIFORMITY

Police chiefs of Connecticut have been having a session for the purpose of discussing certain traffic conditions with the idea of endeavoring to establish greater uniformity. Such an object is most commendable for it is time that there was an opportunity for the auto drivers of the state to go into the various cities and know what to expect from their various traffic signals.

It has been the practice in some cities to permit traffic to turn right at all times, even when the red signal is set. This has worked well on wide streets where there is a chance for a right traffic lane which can be kept moving at all times, but in narrow streets where the special lane is not possible it affords slight advantage and it was the verdict of the police chiefs that it should be abandoned in Connecticut.

It certainly makes an awkward situation for the driver who is accustomed to turning right on either green or red light to find that he is violating the regulations in another city and there is about as much embarrassment for the driver, in whose city there can be no such turns until he gets a green light, to hold up those behind him because he is not acquainted with a strange city's arrangement. With all cities turning on the red or all cities prohibiting such turns of that kind it would be possible to meet traffic requirements of that kind throughout the state without trouble.

The same thing is true in regard to other traffic requirements When there can be uniformity it will work to the advantage of communities and drivers alike. It simplifies the situation greatly and whatever does that is a manifest aid to traffic relief.

Perhaps there is less hope that there will be such a thing as uniformity in the placing of traffic lights and in the type of light, but that also would be of great assistance to those who go into cities with which they are not familiar. When a city has three or four different types of traffic lights and places them overhead, in the center of the street, on the corners or at some other unsuspected point it can hardly expect that the drivers of motor vehicles are going to find them and respect them. Uniformity would overcome any such puzzle, and there are other traffic problems that might be greatly simplified through a uniform arrangement.

THE NEW CURRENCY

Chiefly because there is a difference in size when some of the old bills and some of the new ones are placed together, has there been objection raised to the new currency. Could the change have been accomplished by withdrawing all of the old money and replacing it with the new there would probably have been little attention paid to it, since the matter of size would soon be forgotten.

But a congressional committee is engaged in hearing the complaints that have been registered. Perhaps the most severe criticism has come from a former head of the bureau of printing and engraving who could find nothing satisfactory about them. He regards it as the poorest and cheapest currency the government has put out and he claims that because of its size it is more easily counterfeited He recognizes that the smaller size will make it possible for the department to effect as large a saving as it anticipates but he regards that as of little value in view of what he brands the detrimental features

At this time notice has been broadcast to the effect that several of the denominations have been counterfeited. That in itself is no more than has happened with the old bills and, even though the former head of the engraving department included the danger from counterfeiters in his criticism, it is to be remembered we have had no currency that has been free from their operations. Concerning these counterfeit bills it is stated that they are poor representations of the real thing, so much so that those accustomed to handle money can easily distinguish the difference.

Probably it was inevitable that counterfeiters would get busy at this time with the change in currency, and with the public untrained in noting the distinguishing features of the government money. But why they difference in the size of the bill should have anything to do with aiding and abetting the counterfeiters hasn't been convincingly presented. If, of course, it is so it should be brought out before the committee that is engaged in making a study of the situation. In the meantime the fight against the makers of false money must go on unrelentlessly.

CROSSING SIGNALS

For the better protection of the highway users at railroad crossings, and to give them definite warning that a train is approaching an order has been issued by the utilities commission of the state of Ohio requiring railroad and electric lines to establish safety devices at all grade crossings which involve federal or state highways. This will mean that warnings will be furnished at about 700 of these crossings, all of which are outside of cities. As yet it has not been determined what type of device will be required or just how the expense will be borne.

With this as an opening move for greater safety at these points it is expected that it will be followed in time by the issuance of a similar order regarding the 6000 or more crossings which are not on federal or state highways, but where there is quite the same danger for a smaller number of highway users.

It is apparent to the utilities commission of Ohio that there is no immediate prospect that these 6700 crossings will be eliminated, not even on the federal and state highways .The commission takes the view that even though the highway users should be sufficiently interested in their own protection to stop, look and listen experience shows that many of them do not. The warning signs are not a sufficient method of protection.

Those who use crossings regularly become hardened to the danger. If they notice the sign they get the impression that there is no more need of being any more careful than they did at the previous crossing, which was negotiated without any regard for peril. Whether the safety devices which are to be erected will accomplish a reduction in the number of fatalities in a question, but there is always the probability that more respect would be shown to an automatic signal, operating when a train is approaching, than to a sign which gives no indication of the possible location of the locomotive.

Ohio is apparently in need of better protection than it has and it is only fair to highway users that there should be some adequate means of attracting the attention of those who may be about to cross a railroad track especially at an obscured point. Where eliminations might be unjustified the safety signals certainly would be.

REORGANIZING ENGINEER CORPS

General Jadwin has been succeeded as chief of the army engineer corps by Brigadier General Lytle Brown, picked from the list of available men because of what is believed his peculiar fitness for the office.

As the general who has been at the head of this department retires there is to be a reorganization, which has apparently been needed for some time, but which is especially needed now in view of the important projects which are faced by the government in which the army engineers will be expected to play an important part

This reorganization will be in accord with the views of the president and, in view of the fact that he is an engineer himself should be effective What is believed will prove a better arrangement will provide a particular engineer to have charge of every major project and to direct it from the scene of operations instead of from the office of the corps at Washington. This should result in the elimination of much confusion and uncertainty and increase the efficiency of the service.

At the present time the engineers corps is facing such tasks as the flood control work for the lower Mississippi, the flood control for the upper part of the big river and its branches and the St Lawrence waterway development. Not immediately but in time there may come the construction of the Nicaraguan canal.

With high grade engineers placed in charge of these several jobs, men who might be capable of being the head of the corps itself, it can be appreciated that operations should go along much more smoothly and satisfactorily. It is what must be regarded as a good business move. With such departments within the corps better results should be obtained.

RAILROAD CONSOLIDATION

All sorts of combinations have been suggested for the railroads of New England in connection with the idea of consolidation. There have been those which have linked up the New Haven with the Pennsylvania system, those which have put the Boston & Maine into a combination which would have a new eastern terminal and that which would merge all the New England roads into one system.

The latest plan, that put forward by President Loree of the Delaware & Hudson, would gather all the New England lines into a system that would include 16 roads in the eastern part of the country. Mr. Loree has advanced many ideas for the consolidation of railroads but thus far they have not materialized. There have been objections raised sufficient to block them but he has not become discouraged. Having been unsuccessful in one direction he has turned in another and proposes what would be a terminal for the whole Atlantic seaboard.

There will be time in which to study the advantages from Mr. Loree's standpoint of such an arrangement and to pick out the disadvantages from the viewpoint of the various lines which he proposes to merge. Already he has heard from the New Haven road that it is opposed to any such combination. That is only one of the roads but it is quite an important one and there is probably reflected in its attitude the feeling of the other New England lines.

Nevertheless Mr. Loree has had the satisfaction of working out a new arrangement which he believes would be advantageous. Like the others it will be entitled to consideration but the reaction of several of the roads concerned, some of which are included in other suggested combinations, doesn't give any real encouragement.

EDITORIAL NOTES

There are still those who are criticising the new money, ut it would be a strange thing if it satisfied everybody.

The man on the corner says: Is your coal supply going to stand the early strain?.

When they award those prizes for courtesy to New York policemen will they select motorists for judges?

Two persons were killed at a western crossing while racing an express train. Grade crossing dangers are mostly what you make them.

With the noise from the silo filler echoing through the country side there's no mistaking the season.

The outstanding fact in connection with New York's latest murder seems to be that the woman killed had been complaining to the police that it was going to happen and yet it wasn't prevented.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

What may be accomplished where there is a will to do is seen in a recent Sunday school lesson. Nehemiah with a band of ex-slaves had gained permission from the conqueror of Babylon to return to the Holy Land. They find the once prosperous Palestine in a sadly neglected condition from every point of view. It touches their religious and patriotic pride to see the temple and walls of the city in utter ruin. Now Nehemiah does a very modern thing in calling the rulers and chief men together and carefully consider the whole situation. When their deliberations end with enthusiasm and grim determination they say, "Let us rise up and build." Their chairs are pushed back and soon it is the reign of stone, mortar and trowels. Deliberation had fully given way to muscular action. As a matter of fact, under great handicaps, they succeed because such will power is seldom defeated.

The words just written are not intended to indicate that the rebuilding of the ruined walls was going to be an easy job. It simply indicated that back of their resolute purpose there was a dauntless purpose that was bound to be triumphant, but it had to meet scorn, hatred, envy, and bitter ridicule from the Sandballats and Tobiases who hang about the fringe of the great undertaking saying: "It can't be done!" "It's doomed sooner or later to fail!" This is quite common to great undertakings. When Robert Fulton applied steam to navigation, the Sandballats of youthful America said, "it can't be done!" When it was proposed to send the Savannah across the Atlantic, a learned man figured out that the amount of fuel necessary to do it would sink any vessel, but the Savannah crossed the ocean in spite of Tobias. Wherever you find a great undertaking that is something novel you will also find the cranks hanger with his "it can't be done!"

At this season of the year as the great army of children throughout the country have marched into the schoolroom, what in all human probability would happen if they should one and all be animated with the spirit of Nehemiah and his companions, saying "we will bone right down to the task that is set before us and keep at it until it is done?" What would happen would be nothing short of this: an impetus given to the cause of learning that would astonish the entire civilized world. Whether it be a bunch of earnest men in Jerusalem with one accord saying, "let us rise up and build" the fallen walls of Jerusalem and restore Palestine to its original glory, or a great crowd of boys and girls in the schoolrooms of America saying, "let us hang on to compound fractions and irregular verbs until we have mastered them, it would be in either case swinging wide open the door to victory. In another place Nehemiah said, "the people had a mind to work."

This attitude of Nehemiah and his co-workers in the rebuilding of Jerusalem also suggests another thing that is supremely important, and that was preparedness for any outward emergency. The story of Nehemiah shows us that all his workmen did not do just the same thing in handling stone and mortar. They had enemies lurking at their heels who wanted the work to fail: those outlying enemies who fattened on the misfortunes of the Jews. If there were many who plied the trowel there were others who gripped the sword. If there were many who worked there were also many who watched. Without watching there would not long be any working. While some worked others had to protect them. There were also spies sent out to give alarm if the enemy approached. They must not be taken by surprise. Workers, watchers and fighters were all necessary if the walls of the city are to be rebuilt. All working together made the work a success.

All must have been impressed by the length and breadth of Nehemiah's vision. It was not enough to rebuild the material walls of the fallen city. The material edifice likewise needed reconstruction from the foundation upward. It presented a more dismal sight than the overturned walls. The only thing that would keep their house of God from again being razed to the ground would be to have His law again engraved upon their hearts. Hence when Solomon's great edifice once more lifted up its massive walls toward heaven, it would be massive only as the voice of prayer and song once more reached the ear of Him who once said, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." That is if thou dost never again leave me and my precepts. With such a spirit as Nehemiah manifested, it is not strange that Israel again was made "to lie down in green pastures." The people rejoiced when the law was once more read and expounded to them by the priests.

When some disappointed and gloomy spirit harkes back to "the good old times" for the purpose of drawing an unfavorable contrast with the present, he is not likely to do justice to what the present is doing. Take as an illustration that almost impossible ask that is under consideration known as the Boulder dam, which is a great deal more than an economic problem. It is all that, plus a great humanitarian proposition. It will forever control the flow of the Colorado river which at times threatens human life and property with its torrents at some times, and at others with its scarcity. Think of constructing a concrete dam connecting two mountains 700 feet high, creating a lake in a gorge that will be 100 miles long and 600 feet deep, preventing floods and storing water for drinking, irrigation and power."

Do we not admire men who have glowing visions of the future of humanity even if they seem at present somewhat visionary? The world has been blest with philosophers, scientists and historians, whose business has been to deal with facts; to give to thoughts and deeds just as they have been revealed. But are we not also under great obligation to the dreamers who have seen things in fancy which were afterwards translated into reality? Poets and novelists are needed just as much as historians and philosophers. Sometimes the dreams of statesmen, lauched at for the time being as fvisionary, subsequently become reality. This is particularly true along the line of invention. When children we used to laugh over the exploit of "Darius Green and His Flying Machine." When the Wright brothers were attempting to make real the same principle they had to suffer ridicule. But recently nobody laughed or scorned when Eckener circumnavigated the globe by air.

Something that illustrates the above has recently happened at the conference of diplomats at Geneva that have caused slurs and made some of the ultra-wise editors and politicians laugh. I refer to a suggestion made by the brilliant Aristide Briand, one of the master minds of the political world today. While some are laughing at the suggestion, there is a far greater number who are looking at his suggestion with some degree of intelligence, and see in it something far beyond a mere political question. It is fundamentally a question of vast moral possibilities. Briand's proposition was this: "Why not a United States of Europe?" The brain that first suggested what eventuated in the Kellogg peace pact was here thinking in terms of continents (as was once said of Cecil Rhodes) Briand was looking at something than a great economic idea.

DINNER BY THE BOOK

"Now, the thing above all that you must not forget," said Mary Lavery, with great emphasis on the "must," is to serve me first. The hostess is always served first."

Dan was trying hard to be patient. He had listened to all his wife's instructions with the best of grace, he had rehearsed the serving and serving without a murmur, but now he rebelled.

"I don't believe it," he snorted. "It seems impolite to serve your wife before you serve your guests."

"I don't care how it seems to you" Mary retorted, "It's correct, and that's the way you're going to do it. I'm not going to go to all the work of getting up a dinner for your boss and his wife, and then have you ruin it by making some break in etiquette."

"But why is it right?" persisted Dan. "Can you give me one single reason why the guests should sit and wait while I serve you?"

"Why is any etiquette right?" countered Mary. "I don't know. Whatever the reason, that's the rule. Didn't I look it up in the book?"

Dan was forced to capitulate. He was just as eager as Mary that this important dinner should be a success. He stood in considerable awe of Mr. Arling, his employer, and in still greater awe of Mrs. Arling, who was at least a small somebody in society. He realized that his business future might depend upon the impressions made tonight.

Mary gave a last glance at her snowy table and hurried to the kitchen for another look at the roast. How she hoped everything would be good! If Dan would only remember things, and if he just didn't reveal too blatantly his lack of experience at carving. In a family of two a man didn't get much practice in carving big roasts, and Dan was a total stranger to the art. But she must hope for the best.

The door bell rang. She whisked off her apron and joined Dan as he greeted Mr. and Mrs. Arling. Perhaps it was only Mary's imagination, but to her Mr. Arling seemed quite stiff and cool And when she had excused herself and returned to the kitchen for the final touches to the dinner she heard Dan making desperate attempts to hold up a conversation that was patently lagging. It was with a sinking heart that she called her guests to the table.

There was a grim do-or-die expression about Dan's mouth as he grasped the carving knife and attacked the roast. Mary breathed more easily as she saw him slice off the crisp, brown end piece and lift it deftly to a plate. As he passed the plate to her, he said, "For you, Mary," and somehow she felt that the words had been wrung from him very much against his will.

Mary felt better when this crisis was past, but she happened to look up and found Mr. Arling regarding her with a most curious expression on his face. Mary's heart leaped to her throat. Had they committed a terrible error? In a panicky flash she saw that Mrs. Arling also was looking uncomfortable, while Mr. Aling continued to gaze at her steadily. Finally he spoke.

"Mrs. Lavery," he said, "I see you have a very considerate husband. He certainly treats you well." Mary's heart crashed to her shoes, and her eyes had the hot feeling that presages the coming of tears.

And then Mrs. Arling, with an embarrassed little laugh, cried to her husband, "Oh, John, you're terrible!" She turned to Mary, and went on in a tone of apology: "I can't do anything with this man. He's just a regular child. And I guess I might as well tell you that he'll never be happy unless he gets the end piece of roast. He simply loves it. Would you mind awfully letting him have yours?"

Mary saw that Mrs. Arling was looking at her with an expression of wistful appeal. Laughing delightedly, she passed her plate to him, whereupon he emitted an "Ah!" of great satisfaction. The tension was broken. Conversation started with a rush. Dan finished the carving like a master, and the final touch of informity came when Mr. Arling ostentatiously removed his folded napkin from his lap and tucked it into his vest pockets.

"Now I feel better," he said smilingly. "And I won't have to send this suit to the cleaner tomorrow."

The dinner was a huge success, as was the bridge game that followed it. Mr. Arling removed his coat and played in his shirt sleeves, meanwhile puffing on a most homely pipe. And when he and Mrs. Arling finally took their reluctant departure Mrs. Arling whispered to Mary, "I don't know when I've seen John have such a good time. He hates anything stiff and formal."

After they had gone, Mary turned to her husband with a sigh of relief. But Dan was acting most strangely. He had dropped into a chair and was laughing riotously. And Mary would almost have sworn that he was laughing at her!—Chicago News.

A YANKEE ABROAD

By DEWITT MacKENZIE

Europe Has Its Gigolos.

LONDON, Sept. 20—Here in Europe is an interesting class of exotics who, for want of better classification, are assigned a place in the ranks of human males.

The best designation that science thus far has been able to produce for these fellows is "gigolo."

Theoretically, a gigolo is a chap who makes a living by frequenting tea ansants—when husbands are at work—and night clubs, and hiring himself out to dance with the girls Practically, he gets the most of his income from wealthy dowager ladies who are old enough to know better, but not old enough to have lost the thrill involved in having a young man kiss their hands and murmur sweet nothings.

The gigolo is to mankind what the Mexican hairless pup is to the canine world. Each is at his best on a satin cushion, but is a deuce of a nuisance about the house, and his airing in the park, night and morning, is not without its embarrassments.

The gigolo obviously must be young. Forty gray hairs and embonpoint ruin his style.

He wears his clothes beautifully. He has a waist-line, and the ample draperies of his nether limbs, much pleated and flaring from the belt, fall gracefully over his small feet. His carefully curled and nicely oiled hair is brushed straight back, walrus fashion.

His eyelashes are blacked, and maybe he uses a tiny bit of rouge. Always powder. He stands with his tummy caved in, and his well manicured hands droop at right angles from his wrist, disclosing to advantage the gold bracelet which he wears.

Most of the great cities of Europe have their gigolos. Women can gain their attention with money.

The gigolo's really remunerative work is done in the afternoon. His place of business is the tea dansant, where congregate the plump dowagers, and the slim young things whose husbands are busy earning more money for gowns.

The gigolo never fools about with unmarried girls. They are too dangerous and unprofitable. He concentrates on the dowagers, for while his artistic soul would much prefer the slim young things, the dowagers have the money.

The gigolo drinks tea with his dowager—and how those boys can drink tea! He is Chesterfieldian in his attentions to her. He looks at her with burning eyes, and he breathes words of love into her ear. He will even drag her 185-pound stout form about the floor in a so-called dance, and all the time maintain a smile of adoration. He is an artist.

In exchange, the dowager pays his bills. And she really doesn't worry him very much. She waddles off home when the cool of the evening arrives, to doctor up her asthma and get her beauty sleep.

It is at night that the gigolo gets his recreation—and at the same time adds to his coffer. He slips away to his night club, where he is seated at his private table.

With that entrancing sheikishness which only the gigolo possesses, he selects a cigaret from his gold case (a present from the dowager), and conjures a delicate ring of smoke. Then he views the assembly from beneath lowered lashes—and the game is on.

He generally gets several commissions to dance with beautiful wives, for let no mere husband think he can slip over the floor as can the gigolo. And while the gigolo dances he does a bit for his poor starved heart—if he can get away with it.

It isn't really good business, of course, to make dates of this sort, but even a gigolo must have his love affairs. He is pretty safe, too, because he is discreet. He is not one of those fools who writes notes and use the home telephone.

Sunday Morning Talk

The Discipline of Difficulties.

Take it for instance, in the matter of temptation. Do you ever think of your temptations as blessings? And yet they are. At least they may become blessings. It is an inspired apostle who writes: "Count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations." Do you count it so? Again: "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation." Do you esteem temptation as a part of your blessedness? And yet what would you be without temptations? Men talk about the mystery of God's ever having permitted evil to enter the world. It is a mystery. And yet may not its presence result in blessing? Valueless is the character that knows no testing, and insipid is the happiness that has in it nothing of the joy of overcoming. The question in life is not so much how to escape temptation as how to pass through it so as not to be harmed by it but to be made stronger and better fitted to face other temptations. Near my home is a large oak tree which stands high on the hill where it receives every wind that blows. That tree has never been harmed by the most severe wind, but is simply made stronger and takes deeper root. A short distance below this were several trees in a more sheltered position. A few years ago we had a more severe wind than usual. The trees in the sheltered location were blown up by the roots, while the oak which received the full blast of the wind was not harmed, not losing one branch.

The same principle holds good in regard to all the responsibilities of life. We learn to walk by walking; we learn to write by writing; we learn to work by working; and we learn to bear responsibilities by bearing responsibility.

No devout Christian worker ever began any service for God feeling strong and self-reliant and self-sufficient. He always faces the effort in conscious weakness and fear and much trembling. But it is as he goes on to do his duty that God's grace and cheer come to him and he becomes strong and capable and successful as a worker.

Trial and affliction work their good results in the same way. Many of the sweetest joys of Christian hearts are songs which they have learned in the bitterness of trial.

We all need to learn this lesson from the disciplines of life. They are intended not to hinder, but to help us; not to cast us down, but to lift us up. "I never saw until I was blind," exclaimed a man who had neglected spiritual things until his affliction came upon him. Many a man never found himself until he lost his all. Adversity stripped him only to discover him. He was impoverished only to be made rich. Many a man has been ruined into salvation. The lightning which smote his dearest hopes opened up a new rift in his dark life beyond his former hopes. How sad that we do not give our hearts to Him without these experiences. But we all know how true it is that we will not.

Stories That Recall Others

Autumn.

Eleven year old Jimmie's sense of humor is just budding, and at times shows rapid growth, as when driving through the country last week he saw the many roadside stands of vegetables including an occasional watermelon and cantaloupe, and said: "I know now why they say "The melon colic days have come, the saddest of the year."

Which Was Whose?

To Martha and Minnie, 16 year old twins, the question of getting themselves mixed up seemed ridiculous. However, a recent incident astonished the twins themselves.

They were sitting at the supper table, side by side as usual. Unexpectedly Martha turned toward Minnie and asked, "What do you want?"

"Nothing, why?" Minnie replied.

"You rubbed my knee and I thought you wanted something."

"I rubbed your knee? Why, I was scratching my mosquito bite!"

He—Darling, don't tell anybody we are engaged just yet.

She—Only Lily. She always said I should never find a fool to marry me. —Der Lustige Sachse, Leipsic.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20—Somebody on the senate naval committee named to investigate the Shearer-shipbuilder activities during the Geneva naval conference, seems to think that W. B. Shearer and his associates might be chargeable with treason.

If you look up "treason" in the law books, you are compelled to wonder how he gets that way.

Even a layman must have the general notion that treason is confined to efforts to break down the government's war making powers in favor of an enemy. Just how it might be possible to bring treason charges when efforts were directed to forcing the government to increase its naval strength it is difficult to see.

Turning to the "annotated" constitution of the United States prepared and published in 1924 by George Gordon Payne under the direction of Senators Charles Curtis and Frank B Brandegee, chairmen respectively of the committee on rules and the judiciary, you find this to be the constitutional provision—and treason is a constitutional, not a statutory offense:

"Treason against the United States, shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid or comfort."

Constitution is Specific.

Summarizing the effect if cited supreme court decisions constructing this clause, Mr. Payne says:

"No other facts than those defined in the constitution can be declared to constitute the offense (of treason). Congress can neither extend, nor restrict, nor define the crime. Its power over the subject is limited to prescribing the punishment."

And there you are. Now who among the trio of senators sitting on the Shearer investigating committee might have had that treason notion?

Two of them, Shortridge of California, chairman, and Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic leader, are rather noted lawyers. They are classed among the senate's group of constitutional experts as a rule.

The third member is Senator Allen of Kansas, holding down the seat so long ornamented by Vice President Curtis.

Is it possible that Mr. Allen is the source of the treason suggestion?

Allen Hoover Ally.

Allen's brief senate career already has had rather striking aspects. He figured in the news as a sort of Hoover spokesman during the farm bill fight, although it was never clear whether it was a voluntary spokesmanship.

Because of that, however, Allen's appointment to the Shearer investigating committee was coupled up by some commentators with President Hoover's special interest in and relation to the Shearer matter. There was speculation as to whether the Kansan sat as in a way presidential spokesman on the sub committee. Nobody claimed to know.

Newspaper Washington also awaited with interest Allen's entry into the tariff debate. It was figured he might prove to be a Hoover spokesman on that, or rather, those issues. But clearly the treason suggestion as to the Shearer matter seemed a little far fetched to be of white house origin, whoever put it forward.

BY ALICE ADAMS PROCTOR

HAVE you tasted this new-style toast, and learned of the changes Wonder Bread has made?

One loaf will give you a new conception of what perfect toast you can get.

At last your toast can be an even, golden brown. Rarely a burned edge. Faultless toast, and you get it every time.

Now 10,000,000 homes are serving such toast daily. 10,000,000 women have said goodbye to old-time breads. And husbands, the sternest critics of toast in the world, are discovering a new delight of breakfast.

Cost Us $6,000,000

Wonder Bread, you will find, is utterly different from any other bread you have ever tried before. We spent two years in its development. It cost us $6,000,000. Today it is the largest selling bread in America.

It is baked by expert bakers working in immaculate model kitchens. They use only tested ingredients. Specially milled "short patent" flour. Double the amount of milk.

Also, we employ a unique baking method. "Slo-baking." It brings you greater digestibility. Longer-lasting freshness.

When will you order your first loaf? Today? Your grocer has it fresh each day.

The tour abounded with sweet surprises and not even a change of automobile tire was necessary during the 2,000 miles of travel.

EIGHTH STREET FLAGMAN HEARING PUT FORWARD TO OCTOBER DATE

First Selectman William S. Murray and Town Counsel H. H. Pettis represented the town and Corporation Counsel E. W. Perkins appeared for the city in Hartford Friday before the public utilities commission at the hearing on the petition of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company to make a change at the Eighth street crossing in this city by replacing the flagman at this grade crossing by an electric signal.

The railroad presented its case first. The attorney for the road called on Division Superintendent Smith and Mr. Morrison, an employe in the track department of the road. Through their testimony it was shown that the claim of the railroad is that the flash signal system would give better and safer protection to traffic at the crossing than is given by a flagman. The signals that it is proposed to install would be operated by contact when a train was approaching the crossing.

Town Counsel Pettis gave the two railroad men a cross-examination and was followed by Selectman Murray, who voiced to the utilities commissioners the objection of the town authorities of Norwich to the proposed change on the ground that the flash signal system would not be as safe for the protection of pedestrians and other traffic at the crossing as the present flagman.

Corporation Counsel Perkins then spoke for the city of Norwich, saying that the city was an interested party in this situation, but it had received no official notice of the proposed change and he objected to any decision being reached before the common council of the city had had an opportunity to look over the situation and reach an opinion on the matter.

Mr. Perkins asked for a continuance so that the common council might make an investigation and the public utilities board acceded to his request by continuing the hearing to Oct. 10. The hearing adjourned after being in session nearly two hours.

PROGRAMME FOR SEASON BY WOMAN'S CITY CLUB

The third season of the Woman's City club of Norwich, Mrs. Charles Breed Gilbert president, promises to offer to its members the wonderful variety of information and entertainment given during its first two splendid season.

The first big meeting is in charge of the art department, Mrs. Ozias Dodge chairman, and well be held in Slater hall early next month. This is a lecture on "Dress as Modern Art" and is to be illustrated by living models. Mrs. Dodge has secured Mrs. Helen Goodrich Buttrick of Chicago university to tell the club women how to make themselves a real artistic asset to the home and the community.

October furnishes another evening of unusual interest. This is an illustrated lecture under the caption, "With Lawrence in Arabia and Allenby in Palestine" and by the romantic world traveler, Howell Thomas. Mr. Thomas was the only American observer with Lawrence in Arabia; he spent two years in India and forbidden Afganistan; he was with the Prince of Wales on the latter's last tiger hunt; he was the official historian of the first airplane flight around the world.

Beginning in October is the greatly anticipated course on current events. Mrs. Ronald R. Nelson, chairman of the committee, has again secured Mrs. Marion Gaylord Atwell of New York city and just returned from European travel as the lecture. Mrs. Atwell has won many friends and admirers during the two seasons she has already been here. She is engaged to give seven lectures.

The popular class in parliamentary law, Mrs. William H. Dawley chairman, begins the middle of October, is listed for seven meetings, and is under the able leadership of Judge A. F. Libby, presenting most valuable opportunity for the responsible woman.

Of the round tables, the music department, Miss Suck chairman, gives its usual appealing monthly appointments. The subject for the year is "A Course in Music Understanding." Current events in the world of music will be given on each of the seven evenings. This department graciously furnishes a soloist for the club night of each month, and its annual treat will come as an operatta in March.

Miss Louise C. Howe, chairman of the literature department, has arranged for a course of six lectures on Contemporary European literature to be given by Miss Carola Leonie Ernest, Professor of French at Connecticut college. These begin in October. Later in the season are three round tables on the fascinating local topic of Literary Norwich. This department offers on its club night a lecture on "Thomas Hardy" by Gale Noyes, one of Norwich's accomplished sons, now a teacher of English at Harvard university.

The dramatic department, Mrs. Willis Austin chairman, promises a presentation of "Sleeping Beauty" for the children during the holidays.

The civics department, Miss Elizabeth B. Huntington chairman, appeals to varied interests. A discussion led by Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman on "What is a City?"; an evening on Sanitation with W. J. Scott, state director of the Sanitary Engineering bureau an April meeting on parks and trees; an hour with Miss Rusell, home demonstration agent of New London county; and a presentation on Americanism by Dr. Caroline Hedger from the Elizabeth Mac Cormick Foundation of Chicago. This department also offers a most up to date series of round tables for the child study group, Mrs. Edwin V. Ross chairman. Mother, grandmothers, teachers can not fail to be interested in the very first activity of the club. On Tuesday Sept. 24, at 4 p. m. in the club room, Miss Lester Crutcher will speak on "Fit your child for Living." Miss Crutcher, executive secretary of the Connecticut Society for Mental Higgiene, has been in Norwich many times is always gratefully welcomed. Among other topics for these round tables are "New Ideas About Obedience," Our Children's Food." "This Business of Being a Mother." This department also puts on an evening program in November when Mrs. Grafton Abbott will speak on "Present Day Parenthood."

Other interesting appointments to be anticipated are an exhibition in January sponsored by the art department, a tulip show, and a dramatic tea in May.

An attractively arranged club room situated at the head of the main stairway of the Wauregan hotel is for the use of the club members individually, a resting plac while shopping or a quiet diversion from a busy household, or a crowded office as well as a central meeting place for committees and round tables The excellence and comfort of this room will be maintained under the chairmanship of Mrs. Bruce F. Rogus.

The women of Norwich are indeed fortunate to have at their command the friendships as well as the entertaining and illiminating contacts made possible by the united efforts of the five and six hundred women of the Woman's City club.

At Cetral Baptist Church.

"Religion And Health" will be the pastor's topic at the Central Baptist church on Sunday evening. This will be preceded by a community sing of gospel hymns led by the choir and a large chorus. This will be in preparation for the coming of Miss Rosa Belle Temple of Boston on rally day, Sept. 29, who will conduct a community sing both at the church school hour and at the evening service.

At the morning service on Sunday Dr. Pitt will continue the series on Jesus and Prayer. The special topic on Sunday will be "The Content of Prayer."

For St. Mathew's Day

At Grace Episcopal church, Yantic, there will be a celebration of the holy communion at 10:30 a. m. Saturday, Sept. 21st, being St. Mathew's day.

FUNERAL OF ANGUS PARK AT HANOVER CHURCH

Hundreds of persons paid final tribute Friday afternoon to the late Angus Park of Hanover, whose funeral was held at 2:30 o'clock at the Hanover Congregational church. Between the hours of 1 and 3 o'clock business was at a standstill in Baltic and Hanover as a mark of respect to Mr. Park, widely known woolen mill owner, bank official and public benefactor. The Hanover schools were closed as were The Bankers Trust Co., of this city, Danielson Trust Co., Angus Park Manufacturing Co., East Glastonbury and Assawaga Co., of Dayville.

Prior to the funeral services the body lay in state from 1 to 2 o'clock at the church and was viewed by a large number of mourners. The services at 2:30 o'clock were conducted by Rev. Dwight C. Stone, pastor of the church, and two former pastors, Rev. Charles H. Peck of Broadbrook and Rev. Herbert Duncan Rollason of Middletown. Miss Jennie Gallup was at the organ. Rev. Mr. Stone offered the prayer and read the scripture selection and the eulogy was given by Rev. Mr. Peck, who said the prayer of general thanksgiving and was an apt expression of common appreciation of "our departed friend." Continuing he said:

Were he here, we know he would desire no extended eulogy. It is not needed. His continued presence in active life for nearly one-half of his three score and ten years in our state of Connecticut, has drawn forth appropriate expressions of esteem in our public press. He is worthy of them.

What he accomplished during the past thirty years of residence in this quiet village of Hanover is evident in the signs of prosperity, amid its homes, its mill buildings and church equipments and roadways. Here is a pleasing memorial.

The hour and place, however, permit this company of three recent pastors of the church, where we meet, to express our personal thanksgiving of what he has been as a loyal friend and disciple of our Master, Jesus Christ.

We are grateful for that measure of joyous life, expressed in his loyal support of the church activities, especially in his love of music, inherited from his Scotch love of song.

In his East Lyme residence he enjoyed the personal conduct of village and town music assemblies, he played the organ, conducted the music programs at times of local church conference in this village, and supported heartily such recreations.

These are mentioned as one element to his noted ability to meet the other demands upon him, educational and social and political affairs.

Still more true to his interest was his spirit of industrial and financial integrity. What he showed in his unselfish rescue of the interest in the bank history of neighboring Norwich was a part of his unostentatious benevolence in his neighborliness at home.

I have seen him knocking at the door of one of the humblest homes at early morning to express his personal sympathy and interest in his old time employe.

One of his mill employes for more than thirty years speaks of his willingness to take counsel even in his business management, and graciously recognize his indebtedness.

More than all, in this hour of almost entire private fellowship, our hearts are refreshed by our knowledge of his clearness of faith and quiet assurance of immortality. He thought of it and spoke of it, as one observer has said. He practiced immortality.

With mind clear and interest in all affairs unabated, while he, and we all knew that for many weeks, his spirit seem to flutter on the threshold of transition. It was only three short days ago awake, surrounded by his friends, in the presence of his wife, after 49 years of companionship, with look upward, he entered in a moment to the Silent Land, "an entrance ministered abundantly into the everlasting Kingdom of Our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ." II Pet 1:11.

Mr. Peck closed with a quotation from the two stanzas of the hymn:

It sinketh low in every heart
We hear it each and all.
More homelike seems the vast unknown,
Since they have entered there
They cannot be where God is not,
On any sea or shore,
Whate're betides Thy love abides
Our God, for ever more.

The closing prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Rollason. Burial was in Hanover cemetery where Rev. Mr. Stone, conducted the committal service.

The honorary bearers were State's Attorney Arthur M. Brown, John Porteous, ex-Mayor Timothy C. Murphy, William C. Spring of New York, Frazier O'Leary of Boston, William W. and Arthur G. Gordon of Hazardville, M. H. Donahoe of Baltic, Frederick Beckwith, William H. Oat, John R. Tarrant, treasurer of the Bankers Trust Co., James Kemp, superintendent of the Angus Park Manufacturing Co., at East Glastonbury, Frank H. Doyle, superintendent of the Airlie mills, Hanover, and Alex Nicholson, superintendent of the Assawaga Co., Dayville.

The active bearers were Frederick A. Eadie of Hanover, Angus C. and Raymond Park of Stafford and Harold C. Mountain of Dexter, Me., nephews of the deceased, George H. Bathgate of New London and Frederick A. Gauthier, Frederick W. Lebourveau and Jeremiah Delaney, all of Hanover. At the church Lawrence Drescher and John H. Ferguson, members of Columbian Commandery No. 4, K. T., officiated as ushers.

The many mourners included delegations from the Airlie, Assawaga, and Angus Park mills, the Bankers Trust Co., Danielson Trust Co. and Norwich Lodge of Elks, No. 430. Although not officially represented, the several Masonic bodies, with which Mr. Park was affiliated, had good sized representations at the services. The members of the Elks delegation were: James P. Egan, Nelson J. Ayling, Charles W. Cassidy, James Osten, John Cunningham, John Paradis, and Thomas M. Shields. The Geiger and Spring Co., of New York, distributors for the Park mills, were represented at the services by Herman R. Geiger, H. Reeve Stockton, C. R. Waterhouse, W. C. Spring and C. P. Rullman.

VELVETMEN PLAY ALL-BOSTON TEAM AT MARTIN DIAMOND ON SUNDAY

J. B. Martin meets one of the strongest opponents yet to appear on the schedule Sunday afternoon when the fast Boston Twilight All Stars oppose the Velvetmen at the J. B. Martin grounds. The Boston club is made up of stars of this league and is rated as the fastest and one of the best now operating in New England as its lineup includes some of the most prominent players operating in semi-pro ball.

Manager Trusselle of the Stars is bringing this strong outfit to the J. B. Martin grounds in an effort to chalk another defeat on the Velvetmen's slate. Included in the lineup of the Boston club is Chapman, the catching ace, who is an old leaguer having seen service in New York State league. Buz Andrews will perform on the mound. This lad has been the big ace in twilight ball as well as playing in the Western association. This battery has won many games this season in the twilight league. Hughie Canavan will be seen at first. Little needs to be said in regards to the ability of this lad as he has been seen in action in this vicinity before. The remainder of the team is made up of Boston league players, which is enough to say that they are top-notch ball players for the Boston Twilight league was the fastest semi-pro circuit operating in Massachusetts this year.

Manager Erlbeck has made a slight change in the lineup for tomorrow's game. Russ Fisher will be back to don a Martin uniform and will get the pitching assignment. Lefty Dugas, who filled in this position very well for the past few games, will be shifted to the center garden position, which has been one of the weak spots of the club. Middy Dugas has also been signed to cover first. As the team will lineup Sunday the Velvetmen present the strongest lineup of the season. The game is slated for 3:15 o'clock. Merig and Simcox will officiate. The lineups follow:

KILLINGLY SWAMPED BY HEAVIER BARTLETT TEAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

WEBSTER, Mass., Sept. 20—With only a week and a half to get into shape Killingly's light eleven, averaging 115 pounds, met with Bartlett's 175 pound team here this afternoon and was defeated 38 to 7. Killingly's line could not hold back the crushing power of the Bartlett backs who found plenty of holes in the tackle and guard positions. Bengryn, Raciecf and Cragan were Bartlett's yard gainers, gaining about 50 to 75 yards. Raciecf made two touchdowns, Bengryn two, one on a 30-yard run after intercepting a forward pass. Canavan and Cragan made one each, and also contributed two points after the touchdown.

Killingly's line plunging end runs had very little effect on Webster's line but with their forward passes they gained a total of 120 yards, completing five of seven passes. Young for Killingly scored all of the seven points with a touchdown and goal afterward. His offensive and defensive work was better than that of any man on the team. Teddy Anderson, Killingly's 85 pound halfback, did some very neat tackling bringing to earth Bartlett's heavyweights more than once. Capt. Knight and Fritz Arnold did well on the defensive holding Bengryn and Raciecf.

"TUFFY" GRIFFITH KAYOS COOK IN FOURTH

CHICAGO, Sept. 20—(AP)—Jerry "Tuffy" Griffith, sensational Sioux City, Iowa, welter, chalked up his sixth victory as a heavyweight tonight by stopping George Cook, Australian trial horse, in the fourth found of their schedule ten round bout at the Chicago stadium.

ADD GRIFFITHS KAYOES Miff.

Griffith won on a technical knockout when a towel came fluttering into the ring after Cook had been floored twice in the fourth and once in the third. Griffith fought with tigerish viciousness. He tore after the Australian at the start, clipping him with rights and lefts to the chin.

In the third, Griffith drove four short rights to the chin, and a left hook knocked Cook sprawling for a count of nine. He weathered the round only to run into another barrage in the fourth. A left and right to the chin floored him and a left hook to the jaw again dropped him. Cook was in no condition to continue and his seconds ended it. Griffith weighed 182 pounds. Cook 190.

Al Fay, the Jack Kearns coached heavyweight of Pittsburgh, won the decision over Al Friedman of Boston, in ten rounds w ith the crowd booing the decision. Fay had too much boxing skill for the Bostonian. He connected frequently with right uppercuts in displaying a wicked attack. Fay weighed 189; Friedman 184.

Yale Has First Scrimmage

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 20—(AP)—The first real scrimmage of the season, bringing to a close the first week of practice, this afternoon, revealed Yale's varsity team as a strong defensive aggregation. Lasting 40 minutes, the scrimmage resulted in a 15 to 0 victory for the first team over the scrubs.

Booth, captain of last year's freshman team, who weighs only 144 pounds, held the spotlight during the scrimmage. He scored a touchdown and contributed a point after touchdown to the varsity score. Cruikshank crossed the goal line for six more points, while a safety accounted for the remaining two points.

In class B, division II, first place was won by "Cute Craft Herself," Al Buffington, Fall River, driver, 14:16; second place, "Ironin' Board," Carl Mason, Bristol, driver, 14:37, and third place, "Baby Whale," Marshall H. Eldredge, Boston, driver, 15:13.

In the outboard runabout family race, "Baby Whale," with Ted Rogers, of Middletown, driving, took first place in 17:21; "Mangler," with Russell Stearns, Worcester, driver, won second place in 17:22, and "Toodeloo," with D. A. Haskins, Boston, driving, third place, 17:24.

Class C unlimited: "Defy IV", J. H. Ladew, Jr., New York city, first place, 13:47; "Zip II", William C. Shanz, Lake Hopatcong, N. J., driver, second, 14:03, and "Miss Glen Cove," John H. Gregory, Glen Cove, L. I., driver, third, 14:12.

Gov. John H. Trumbull of Connecticut, rode with Frank Blaney, of Boston, in an unnamed boat which took fourth place in the runabout. Miss Mildred Camp, of Middletown, was another passenger in the Blaney boat.

E. Kent Hubbard, of Middletown, president of the Connecticut Manufacturers' association, and his daughter, Mildred, were passengers in "Flash," driven by Jacob Dunnell, of Philadelphia, which took fifth place in the same race.

There were five spills, but none serious.

And now comes the delightful fall weather and our thoughts turn to football.

Ah, there's an exhilirating sport for you. It's the season of black eyes, busted ankles, sore backs and twisted arms. Yes, it's the season of brute strength and raccoon coats.

And now begins the fight for those coveted bits of pasteboard known as ducats for the big games. Remember how last year you displayed two of these bits of paper that represented ten big smackers with gloating pride?

If you had two tickets for the "big game" you thought you was the berries. And then you'd go to the game and find yourself perched on the top tier at the south end of the bowl.

You might have been in the middle of Long Island sound for all you saw of the game. But you had the satisfaction of being able to say that you'd been there.

You probably froze nearly stiff, yet you'd have cut off your right arm rather than admit that you'd rather be home beside the radio. Probably those who stayed home and heard the radio knew more about the game than you did.

But it's that thrill, the contagious magnetism of the football crowds that gets you. And you'll spend good money just to push your way through one of those crowds into the big arena.

Yes, the old fall weather just starts the old blood tingling through your veins and when the referee's whistle blows in a week or two you'll be parked in a seat in the stadium, I'll bet my bottom dollar.

And remember how last year you swore that you'd never take the wife or the girl friend to another football game? Remember the fool questions she asked you and how everybody laughed?

Remember how embarrassed you were and how you vowed that that was the last time you'd go to a football game? Well, you'll be there and so will she. You'd feel lonesome without her, and you know it.

Am I right?

PITTSBURGH TAKE TIGHTER GRIP ON SECOND PLACE

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 20 (AP)—Pittsburgh defeated Boston 10 to 3 thereby giving the Pirates a tighter grip on second place in the senior circuit.

Peery, who started for the Braves, was forced from the game in the sixth when a batted ball badly injured his left hand. Touchstone, Providence rookie finished.

Pittsburgh put the game on ice in the sixth, scoring six runs with the aid of Lloyd Waner, who hit for the circuit with two on. Bell batted out a homer for Boston. The score:

SIMMONS AND FOXX DROP IN "BIG SIX" CHASE

By The Associated Press)

The big six provided very little meat for the statisticians yesterday with the weather and the schedule keeping all but two out of action. Philadelphia's pair, Al Simmons and Jimmy Foxx were the only ones to play and both lost ground in the batting averages. Simmons went to bat four times without getting a hit before he left the game while Foxx made three tries to get his first safe blow in a week. Simmons lost two percentage points, dropping to .366, but he held his league leadership. Foxx lost one counter. The standing:

COLLEGE FOOTBALL OPENS TODAY WITH GAMES ON MANY GRIDIRONS

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—(AP)—From Kingston, R. I., to Palo Alto, Calif., from Covallis, Ore., to Clemson, S. C., football caravans will hit the trail tomorrow. The rush to arms will be scattering in this first autumn weekend with summer lingering in the air, but not all of the major elevens which go into action tomorrow are certain of avoiding defeat in their first 1929 effort.

West Virginia will face West Virginia Wesleyan at Morgantown, in the outstanding eastern game with vivid memory of a bruising battle early last season, when Ira Rodgers' squad just won by 12 to 0 Lining up against the west coast army eleven at Palo Alto in the chief engagement on the other side of the Rockies, Stanford similarly will recall an early 1928 contest which the Cardinal took by 21 to 8, in a keen fight.

In the east, Rhode Island, Drexel, Duquesne and Wanesburg, will open with practice contests, but Alfred and Clarkson, will meet at Potsdam, N. Y., in a game affecting the championship of up-state New York.

With eight games scheduled, the south will witness two contests technically of championship calibre, both in South Carolina. Erskine will play Furman at Greenville and Newberry will visit Clemson for games which figure to give Furman and Clemson a winning start in the state championship battle. The Erskine-Furman meeting also will count in the standing of the southern intercollegiate athletic association.

In addition to Clemson, the southern conference will send Virginia Military into action with Hamden-Sidney arrayed in opposition.

Night football in the south will get its 1929 start in Transylvania's game against Cedarville, of Ohio, at Lexington, Ky., and in the clash at New Orleans between St. Edwards of Texas and Loyola, of Louisiana.

Two southwest conference elevens will defy Texas heat for an early start tomorrow. Denton Normal will warm up Southern Methodist at Dallas, and Stephen F. Austin Normal, will oppose Baylor in Waco.

Rocky Mountain elevens await next Saturday, but two other Pacific coast conference teams will join Stanford in making a start.

Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Dartmouth, Pennsylvania, Cornell, Columbia and other big elevens in the east, and western conference members and Notre Dame in the middle west await next Saturday or the one afterward for their opening games.

DONOHUE SATISFIED WITH CONDITION OF BOXERS

HARTFORD, Sept. 20—(AP)—After watching Andre Routis, world's featherweight champion go through ten rounds of work at his gymnasium in Holyoke, and then coming to Hartford where he saw Bat Battalino, challenger, for the 126 pound title batter two sparring partners as part of his ten rounds of training, Thomas E. Donohue, Connecticut boxing commissioner, announced that he considered both battlers in fine physical condition and expected a gruelling fight for the championship at the Hurley stadium, here next Monday night.

Donohue, who returned to Hartford yesterday from the National Boxing association convention at Chicago, where he secured official recognition of the Battalino-Routis bout as a championship affair, congratulated each boxer on his apparent good physical condition and warned him that he must expect a hard battle next Monday.

Routis, using a right swing and a half right hook, boxed two vigorous rounds with Jerry Emard, Holyoke lightweight, and two with "Toots" Gavin, also of Holyoke. Two miles on the road and six rounds of shadow boxing and rope skipping completed his work.

When the boxing was over, Routis spotted Commissioner Donohue and went to him. He assured the Nutmeg state boxing boss that he is getting faster every day and his physical shape is perfect.

"I was in pretty good shape at Cleveland," he said, referring to his recent fight with Johnny Datto, "but now I'm right. Faster every day and feeling better and better."

"You need to be if you expect to retain your title," Donohue told him.

Donohue returned to Hartford and went to the St. Nicholas gym, arriving there before Battalino did. The Hartford candidate for the title lost no time after entering the gym in getting ready for his active work. He warmed up with two rounds of shadow boxing and then swung into what looked like a real fight with Mickey Flahive.

The lightweight and Bat slugged, boxed and fought like tigers for two rounds. Battalino was punching hard and fast and his judgment of distance was good. In the third, during a rally he nailed Mickey with a left and a right on the face and Mickey's lips were cut by his teeth. Flahive was relieved and Frankie Mack, the rough and ready mauler of the Battalino training cast went into action for three rounds.

Bat then wound up with light work, for his cooling off period.

He will go on the road again tomorrow morning but only will cover about half his usual route. He will box at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and will probably windup his training with his work, resting on Sunday and Monday.

FERRELL STOPS RED SOX AND INDIANS EVEN SERIES

BOSTON, Sept. 20—(AP)—Wesley Ferrell, Cleveland pitcher, stopped a Red Sox rally in the eighth inning today and the Indians evened the series by taking the second game, 4-2. Ferrell went to the relief of Holloway. The Sox outhit the visitors by 13 hits to nine but had 12 men left on bases.

Dobens, former Holy Cross pitcher, went to MacFayden's aid in the box for Boston in the eighth. The home team used two players recalled from Pittsfield, Cicero and Connolly, near the end of the game, the former getting a pinch single.

MARTIN GIVES GRAHAM AN ARTISTIC LACING

BOSTON, Sept. 20—(AP)—Andy Martin, peppy Boston featherweight, gave Bushey Graham, of Utica, N. Y., the bantamweight champion, an artistic 10-round lacing here tonight, in the Boston Garden's feature bout. Graham was overweight, making the contest a non-title affair. Martin recently defeated Andre Routis, the featherweight titleholder, but the latter's title was not at stake either.

Martin carried six of the rounds, Graham three and the first one was even. The Boston battler had great success jabbing the champion out of position and it was not until the seventh that Graham was able to capture a round with his heavy left and right hooks.

Eddie Curley of Boston's West End scored a smart ten round victory over Steve Smith of Bridgeport, Conn. Smith hit hard but he was wild and in eight of the ten rounds Curley danced around him, rolling up a huge point advantage. Most of the time the latter succeeded in keeping the Bridgeport man from coming in close, where he seemed to fight to better advantage.

ATHLETICS BEAT TIGERS USING BUT 2 REGULARS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 20—(AP)—The Athletics presented a lineup with only two regulars in the cast this afternoon, but again defeated the Tigers. This time by a score of 2 to 1 in ten innings. The game was a pitching duel between Bill Shores and Whitlow Wyatt, Tiger rookie from the Three-Eye league.

Eric McNair, a shortstop the Athletics bought from Knoxville of the Sally league for $25,000, made his big league debut in fine style. McNair handled himself faultlessly in the field and pounded out three of the eight Mack hits. In the tenth inning he stole second after forcing Bevo Lebourveau and scored the winning run on French's single to left. Score:

ERROR BY GOSLIN GIVES ST. LOUIS 1 TO 0 VICTORY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20—(AP)—Pitchers Alvin Crowder and Myles Thomas battled on even terms today with an error by "Goose" Goslin providing the edge that gave St. Louis a 1 to 0 victory over Washington.

Each pitcher allowed five hits, each walked four men and each struck out two.

The Browns scored in the fifth after Blue led off with a double. McNeely sacrificed him to third. Goslin came in and took Manush's loft in short left, but in trying to pick Blue off third threw the ball away, allowing the run to score. Score:

SHOWING INTEREST IN COMING CITY ELECTIONS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 20—Interest in the city elections which will be held December 5, is just beginning to stir with the names of several prospective standard bearers for the mayoralty and candidates for aldermen being mentioned. The republican party, with Mayor Charles A. Gates as standard bearer swept a majority into office two years ago. The democratic victory in the town elections last year, however, gave members of that party a taste of political control that augurs well for a bitter fight to gain supremacy in the city government in December. While several strong names for mayor have been mentioned by both parties, none of these prospective candidates have as yet given formal notice of accepting the nomination. At least three of the present republican members of the board of aldermen are understood to be considering re-nomination favorably. The city committees have not made any definite selections as yet and the early bubblings of the political boiling pot gives rise to predictions of much feeling in the matter.

THE SOCIAL CORNER

Nothing Is There More Friendly To a Man Than a Friend in Need.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY
GOLDEN ROD

Only a common weed am I,
Unnoticed by the passersby;
Lifting my head in sunny nooks
In meadows green, by gurgling brooks
To greet you with a saucy nod
An unpretentious Golden Rod.

Now, I am praised by young and old
And sought as misers seek for gold,
The palace grand I often grace,
In church and hall find a place;
And stately dames and maidens fair
Are pleased the Golden Rod to wear.

Yet but a common weed am I—
The same as in the years gone by;
The fashions change, but I change not—
Perchance I soon shall be forgot.
"And all over upland and lowland
The charm of the Golden Rod
Some of us call it Autumn—
And others call it God."

MENAGERIE SONG.

As sung at Harvard in the sixties.

Van Amburg is the man that goes with all the shows;
He goes into the lion's den, and shows you all he knows.
He sticks his head in the lion's mouth, and keeps it there awhile;
And when he takes it out again, he greets you with a smile.

Chorus

For the elephant now goes round,
The band begins to play;
Those boys around the monkey's cage,
They'd better keep away.

This is the Arctic polar bear, oft-called the iceberg's daughter;
Been known to eat three tubs of ice, then call for soda-water;
She wades in the water up to her knees, not fearing any harm;
You may growl and grumble as much as you please, but she don't care a darn.

Next comes baboon Emmeline, catching flies and scratching her head;
Weeping and wailing all the day,
because her husband's dead;
Poor, weeping, wailing water-lily, of all friends be'reft;
That monkey is thumbing his nose at her, with his right paw over

Next comes the anaconda-boa-constrictor, called the anaconda for brevity;
He can swallow an elephant as well as a toad, and is noted for his great longevity;
Can swallow himself, crawl through himself, come out with great facility,
Tie himself into a bow-knot, snap his tail, and wing with great agility.

That hyena in the next cage, most wonderful to relate,
Got awful hungry the other night,
and ate up his female mate.
Now, don't go near his cage; he'll hurt you, little boys;
For when he's mad, he'll growl and bite, and make a horrible noise.

Next comes the condor, an awful bird, from the highest mountain tops;
Been known to eat up little boys, and then to smack his chops.
This performance can't go on; there's too much noise and confusion;
Those ladies giving those monkeys nuts will injure their constitution.

WHAT SOCIAL CORNER STANDS FOR

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: The following piece entitled Social Corner was read at the Social Corner gathering at Danielson, Ct., on Sept. 5. I was requested to send it to The Bulletin for publication by vote of the company present.

S—stands for social. We all wish to be kind and sociable to each other and thus try to make others happy. We truly hope that these gatherings may furnish many pleasant and lasting memories.

O—stands for obedience to our God. A person is not asked what their religious belief is when joining our club, but, I am sure there is not one of us who does not believe that there is a power higher than ours that rules over all. May joy, peace, health, prosperity and happiness be our portion through that obedience.

C—stands for corner. The second word of our name. There seems to be a cozy corner in the hearts of our members by their expressions of sympathy such as kind words, cards, flowers, money, etc., when sorrow, grief, misfortune or sickness befalls any of our members.

I—I stands for interest. Much interest is shown by the many interesting letters printed in The Bulletin each week. What a wonderful way to meet each week through these letters. How little we realize, how many people are helped by these letters.

A—stands for active. Our clubs have been active, we are told for about 20 years. Hard to numerate the many meetings held. Club No. 4 thus far has always maintained a friendly spirit and we have not been outdone by the many good things to eat in both quantity and quality.

L—stands for labor. Our system simplifies labor at the dinner hour. These meetings furnish many pleasant things, to think of, thus making a needed change, for each of us and thereby making home duties seem less tedious and irksome.

C—stands for come. How many times this word is printed in the invitations when a club meeting is to be held in the near future. Come one! Come all is the invitation. Our Master! The Christ extends this same invitation. Happy are we who have accepted that call. Oh! That more would heed the call of the Master before it is too late.

O—stands for offering. We are not a set rich company but our collections meet our expenses. One of our clubs has a donation day, also birthday parties, while others help in various ways. Club No. 4 has helped the Salvation Army, also sent money to help the Vermont sufferers.

R—stands for recreation. These meetings are truly a time of recreation. The pleasant auto rides, sometimes out-door picnics, and again long separated friends meet. The whole spirit and atmosphere of these gatherings make these events a season of recreation indeed.

N—stands for number. Happy to say our numbers are increasing. Our family extends over the whole of the United States. Many are the beautiful pictures painted in words in the columns of The Bulletin from time to time. I am sure we all desire to have many more added to our family.

E—stands for experience. The opportunity to relate our experiences to each other is worth the efforts of these meetings. I for one have experienced some very happy hours spent at the Social Corner gatherings.

R—stands for right. I believe that our clubs stand for uprightness, right living and all that makes for a better life. With Christ as our leader and if we live the Golden Rule I believe that true prosperity will be our reward.

With best wishes to all.

ANOTHER GHOST STORY

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: Our page has looked rather scant lately, so will do my bit toward filling it.

Palla and Aries: Glad you liked my "ghost story." It is another I have heard my grandmother tell.

When she was a young woman, she lived at one time, near Graniteville, which is about 20 miles from Providence, on the Pascoag road. My mother says that she and her sisters were small children at that time and she has faint memories of the place.

The 18th. amendment was unknown then and the open saloon was a common sight in the town there was one place in particular, at which the worst characters were in the habit of gathering nightly, to drink and gamble until nearly dawn.

Among this crowd was a one armed man, who everyone called Peter. He was hired to do odd jobs, such as splitting wood, by the people of the town. That is, if they were able to keep him sober long enough. He had a strap and a hook arranged on the stump of the amputated arm, and my grandmother said it was really surprising the amount of work he could do with only one hand.

One Saturday night the usual crowd was there in the saloon, Peter among the rest. Late at night, being very drunk, he laid down on the floor in the corner of the saloon. When it came near morning the crowd broke up and the saloon was closed. Peter was still asleep. When they tried to arouse him they found he was sleeping the sleep that knows no awakening. They procured a horse and a lumber wagon and, laying him in the wagon, carried him to his home. At one part of the way the road was through dense woods, with no houses in sight. There were no street lights, their only light being a lantern.

Queer stories of this grim ride began to circulate around the town in the next few days. My grandmother, talking to the doctor a few days later, asked him about them.

He said he was called to the saloon and found Peter dead. He went with the crowd that carried him into his home. They walked on each side of the wagon all the way. When they reached this lonely, wooded part of the road terrible noises were heard. Shrieks and cries and groans, as of a person in terrible agony. They could see nothing, but the noises seemed to come from in back of the wagon containing Peter's body. My grandmother asked him how he explained it and this is the answer she received: "People say it was the devil, coming after Peter's soul."

Commuter: Letter on its way. Used a little oil on that arm of mine and its working fine again. Do you think I ought to use a little on my tongue around the first of October, or isn't it necessary?

Glendale: Welcome to our Corner.

Best wishes to all Cornerites, and to our editor.

AMERICAN GIRL (Club 6.)

RECIPES FOR CANNING

Dear Editor and Social Corner: Hope some one tried my recipes and had good success. Try these I am sending this week.

Apple Marmalade: 13 large apples, 6 oranges, 3 lemons, 7 cups sugar, 7 cups water. Cut oranges in small chunks, slice lemon very fine. Peel apples, cut in small chunks. Cook all together 2 hours. Seal.

Dill Pickles Put 3 quarts of water, 1 quart of good citer vinegar and 3-4 cup of salt together in a saucepan and boil for a few minutes. Then pour the mixture over small cucumbers which are tightly packed in jars together with sprigs of dill, the more dill the more flavor. These pickles may be used after standing for two weeks.

Pickled Peppers: Wash, cut peppers in halves, cut out seed, fill jars, to every quart of vinegar 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 cup sugar. Let come to a good boiling heat. Pour into jar of packed pepper and seal.

Corn Relish: Cut 3 pints of sweet corn, 3 pints cabbage, chopped fine, 3 large onions, 2 large red peppers, 2 large green peppers (onions and peppers chopped fine), 1½ pints vinegar, 2 cups sugar, 1 tablespoon salt, 1 tablespoon celery seed, get prepared, vinegar boiling hot. Then put in prepared chopped vegtables. Let boil 20 minutes. Seal in glass jars. NOGO

OLD FRIENDS LOOK GOOD

Dear Editor and Social Corner Writers: This is a most beautiful morning for doing any kind of work, and I can see a plenty of it looking me in the face. I should not be writing letters, but I thought our Social Corner page was lacking a bit last week. The swarm of B's was enough for one page without any more. I had an acquaintance call this morning that used to go to school with my boys. His health is not the best, so he is traveling for a clothing company. I certainly was glad to see him, for I think our old friends look good to us, especially if we do not see them very often. He spoke of having the Norwich Bulletin and enjoyed my letters, etc. I am sending a poem entitled Golden Rod.

ANN TENNA.

RAISINS WERE OMITTED

Dear Sisters: Just to say a cup of chopped raisins should go into surprise cake, better known as "tomato soup cake." It was probably my own fault that it was not in last week's recipe.

I also want to say to Clarissa Lyle and Capricorn that it was a bright idea to have a sale table at the Corner meetings.

Though I make fancy things galore, I seldom have any of my own work. I love to buy other people's things and a ten per cent on sales is fine. I wish Mystic could have Club 6. Our leader, Be Natural, is sick. I am not equal to taking charge but will gladly help if some younger member will.

Shorter letters and more of them fits me, doesn't it?

Hope some one else speaks now.

SOMETHING TO TRY

Dear Corner Friends: I want to thank the editor for awarding unworthy me a prize. It came as a big surprise.

Soon many of us will be turning our sunniest windows into greenhouses for the winter. Here are a few uncommon commoners that will stand out as novelties among our winter plants

The next time turnips are to appear on the dinner menu, select an extra large one. Instead of peeling it, cut out the inside, leaving a shell about one inch thick. Fill the shell with earth and plant mustard seed, parsley seed, canary seed, or any other seed that is hardy, in it. The seed will grow and the leaves will sprout out all over the turnip, making a novel window plant. Hang it in the sun and water occasionally.

Sweet potatoes put in a hanging basket of pure sand, or sand loam, and watered occasionally will make a novel hanging vine closely resembling certain varities of ivy.

Instead of throwing away the top of the next pineapple, put it in a pint jar of water. It will soon root. Place the jar in a fancy flower pot and you will have a novel palm.

I am sure you all know that grapefruit seeds will also make pretty, ornamental plants. Soak the seeds in cold water for 24 hours. Then plant them in a fern dish. The seeds will sprout in about three weeks.

Canterbury Bell: Your letter about our feathered friends was most enjoyable.

Mary France: What about the bus load of sisters? I am still expecting.

Marigold: So glad you are better. Hope the betterment will continue and grow into a "best ever."

Nema: The cruel aridity hasn't parched the ink pot, too, I hope!

CHANGED TO LITTLE RHODY.

Dear Editor and Friends: Well did you think I was very tired or had croaked? Well not the last, for here I am down in Little Rhody again. I left dear old Flower cottage where I spent many happy hours in the past year and nine months but happiness don't last long for me. I am in the Rockaway cottage and here Skid is homesick and so am I and I don't care who knows it either, so there. It is pleasant and sunshiny and dry, and I would be glad to see any of the friends. They can call on their way to Providence as I am near to Gardner's filling station on the old pike and several different busses pass my door. My, but it is some noisy, an awful racket.

Capricon: I did the same as you did, picked up my bed and took a ride for myself but I would rather be back on the dear old hill again. It is not home down here.

Velvie: How are you? Will get Icavilla to trot over the hills and through the dales to the little brown cottage. I have not got much settled yet but hope to if I can live long enough.

Skipper, L. T. H., Aries: I will answer all of your letters soon as I can. I have been upset all summer. My youngest daughter was taken to a hospital last night. Trouble never comes singly but we have to bear it and make the best of it.

Well today is Sunday and such an awful racket. It seems that each fellow is trying to beat the other. The whole world is going at breakneck speed.

Rural Aunty: How is that road progressing? Was in hopes I would get a chance to try it but don't know when that will be unless I take Shanks' horse and try that but I am afraid she would kick and balk worse than a tin lizzie. They all do that at times, even the best of them.

I was some disappointed when I saw I could not be on the dear old hill Labor day. Hope they had a good time.

Lucy B: I am still on the map so you will see. Say, join us so we can hear from you sometimes. Kochia must be all in these hot days.

Dee: Come now, send in one of your fine letters. How does the old place look? Deserted, doesn't it? We will be up and see you. Wish I was back up there.

Ann Tenna: How are your flowers this summer? Mine did not do anything. I wish I was like the birds and could go south and hear real darkies singing. We got the south over the radio. It was fine. Hope all the sick are better and the shutins.

CORNER TRUE TO NAME

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Something tells me I ought to write a letter to the Corner. Even though it may not be as interesting as others every little helps to fill the page. I think it is ten years or more since I joined the Corner and have found it true to name. When a great sorrow came into my life it was then I proved the sincerity and sympathy of the sisters, which will never be forgotten. Is it possible the summer has so nearly gone? When at the beginning it seemed the days and months would be so long and lonely. But God is good and our trust is in Him who doeth all things well. Some one has said 'any one can live sweetly, patiently, lovingly and purely until the sun goes down." Just one little day. This is not a sermon but what is in my heart.

Thanks to Windham Blue Bell, I have been privileged to attend several of the out-door gatherings, each hostess doing all they could to make it a day to be remembered.

Friendly Voice: Hope to see you at our next meeting. Think of you many times.

Slow: Have Mr. Slow all dolled up in one of his Willimantic S's at the next meeting.

Lavender: How are you since your party? I see your smiling face in memory many times. Your son bestowed upon you the greatest of all your gifts, a loving tribute to your life as a Christian mother. What more could a mother ask. Nothing!

I remember when a small child writing my first letter would say, what shall I say now. Enough said for this time I hear some one remark. Yours for the Corner. SNOW FLAKE

ENDORSES SPECIAL TABLE IDEA

Dear Editor and Members: It is quite a long time since I have written but I read the page each week and I think the idea of the members who suggest a table on which to display their wares, with price marked on them, is the best yet.

If members have unique objects or rare bits of lace or pottery or any other things they could give a little talk and explain about the treasures, as part of the entertainment, I'm sure we all have something that would be of interest to some one else. Old postage stamps, or view post cards, or curios, from foreign shores, sea shells or hand-work, flower slips or blossoms, crepe paper work, etc.

Perhaps you will subscribe to the following views also:

"Sensible folk (like you and me!) never expect the day to be entirely happy from drawn till night, like a shining ribbon smooth and bright. We quite expect some twists and knots, and also some dull and ugly spots.

"Perfect happiness all the time couldn't occur (except in a rhyme). Just as there's sun and snow and rain, so is there joy and grief and pain; just as there's light and darkness, too, there's a golden tint and a sombre hue.

"Lucky are we if small bits fall (small bits of joy) for one and all. Like a ribbon bright on the day's dark dress, is the tiniest piece of happiness, and if we are wise we'll be content with the smallest share that fate has sent; for sensible folk are quite aware there's stormy weather as well as fair."

Best wishes. SQUAW

LAVENDER'S BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: "Aries" suggested in her letter last week that we write a letter to the Corner page about our meetings and picnics that those who could not attend might have the pleasure of reading about them. There are several members of the Corner on the Willimantic camp ground that would like to express their thanks to the members of the Corner who helped make our sister's birthday party a success, and her daughter, who labored so hard to make the hall fit to hold the meeting, was greatly pleased to have so many participate in making the meeting a success. As is usually the custom, the Corner colors were placed on trees along the way to the place of meeting. The large hall was decorated with flowers and the national colors, several of the members bringing beautiful flowers which were used for decorations. One of the smallest of the large tables was used to hold the enormous birthday cake and presents. Rev. John Pearce asked the blessing and an excellent dinner was served, supervised by Althea and willing helpers.

After dinner speeches were in order, first by Charles Olin of Bristol, who then called upon the ministers present, Revs. E. J. Ayers, J. Pearce, F. C. Baker and W. H. Dunnack. The last named read a poem he wrote for the occasion. Then the birthday cake was cut, each one present receiving a generous piece. The birthday presents were then in order and our sister Olga was called upon to assist. The company enjoyed this part of the program as many amusing comments were made by Mr. Olin as he handed them to his mother. Mrs. Olin received many useful articles and about $50 in money including checks from each of her four children, also a sum of money from the Social corner sisters and her camp friends. There were nearly 200 present, about all of the surrounding towns being represented. A friendly exchange of good bys and good wishes ended the second birthday of our sister Lavender held on the camp ground. May she live to have another next year and all members and friends come again. Best wishes for the Corner.

LITTLE SISTER.

SEPTEMBER

Dear Corner Sisters and Editor: Having been a silent listener and reader of the Corner letters for some time will now add my bit and inquire after all the sisters and how they have enjoyed this long beautiful summer time. As for myself, I have taken no lengthy trips as some of the sisters have written about. However, I have enjoyed a number of days' outings visiting the different beaches and surrounding cities and towns. So have spent the summer in a somewhat quiet way, doing odds and ends of different things. I enjoyed reading Commuter's letter in last week's Corner page, telling about the state fair in Syracuse, N. Y., as that is my native state and I have enjoyed many good fairs in New York state before coming to New England to live. I hope Commuter enjoys her new home out there as well as I did, though it is some years since I left there and I presume there are many changes the same as in all places.

In a recent letter from a Corner sister I notice her reference to an old stone sink. It became at once a subject of much interest to me as only a few days ago I was the guest of a Corner sister who has in her possession one which has been handed down from generation to generation until now it is claimed to be over 150 years old. The present owner had it moved from her former home and now it is placed in a handsome rubbed stone pedestal in the center of her spacious flower garden and is utilized as a bird bath. It is certainly a beautiful sight to see the birds feeding from the flat roof of the garage which is near by and kept well filled for their special need. I doubt if any one could buy this novel heirloom and lucky, indeed, are the birds who have such an ideal spot to feed and bathe, and could they speak, they would bless the lady whose kindly thought provided it for them. But all too soon will the birds be taking their flight for the sunny south and the bath and flowers surrounding it will be frozen over and dead for summer is ended, the trees are growing heavy with fruits that they now bear, the golden rod is drooping down beneath her yellow hair, the breeze is burdened with the weight of flower scents, the fields all filled with grass bowed low beneath September winds that stumble as they pass. No wonder that tired days are like soft words that creep from little children's weary lips before they go to sleep.

Not often do we like to turn a new leaf in the calendar. However, summer is ended, the year is growing old, winter with its shivers is on the way. But when September beams upon us from the page we think of purple grapes, fall apples mellow and delicious, the year's first returns coming to us. Sisters, don't you love September? There is just zip enough in the air to make us want to get right at the neglected and forgotten tasks of the past summer and finish them up before September is gone. The young folks sometimes say they do not like September, it brings school days again. Yet I verily believe they are glad that the time has come to take up the books again, for school means the beginning of another year to them, the last of the course it may be, or at least one more toward graduation and a diploma. Good old September, we thank you for all and everything you bring us. We love you, you are so beautiful.

THE ANNUAL BILL DINNER

Dear Social Corner Members: If any of the Social Corner members have attended the annual Bill dinner held the last Wednesday in August, at Ledyard Center, they might be interested to know of how the custom came about.

It seems way back in 1867, Henry Bill proposed to establish a fund of $1,000 the interest of it to buy books for the establishment of a public library for the town. He suggested names of a group to act as board of trustees. These men accepted the gift and had the Bill Library association incorporated by act of legislature that same year. Also, at their first regular meeting a president, secretary, treasurer and librarian were appointed.

A little later the Bills gave their old family homestead to be used as the Congregational parsonage and here the trustees met holding their business meeting in the library. Afterwards dinner was served in the spacious hall up stairs. It is easy to see how this latter custom came about for traveling with horse and team wagon and over poor roads must have necessitated quite a bit of time.

There were invited guests and after the dinner a program was in order including singing and a speech or paper read by someone chosen for the occasion.

These dinners and programmes were greatly enjoyed and finally the number attending became so great that it was suggested the occasion be open to the public and exercises held at the Congregational church with dinner on the lawn. This was in August, 1893, and between 400 and 500 were present, certainly a goodly gathering for a country place.

Shelves in the gallery of the church were built to hold the books comprising the library but after a period of 26 years these proved inadequate and so the Bill brothers again came to the rescue, furnishing money for the erection of a library building. A site was secured opposite the church and here, under the supervision of Frederic Bill, an appropriate building was erected and dedicated in 1892.

Many pleasant memories for me are connected with this library. One was the custom of strolling over on the afternoon of Bill dinner day and gazing at the stuffed birds and the long gray squirrel in the glass cases. I delighted in identifying many of the birds and as I saw them only once a year they provided a new pleasure on each occasion.

Later, I was able to visit the library more frequently and take out books. I could name favorite after favorite that I have taken from the shelves but will mention only one, Hamlin Garland's "Boy Life on the Prairie." To me that is one of the classics of childhood and I wish every boy and girl might have the pleasure of reading it and enjoying it as I did.

PLEASING CORNER GATHERINGS

Dear Social Cornerites: Another happy gathering was that on Lavender's birthday, Sept. 12. As before her daughter, Mrs. Carpenter hired the large camp ground hall and it was immaculate and decorated with plants and flowers, the colors lavender and yellow predominating. Each table had two bouquets of flowers in gold and lavender containers.

Lavender (herself) received her guests seated in a most lovely orchid chair, a gift from her son, Walter. As usual she was adorable with her sweet smiles and gracious way. She made us all most welcome.

The dinner was all a dinner could be in the way of good food and pastries. It was served by Mrs. Carpenter and her helpers, Alfara, Too Late, Pale Face and River View. The birthday cake was served us in lavender and white plates with a lavender napkin.

The gifts were many and varied. The camp ground friends gave her a box with money. Some of the Social Corner friends gave a gift of money. Her son, Charles, and wife, presented a substantial check. There was a beautiful basket of flowers from True Blue. There were books and lovely handkerchiefs.

From Windham Blue Bell she received a perfectly lovely quilt, made of sprigged lavender and white put together with strips of lavender and lined with lavender and white, small check and tied with lavender. The pattern was "Grandmother's Choice." Windham Blue Bell made the quilt, a thing of beauty.

Remarks by son, Charles, who was toastmaster, were followed by Rev. Mr. Dimmock, Rev. Mr. Ayer, Rev. Mr. Baker and Rev. Mr. Pearce. They were each entertaining speakers and their talks were very much enjoyed. Then came the time to return home, good byes were said. Lavender's birthday had become history. May she be spared to her loved ones for many years. And may we all be able to help her celebrate many more natal days.

I want to go back and write about the April meeting held in Willimantic, by Club 1, and speak about the wonderful musical programme we listened to by three artists: Miss Maybelle Taft, Willimantic, pianist; Theodore Sterry, violinist, and Dr. Chrales Lamb, vocalist, of Norwich Town.

It was a rare treat and am sure we have paid a high price for an evening of music, and did not enjoy it as we did this. They were so generous with encores.

Am sure the members of the Social Corner are fortunate in having so many talented people give them of their best. We thank them, heartily.

Have been able to attend only two picnics this summer, but will try and make up for it this winter.

At Aunty No. 1's, it was a gala day and I enjoyed every minute. We always have an enjoyable time with her and uncle.

LAVENDER'S FINE BIRTHDAY.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I hardly know where to begin to express my thanks for the many kind remembrances and the lovely sentiments expressed on the 67 cards which I received on my 81st birthday. All the cards were lovely and Oh I received so many lovely presents besides money, from all my dear children and from the Social Corner and camp ground friends. I want to thank all those who kindly assisted my daughter S. A. C. for, of courese, it meant a great deal of work, but I have yet to hear from any of the 200 that they did not enjoy the day. The day was certainly ideal and remarks were made by my oldest son of Bristol, Rev. E. J. Ayers, Rev. John Pearce, Rev. F. C. Baker and Rev. W. H. Dunnack, which were enjoyed by all and we had a lovely dinner as usual. All of my presents have been much admired by many, not forgetting the lovely quilt which was made especially for my 81st birthday by Windham Blue Bell, and it is lavender. Well, I think I have written quite enough for this time, with very best wishes for all.

WANTS GRAPE JUICE RECIPE.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: The letters and poems in last week's Bulletin were very interesting so that I wished that there were more of them.

I wonder if some sister will please send the recipe for grape juice made by putting fresh grapes, sugar and water in a jar and sealing. I have forgotten the right proportion of each to use.

I have been to many fairs from "Pudding Lane", Mansfield to The Pan American exposition at Buffalo but have never attended the Syracuse fair so I was much interested in Commuter's letter.

The aquarium is the most interesting place which I have ever visited in New York. I had never thought before that fish could be as beautiful as some of them are. I was much interested in the seal which was in water which had to be kept very cold all the time.

It would be very helpful to have a table with articles for sale at the Corner meetings.

I am sending a poem which was with my mother's things. With best wishes to all. ROSARY, (Club 1)

PORK HAM PICKLE.

Dear Editor and Sisters of the Social Corner: Seeing so few letters last Saturday I thought I would send a few lines. Here is a good receipt for pork ham pickle, for one pig:

Two hams, two shoulders and a few strips of bacon, five palls of water, five quarts of salt, three pints of molasses, four ounces saltpeter. Boil and cool, cover meat and leave six weeks, then smoke or eat without smoking. It needs no freshening when sliced and fried.

I had a fine time at Lavender's birthday-Social Corner party. Well wishes for all. OPTIMIST

ENDORSES SUSANNA'S CAKES

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Am in Springfield for a few weeks' visit with my daughter, but she has The Bulletin so as to keep in touch with the home folks and so I had Susanna's answer about the surprise cake with "tomato soup" in it. I have made it also the fudge cake and advise others to try them for they are both very nice.

GROWING AND KEEPING GLADIOLI

Dear Editor: A few words on this subject may not be amiss at this time of the year.

When you purchase new gladioli roots, expose them to air and keep in a cool, dry cellar or chest. In spring plant the corms when all danger of freezing has passed, or when the trees begin to unfold their leaves. A sandy loam gives best results. A heavy clay soil is not good for gladioli. Large corms should be planted at a depth of four inches, in rows, beds or borders, and from four to eight inches apart. Plant in open sunny places, away from trees, large shrubs or foundations of buildings. Small corms should be planted three inches deep. The best method is to scoop out a small trench with a hoe, slightly deeper than needed. Spread a little sheep fertilizer, bone meal or tankage in trench, then cover fertilizer with a little earth, set corms in handful of sand and cover with earth. Never allow fertilizer to come in contact with corms, but when the plants are six inches high a little fertiliser can be placed between the rows.

Do not plant gladioli in the same patch many years in succession. Keep soil loose and free from weeds. Hoe and cultivate frequently. Water during dry spells, soaking the ground thoroughly and cultivate shortly after. Cut with a sharp knife, allowing at least four leaves to remain on the stalk. Change water daily on cut flowers and remove one-fourth inch of stem: cut diagonally. In harvesting dig corms when tops discolor in late fall; immediately after digging cut stem close to bulb. Dry in wind or warm room. Remove the roots and withered corms as soon as they separate easily. Store bulbs in a cool, dry cellar in open baskets or boxes.

I would like to applaud the idea of Capricon and Clarissa Lyle of having a table at the Social Corner gatherings where members may display their hand work, curios, flowers, etc. There are members who make lace and other articles that they would like to sell but feel embarrassed at having to ask others to buy I do hope we will soon have another meeting of Club 4 and let us have a splendid display of all sorts of things. Am sure this feature will add to our meetings and prove to be a drawing card, i e. an incentive for members to come out better in attendance. Let's all get together and make a success of this splendid idea.

I see Kochia took a prize at the fair. Good for you!

Violet: Thank you for invitation. Will come some day soon.

Fall, the most beautiful season of the year, begins on the 23rd, when the sun shines directly down on the Equator. The days will be getting shorter and the light weaker as the sun goes lower in the sky each day. But nature will take pity and the long evenings will show brighter and larger stars, the moon will shine longer and mount higher in the sky than in summer time.

LAVENDER'S BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

Dear Editor and Friends: It gives me pleasure to write the Corner about the big gathering Thursday, September 12th, at Willimantic camp ground, when in honor of Lavender, her 81st birthday anniversary, was observed in a most auspicious manner. For those who were privileged to attend, it proved a good time for nearly 200 people.

With her children and grandchildren around her, Lavender was the guest of honor, when seated at the long table reserved at one end of the large dining hall situated on the camp ground. Other tables were filled with friends who are still remaining on the ground, also many Social Corner members and others.

The weather was ideal and while dinner was in progress friends enjoyed a social time on the spacious verandas. On the several large tables arranged in the hall, the decorations comprised beautiful flowers, lavender napkins and dainty paper plates bordered with lavender, while the Social Corner color yellow, predominated, all in keeping with the occasion. C. F. Olin, a son of the honor guest, was the able toastmaster. Following the delicious menu served under direction of Lavender's daughter, Mrs. Carpenter, the eloquent remarks from a number of the guests were decidedly interesting. Those of the toastmaster were particularly fitting and in many respects applied to the beautiful qualities, personality, goodness and all things, happy disposition of his mother. Mr. Olin's sincere remarks, in loyalty to the one that reared him, were a credit to any worthy son.

Preceding the dinner, Rev. William Dumack was invited to say grace. He also was the first speaker called upon for an after dinner speech, and also contributed very appropriate lines about Lavender, which in his closing remarks he read before the enthusiastic gathering. Other speakers included Rev. E. J. Ayers, Rev. John Pearce and Rev. F. W. Baker, all of whom were most humorous.

At this point on the programme, the toastmaster called upon Olga to come forward and distribute the array of gifts which had been placed on the table by loving friends. Just previous to this, a huge birthday cake suitably inscribed was cut and distributed to every one in the hall. (There were two birthday cakes.) While Lavender was seated in her cosy rocking chair of lavender hue, Olga passed the gifts and the toastmaster announced them. They included a shower of handkerchiefs, also cards, candy, flowers, gold coins, paper money and a substantial check, as well as many other things. Among these was a beautiful quilt lined with lavender, the hand work of Windham Blue Bell, by whom it was presented. After all were acknowledged, the closing feature was snap shots taken of this charming old lady while reclining in her lavender rocking chair, just outside the hall.

May I at this time enroll as a member of the Social Corner? Have chosen for my pennname LOWTHORPE

CHATTY LETTER FROM EVELINE BURR

Dear Social Corner Friends: I was interested in what Jennie wrote about stone sinks. I know of only one and that is in the Dean homestead here in Plainfield. The present users of it find it so satisfactory in every way that there is no prospect of its being replaced by a modern one.

It was too warm for me to bus it to the B. M. for club No. 5's meeting and so I missed the poems by The Little Spinster that I had read were distributed. If these poems are as fine as her letters to our page have been they are certainly worthy of careful study.

I enjoy the letters on school affairs. I taught schools for a few years long ago when I was young. It is a pleasure to help the youngsters who want to learn but a very thankless task to try to get some other children interested in anything but mischief. If all mothers had taught for a while before marriage I think they would know better than to discuss a teacher's faults or criticise her methods before their children. Good common sense should point out the error of this course. Methods of teaching have so changed since my youth that I suppose I should be quite at sea in a school room now. Each season as school opens I promise myself that some day I will go and visit for a while but year after year goes by and I do not get to it.

I am reading Emil Ludwig's Life of Lincoln which began in the September Cosmopolitan. Am sorry it is so long between installments.

Canterbury Bell's recent letter on birds made me feel very ignorant. My big cat, Billy Coon, has saddened me this summer by his bird catching feats in spite of my keeping his "tummy" well filled he will disregard my teachings and every now and then walk proudly up to me with a struggling bird in his mouth. The humming bird that visits here regularly is too quick for him I am glad to say.

I will close with a few lines on September which I clipped from the editorial page of my home town paper.

"September is here. Originally the seventh month, as its name indicates it slipped along to ninth place when the Roman emperors tacked two new months on at the beginning of the year.

"In its 30 days the belated tourist takes the homeward road and millions of young America hearken to the call of the school bells. Its magic "r" is a signal for idle oyster boats to unfurl their white sails and speed to the beds where the bivalves lie. Summer flowers fade, but along the roadside the golden rod is a blaze of autumnal glory. With the early frosts the trees become gay splotches of color, the heavy ears of corn hang precariously on sere and yellow stalks, the sumac berries are richly red and the juice of ruddy apples has a tang like wine. The harvest moon hangs in the sky and the hearth fires begin to flicker in thousands of homes.

Destined by the calendar to mark the tag of summer, September has achieved glories all its own that lead on and into the riper glories of October's hills.

Hoping this week's page will be filled to overflowing and with greetings to all readers. EVELINE BURR

METHOD OF CANNING CRAB MEAT WANTED

Dear Social Corner Editor and Members: These are busy days, with canning, preserving, pickle and jelly-making to do. We have lots of green tomatoes, so I am trying the two recipes that "Pozo" sent in last week, for making pickles out of them.

I would appreciate it very much, if any of the members could furnish me with a recipe for canning crab meat. The crabs are exceptionally plentiful this year, down here where I live and I thought it would be so nice to can some for winter use. But I have never even heard of this being done at home: so if any of the readers have or know of any recipes for canning same, I would be pleased to know about it.

I wish to thank the member who sent me the pictures of the picnic held at Bay State's, a few weeks ago. And Stranger in the City, who is visiting me, wants to thank Aries for the picture of the same picnic that she sent her.

Will close for this time, with best regards to all the members. From

MISS NEW JERSET.

WRITES WHEN IT RAINS.

Dear Social Corner Friends: Just the right night for letter writing, a rainy damp night. Somehow I always pick out a night like this to answer my correspondence. It makes you forget the weather when you get interested in your letter writing.

Jack-in-the-Pulpit: So kind of you to go through all that trouble for me and I sincerely thank you. I guess you are one of those helpful kind that you spoke of in your letter. It is probably as your friend said. Thank you, again.

Elm Tree Bobbie: I am going to try your sweet pickle beets this week, possibly tomorrow. Our beets were rather slow this year, but better late than never. When the snow flies I will write and tell you how good they are. Thank you kindly for sending in recipes.

Winter Robin: Thank you also for sending in beet recipe. I will try yours also and report later.

If I have overlooked anyone else that sent me recipes, I thank you also.

Auralee: Where, oh where art thou. Every day when the 1 o'clock bus goes by I look for you. And I am still waiting for that cookie recipe. What's this I hear you didn't recognize sister right away. Do you think she has changed? Just think, I had her with me one whole week.

Lonefeather: It is some time since I saw you. I looked for you the second week of your vacation, but I suppose you had a lot to do. Might see you Saturday.

Best wishes to all the sisters is the wish of PALLA

LEADING INDUSTRIALS DEPRESSED BY CLOUDBURST OF SELLING IN RADIO

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—(AP) — A cloud burst of selling in radio, broke over the stock market without warning, just as the speculative skies seemed to be clearing this afternoon, sharply depressing several of the leading industrials, and coming as a climax to an erratic and nerve-wrecking session of the stock market.

The market began the day rather confidently, although the overnight announcement of an increase of $95,000,000 in brokers loans, coming on top of four successive weeks of sharp advances caused an undercurrent of uneasiness, bullishness prevailed in many quarters, and there was an inclination to explain it away by pointing to the several new listings which had to be financed during the week. Bears were able to launch a rather effective drive before noon, however, and no sooner had operators for the advance regained control of the price movement in the afternoon, than the break in radio threw the market into turmoil.

Call money renewed at 5 per cent and held at that figure all day, and bankers were inclined to regard the credit situation as fairly satisfactory. The week end business and trade reviews reported no significant changes, either for the better or the worse. There was no news regarding radio or other stocks to account for the decline, and the quest for the cause of the break turned to brokerage houses with foreign connections. From them that heavy selling was found to be emanating.

Wall street was inclined, therefore, to attribute much of the day's difficulties to London, whence came reports that the Clarence Hatry investment banking interests were in serious difficulties. The Photomaton group of shares, backed them, have lost some $50,000,000 in market value on the London market in the past two days, and speculative issues generally have been carried sharply lower. There has been heavy buying of New York stocks of late for London account, and brokers said it was reasonable to suppose that Photomaton debacle had precipitated a heavy unloading of shares here.

It was notable that selling on this market converged on a few of the recent favorites among the leading industrials, bulls managing to hold their ground in most of the utilities, and sending several sharply higher. Rails sagged but moderately. The week end business reviews pointed to good fall buying in the clothing lines and optimism regarding fall trade generally. The heavy industries, especially steel and automobiles, hardened up a little, but greater activity is expected in October. Two of the first August railroad earnings to appear were those of the Erie and the Nickel Plate, and disclosed substantial gains.

Radio was depressed 9 points to 95 and closed at 96. More than 400,000 shares changed hands, accounting for about 8 per cent of the day's turnover of nearly 4,900,000 shares. National Cash Register, U. S. Steel, Westinghouse Electric, R. H. Macy, and General Electric were among issues losing from ½ to 7 points. In the oils, such recent leaders as Royal Dutch and Standard of New Jersey lost 2 or 3 points, and Mexican Seaboard reached a new low for the year. In the motors, Chrysler sagged more than 2 points to a new 1929 low at 64 -4. Wide drops were 11 points in Allied Chemical and 17 in Otis Elevator.

Columbia Gas and Electric was a strong spot, rising more than 11 points to a record price. American and Foreign Power was sent up more than 8 points to a record level and such issues as Consolidated Gas, Public Service of New Jersey, and Shandard Gas were firm. Two of the investment trusts, American International and Sterling securities, rose to record heights on reports of marked appreciation of their holdings. A few industrial specialties jumped into new high ground, including Beatrice Creamery, Burroughs Adding, Foster Wheeler and Worthington Pump.

In the commodities, grains continued to sag. Wheat futures lost more than a cent a bushel on reports of beneficial rains in Australia and large northwest stocks. Corn lost nearly as much on bearish Illinois crop reports Cotton sold up rapidly on bullish crop advices, but reacted and closed but a little higher.

Foreign exchanges were irregular. Sterling continued to sag. The cable rate, while ruling at $4.84 5-8, slipped a shade below that level for a time, recording a new 1929 low. The Canadian dollar was at a discount of nearly one cent. The Japanese yen continued to mount, however, reaching 47.50 cents.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 20—(AP)—Convertibles softened in the bond market today and their action, which was in line with the tone of the general list, resulted in a preponderous of minus signs at the close. Time money was firm at 9 per cent. for all maturities, with a light inquiry reported. Liquidation of corporation mortgages was small, but it was noticeable in all groups.

The Communication company convertibles lost virtually all of their recent large gains. American Telephone 4 1-2s sold off throughout most of the session and closed 1 1-4 points net lower. International Telephone 4 1-2s proved less resistant and dipped 3 1-2, Atchison 4 1-2s were in some demand until the late trading when they dropped about 3 points to finish slightly less than a point below the Thursday final.

Rails attracted a small following. Obligations on the Erie road, which today reported a substantial gain in net operating income for August, sagged.

Neither the industrial nor public utility groups showed much disposition to change.

Argentine government bonds displayed a market firmness in the foreign list.

United States Treasury notes and Liberties, had a slim market and were irregular.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 20—(AP)—Threatened blockade of movement of grain toward market centers northwest, did much today to send wheat and other cereals to a lower level in prices. Sharp notice also was taken of the fact that exports of wheat from North America this week, are nearly 4,000,000 bushels less than for the corresponding time last year. Besides, word of rainfalls helping to relieve drought both in Argentine and Australia, tended further to weaken wheat values.

Closing quotations on wheat were heavy, 1 1-4c to 1 1-2c a bushel below yesterday's finish. Corn closed 5-8c to 7-8c off, oats 3-8c to 3-4c down, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 5c.

Lowest prices of the day in the wheat pit were current during the final transactions.

According to advices at hand, the rural movement of wheat to primary market terminals northwest, has of late been matching up evenly with the available outlet until this week a renewal of enlarged receipts put a fresh strain on transportation and storage facilities.

Corn prices today dropped to a new all-around low mark for the week. Improved weather conditions over the corn belt, were a factor. Oats sympathized with weakness of wheat and corn.

Selling out on the part of holders of October lard made the provision market easy.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago this week the New London County Agricultural society had completed a new half mile track at the fairgrounds and it was said to be as fine a half mile track as any in New England. The same week the finishing touches were being put on the interior of St. Patrick's church, the dedication being, at that time, only 10 days in the future. Two new fire alarm boxes were added to the local circuit, box 17 at the almshouse and box 28 at Greeneville. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Norwich Bulletin of September, 1879, are as follows:

Monday, Sept. 15, 1879—The prospects now are that the exhibition of the New London County Agricultural society, next week, will exceed that of any former year. The society has built a new half mile track according to rule, 50 feet wide, 50 feet at the home stretch, which is said to be as good as any half mile track in New England. It is hoped the entries in the other departments, beside the trotting, will be proportionate to the manufacturing, agricultural and other interests of the county. The New London Northern and Norwich & Worcester roads sell tickets at half rate during the fair with 55 cents added for admission to the grounds.

In answer to the call for the assembly of the temperance people at the Central Baptist church, at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon "to hear and act upon the report of the secretary and treasurer; to elect, if necessary, a new committee for the ensuing year and instruct the same", etc., there was but a feeble response. A handful of our best citizens assembled, but of the general committee but a fraction over half was present and of the clergy, but one active member responded, the Rev. L. P. Blackford of the Universalist church.

Two new fire alarm boxes are to be added to the fire alarm telegraph, one at Greeneville, near 12th street and another near the almshouse at the West Side. A mile and a half of new wire will be stretched and the battery strengthened to operate them.

Tuesday, Sept. 16, 1879—The Connecticut Universalist convention holds its annual session this year with the church in this city, beginning Wednesday, September 17th. The parishes within the fellowship of the convention are entitled to four delegates each—two from the society, one from the church and one from the Sunday school.

Rev. John Eaton, United States commissioner of education, spent Sunday with the Rev. William S. Palmer of this city, and visited the Free Academy and other schools in this city yesterday. He warmly commended the general appearance of our schools and specially praised the manner and bearing of the scholars he saw.

Mr. Jacob Leyrer was the successful bidder to furnish entertainment at the New London county fair. He bid $507. The other bids were as follows: $430, $413, $391 and $300.

Wednesday, Sept. 17, 1879—The Norwich district convention of Good Templars yesterday, passed resolutions of cooperation with all the temperance organizations; of earnest efforts to secure a large "no license" vote; of personal effort to advance the order and endorsing juvenile temples.

Last Friday morning between 2 and 3 o'clock, a second attempt was made to fire the barn of Chief Justice J. D. Park on Laurel Hill. Chief Justice Park is absent from the city hearing a murder trial at Bridgeport.

The interest in the revival at the Greeneville Methodist church is increasing. Patrick Glynn, of New London, a reformed drunkard, will address the meeting tonight on his experiences before and after conversion.

Thursday, Sept. 18, 1879—The finishing touches are being put on the interior of St. Patrick's church and it will be ready for dedication on the 28th, 10 days hence. The pews, doors, railings and trimmings are of ash and black walnut. The doors will be hinged in a few days. Two large oil paintings in the front vestibule are unfinished, the artist being now at work on them.

Among the assignments at the meeting of the grand lodge, I. O. O. F., at Baltimore, this week, William N. Andrews was appointed on the committee on petitions.

The progress on the Laurel Hill improvement is daily perceptible. A good portion of the fence which surmounts the offset wall has been erected, the flag stone walk is being relaid and the gutters cobbled.

Friday, Sept. 19, 1879—A pleasant social event occurred in Preston on the 17th inst., upon the occasion of the marriage of Mason S. Hewitt and L. Althea, daughter of Mr. Ulysses Avery. The marriage rites were performed by the Rev. George A. Bryan, of Preston City, assisted by Rev. John Avery of West Woodstock.

The Ella makes excursions to Watch Hill today and tomorrow, leaving the dock at eight o'clock, and stopping at any station on her route, if desired. The fare is placed very low.

The bell of the Central Baptist church is to be rehung today, and the public need not be alarmed at any uncertain sounds that may issue from the belfry.

Saturday, Sept. 20, 1879—As Patsy Donahue, a brakeman at the West Side depot, was switching cars onto a side track at Thamesville, yesterday noon, he jumped from a moving car and fell. He got up unaware that he was injured, but upon stepping on his right foot he found that his leg was broken below the knee.

Two new fire alarm telegraph boxes were added to the circuit yesterday. The box at the almshouse is No. 17 and that at the corner of High and 11th streets, Greeneville, No. 28. Neither box is yet keyed for alarms.

At the fair next Thursday, the grand trial of speed for horses that never trotted better than 2.24 is expected to be a fine race. The horses entered are said to be flyers.

IN MEMORIAM

In Loving Memory of Clifford H. Williams

September twenty-first, two years ago today.
A husband dear and father kind,
was by our Saviour called away.
Our thoughts are often with him,
As we hope to meet again
On that beautiful shore,
Where parting is no more.
And we pray that each of us may ready be
When the call is given, Come, dwell in eternity.

Hicks, also colored. The latter claims that Hopkins, acting on power of attorney, defrauded her of $2,305. Hopkins was made a prisoner atp olice headquarters and will be taken back to Boston for trial. Hopkins, who traveled under an alias of Robert T. Dutley, it is claimed as attorney for the Hicks woman, mortgaged property from which negotiation he received the money. This, it is further claimed, he appropriated to his own use. He later came to New London where he has since been employed as a waiter. Hopkins studied law for 10 years in Boston and while he was endeavoring to equip himself for the practice of law he engaged in the shady transaction. During one of his alleged fraudulent schemes, Hopkins, it is said, was detected and attempted suicide. He was taken to a Boston hospital for treatment and while there made his escape and came to New London. The Hicks woman declares that Hopkins has defrauded several Boston residents and has robbed churches.

This evening it developed that Hopkins' alleged fraudulent method of obtaining money has reached an enormous sum. It is claimed he has robbed colored residents of Boston of a sum which in the aggregate, will total $90,000. Detective Miller of the Boston department, came to New London and took charge of the prisoner, returning with Hopkins on the 8.01 o'clock train. Miller said that Hopkins would obtain the acquaintanceship of Boston colored residents who owned real estate and through scheming and convincing he would obtain from the property owners the power of attorney. Once armed with this weapon of juggling the real estate he would obtain loans by mortgage on the property and would appropriate the money so obtained to his own use. When the owners realized that they had been cleverly victimized and started to take steps for Hopkins' arrest he left Boston and his whereabouts were not known until recently when one of the victims ascertained that he was employed in this city. Then a warrant for his arrest was sent to the New London police.

The Groton fishermen have caused the police much trouble by their conduct for several weeks and most of their number who now go before the court are penalized. DEPARTMENT CALLED OUT BY A BUSY SMALL BOY

The New London fire department had a needless run this afternoon for it answered a false alarm, something that does not happen frequently. But instead of the firemen being angered at the sender of the alarm, they were amused in spite of themselves. Shortly after 4 o'clock an alarm was sent in from Box 26, corner of Bulkeley place and Huntington street. Chief Thomas Shipman and four pieces of apparatus responded. To the surprise of the firemen no fire existed. It developed that an urchin of but three, who amused himself by propelling a tricycle, went to the pole where the box is located and standing on the seat, succeeded in removing the glass, which protects the key. The box door was then easily opened and the next move of the youngster was to seize the lever, which he pulled. When the mechanism started the youth became scared and jumped down to the sidewalk, but by that time the alarm had been sent in. When the firemen arrived at the location of the box the youngster was obtaining further pleasure by observing the speeding pieces of apparatus.

By the time the firemen responded, Mrs. Gula had succeeded in smothering the flames, but not until her arms had been burned. The interior of the residence was not badly damaged.

ROOMING-HOUSE VILENESS TO BE ENDED BY POLICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept 20—The New London and state police are to maintain a closer watch of rooming houses in the future; for since the arrest of a Norwich girl of 17 and a Massachusetts girl of 14, charged with lascivious carriage in living out of wedlock with two local youths in Truman street houses, the police are convinced that many couples are permitted to reside in numerous rooming houses when they have not married. Several such houses have already been visited by officers for the purpose of determining whether such conditions exist there and the work will be continued. The youth who resided with the 14 year old girl and who was charged with rape, is awaiting trial in the superior court and in default of $5000 bail is a prisoner at the county jail.

Broadway Theatre.

The Broadway theatre, "the original vitaphone theatre of Norwich," will show Arthur Train's gripping novel "Illusion", as an all-talking film feature four days beginning Sunday. Those lovable youngsters of "Close Harmony" and "Abie's Irish Rose," Charles (Buddy) Rogers and Nancy Carroll are teamed together again as the trouper sweethearts, who are separated by prosperity and re-united by a queer twist of Fate. The story, which was serialized in the Ladies' Home Journal, deals with the fortunes of a young magician who becomes the lion of the society circles in which he practices his art as a professional entertainer. He finds himself drawn by two worlds—the world of bedizened dowagers and haughty sophisticates—and the world of troupers, show-people, his own kind. Charles (Buddy) Rogers plays the role of the young magician. Nancy Carroll is co-featured in the role of the dancing-singing vodvil performer with whom he falls in love. There are a number of thrilling sequences in the picture induced by the natural plot suspense and by the dangers of the life of necromancy which Rogers practices.

Several songs are introduced effectively in the plot. One of the principal numbers, "Revolutionary Rhythm," is sung and danced by Buddy and Nancy and is developed in a night club sequence with Lillian Roth, former Vanities star, singing and dancing it with the support of a dazzling chorus of fast-stepping chorines in unique "revolutionary" costumes. A cast of eminent actors, many of them veterans of the speaking stage, support the featured pair. Among them are June Collyer, Kay Francis, Regis Toomey, Eugenie Besserer, William Austin and Emilie Melville.

In addition to "Illusion," the Broadway is featuring Louise Fazenda in "Hot Lemonade," a joyous all-talking comedy, also James Barton, who never smiles in "It Happened to Him," and the latest issue of the Paramount Sound News, "the headlines in sight and sound."

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Little Joe Otter's Smallest Cousin.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

This truth you'll heed if you are wise;
'Tis vain to judge one by his size.
—Shadow the Weasel.

Flip the Terrier felt that he was well acquainted with the Weasel family. He had met several members of that family and each in turn had discomfited him. Jimmy Skunk had discomfited him very much indeed. Never so long as he lived would he annoy Jimmy Skunk again. Jimmy had taught him a lesson that would last a lifetime. Billy Mink had discomfited him. He knew for a certainty now that it would be useless for him ever to try to catch Billy Mink. Quick as Flip was, Billy Mink was quicker. Little Joe Otter had discomfited him, for he had made Flip the laughing stock of the Smiling Pool. You see, Flip had fallen down Little Joe's slippery slide.

Flip and Bowser were on their way back from the Smiling Pool by way of the Old Orchard. They were plodding along near the old stonewall on one side of the Old Orchard when Flip's bright eyes discovered a little yellowish-green animal with a white waistcoat running along the top of the old wall. Instantly Flip went after him. He was a slim little fellow, this stranger—the slimmest person Flip had ever seen. At first Flip thought he was a member of the Squirrel family; but almost at once he realized that he had never seen a Squirrel so long and slim of body. Nor did this fellow his a Squirrel's tail.

The little stranger disappeared between the stones of the old wall. Flip scratched at them furiously and barked and barked. A movement just ahead of him caught his attention. There sat this little stranger on top of a big stone and he actually was spitting angrily at Flip. Flip stopped barking in sheer astonishment. He was accustomed to having those whom he chased run away and appear scared. This little stranger didn't appear scared at all. Instead, he appeared to be angry. He was angry. He was telling Flip just what he thought of him and they were not nice things at all.

Flip drew a long breath, scrambled up on the old stonewall and started for this impudent little stranger. He disappeared so completely as if he had dissolved into thin air. Flip paused bewildered. He looked around with the most perplexed expression on his face. And there only a couple of feet behind him sat that impudent little stranger, snarling and spitting as angrily as before.

Flip heard Bowser chuckle. Bowser was sitting down just outside the bushes that grow along the old wall, and it was very evident that Bowser was enjoying a little joke all his own. "What are you laughing at?" demanded Flip crossly.

"Seeing you trying to do the impossible," replied Bowser.

"What is the impossible?" demanded Flip.

"To catch Shadow the Weasel," replied Bowser.

At the word "Weasel" Flip pricked up his ears. "Do you mean to tell me that fellow is a member of the Weasel family?" he asked.

Bowser nodded. "He is Little Joe Otter's smallest cousin," said he. "And you might just as well try to catch a dancing sunbeam as to try to catch Shadow. He is just as quick as his cousin, Billy Mink, and being smaller, he can hide just that much more easily. You can see for yourself that he isn't the least bit afraid of you. He hasn't run away. He has remained right here to tell you what he thinks about you. If you want to be made to look the most foolish dog in all the Great World, just stay here and try to catch Shadow the Weasel. I'm going home."

"Flip hesitated a second. "So am I," he declared suddenly, and turning his back on Shadow, he leaped down from the old stone wall and trotted along by Bowser's side. He didn't look back even once.

SENATOR BINGHAM TO SPEAK AT SALEM PUBLIC LIBRARY DEDICATION

United States Senator Hiram Bingham and Lieut. Governor Ernest E. Rogers are to be the principal speakers at the dedicatory exercises for the new Salem public library this (Saturday) morning at 10:30 o'clock. The date for the dedicatory exercises was originally set for later in the month, but has been advanced to accommodate Senator Bingham and Lieut. Gov. Rogers so as to avoid conflicting engagements which they had.

It is through the generosity of Senator and Mrs. Bingham and Mrs. Alfred Mitchell that the town is to have the new building, which will make a beautiful and useful contribution to the community of Salem. Due to the advanced date for the dedication, the building is not entirely ready for public use yet, for about a week's work remains to be done before it will be ready for occupancy and at that time there will be a public opening and inspection.

The new library is located on Salem street, which is a part of the Hartford turnpike. The land for the library site was donated by Senator Bingham and the money for the building was given by Senator and Mrs. Bingham and Mrs. Mitchell.

The library is a colonial type structure of frame construction and was built at an estimated cost of $8,000. It is 36 by 24 feet in dimensions with an attractive entrance of colonial design. Stone steps lead to the entrance door with wrought-iron ornamental railing.

The exterior lines are enchanced by an attractive cupola on the roof and stone chimneys at each end. The roof is of the gambrel type and is shingled.

The main floor has a vestibule five feet four inches by three feet eight inches inside the entrance door and the rest of the interior is open. There are open fireplaces at each end. The basement is of concrete construction, plastered inside. The heating system is located in one corner of the basement and the rest is to be devoted to storage space.

SHOWER WITH BRIDGE, FOR MISS ANNIE FISCHER

A delightful shower and bridge was given by the shack boys and girls at Uncas-on-Thames for Miss Annie Fischer, in honor of her approaching marriage to Richard Herbert of this city.

The first event on the program was a mock marriage, cleverly gotten up by the shack girls. Miss Peg O'Keefe taking the part of the bride, and towering yards, it seemed over the poor hen-pecked looking groom, portrayed by little Miss Ruth Hansen. The attendants, Ruth Kinney, Kay Vardion, Evelyn Leipziger and Ella Fitzgibbons were in original costumes, which added enormously to this event. Miss Mary O'Keefe as the minister was the feature of the wedding. Her ceremony so cleverly gotten up was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Dr. Hugh B. Campbell made a presentation speech when Miss Fischer received a number of beautiful gifts given the bride-to-be by the shack girls and the staff.

The shack boys more than assisted in the success of the party by coming forth with a delightful surprise shower. A huge basket of the most interesting looking packages with an original verse tied to each. This shower consisted of any number of useful things.

The party came to a close at 7 in the evening, the bridge prizes having been won by Miss Kay Vardion and Elijah Gaudette. The consolation prizes went to Ben Johnson and Miss Ruth Kinney.

The shack was beautifully decorated and delightful refreshments served.

UNITED WORKERS' PUBLIC HEALTH NURSING DEPARTMENT

Describing the work carried on by the public health nursing department of the United Workers an active member of that organization said:

"When you see the nurse in the gray uniform carrying her bag on her arm, does it ever occur to you what her objective is, or is she seen so frequently that you take her as a matter of course, and just don't think at all what she is doing?

"To be sure much of her time is spent with the acutely and chronically ill. But she also has a greater objective—better health for the coming generation. Instructing and teaching the parents before the child is ever born, to give every opportunity to the youngster of today for a healthy body through life. So the nurse watching the infant develop, advises the mother on routine for her baby, fresh air, sunshine, clothing, cleanliness and diet, following the directions of the physician in this last respect.

"The child who has had contact with a tuberculous patient is her special concern and a periodical chest examination is recommended. Inoculations for diphtheria are urged for all children after six months. She does not stop her interest at school age, all the way along the line to the adult, she is watching the pitfalls. She is interested in the health and welfare of every individual in the community.

"Yearly examinations for all, chest examinations for the cough that hangs on, loss of weight and that tired feeling. Her work is always carried on with the co-operation of the family physician. The public health nursing department of the United Workers has seven nurses on their staff. These nurses are available to all people. They are your nurses at your service when occasion arises."

Use imagination and a little sugar to make vegetable foods delicious

Few things are more important than balanced diet in promoting health

COOKING experts are using their ingenuity to develop delicious methods of preparing vegetables. A well-known expert furnishes us this recipe for Polish Beets:

Peel 12 small cooked beets and mince fine with a fork. Put in a saucepan and sprinkle with a tablespoon of sugar. Add a tablespoon of vinegar, 1 tablespoon of salt and pepper and heat. Melt 2 tablespoons of butter and blend with it 1 tablespoon of flour. Stir this into the mixture. Add ½ cup sour cream and heat.

Whatever recipe you are using and whatever vegetable you are cooking, try adding a dash of sugar for a new, enjoyable flavor. This is an old secret recently rediscovered. It is not the purpose of the sugar to make the vegetables taste sweet. The dash of sugar brings out the delicate flavors of the foods and blends these with the seasonings used. Sugar is the master blender and the supreme condiment. It is the right hand of successful cookery.

Serve a varied, balanced diet—at least two cooked vegetables and at least two fruits daily. See that each member of your family drinks milk and eats milk desserts. You can often make meats more appetizing by adding a dash of sugar while cooking. Use a dash of sugar to improve meat gravies, sauces and soups. Learn the art of serving colorful and satisfying desserts. A bit of sweet makes the meal complete. The Sugar Institute.

Progress

'Planes a-flyin' through the air—
Radios a-squawkin';
'Chimes a-buzzin' everywhere;
It's no use a-talkin'
World am goin' right along,
Else I am mistaken—
Moves at such a risky speed
Sets my nerves a-quakin'.

Used to wash de clothes by hand—
Up and down a-rubbin',
Now we turn de power on—
Let it do de scrubbin'.
Likewise when we plows de field,
Tractor goes a-speedin'—
Covers furrows up so quick
Chickens lose der feedin'.

Dey say it's lack of exercise
Dat brings on operation,
De hospital am de busiest place
In all de whole creation;
But dey can take a man apart
Just like dey do a flivver,
And put some stitches in his heart
And patches on his liver.
Folks mostly used to be engaged
Before the marriage started
But now three headlines am displayed—
"Tied up," "Fell out" and "Parted."
To tell de truth in summin' up—
To weigh it to de letter—
I don't know whether dis old world
Am gettin' worse or better.

Prophet And Fool

From twigs of visionary boughs
I gather berries red and rare.
I twine around my pallid brows
An insubstantial dryad's hair.

Such song I hear in mission halls,
As Jason heard in violet seas;
While bodiless birds sing madrigals
In tumult round my head and knees.

The draper-shops that light their jets
To blink along the lanes of mire,
Weave splendors round the muddy sets
And tip my feet with points of fire.

For I pursue the Golden Fleece
Down slum-ways magical and cool;
And there I hear the flutes of peace,
Being a prophet and a fool.

STAGE SET FOR COOLIDGE-TRUMBULL WEDDING TODAY

More Than 1,500 Giant Yellow Chrysanthemums Have Been Brought From California to Decorate the Church—The Entire Edifice Will Be Transformed Into Bowers of Autumnal Beauty For the Event—Tents Have Been Erected to Supply Refreshments For 400 Guests—Large Numbers of Gifts Have Arrived at the Trumbull Home.

PLAINVILLE, Conn., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Final preparations for the wedding tomorrow afternoon of Florence Trumbull, daughter of Governor John H. Trumbull of Connecticut, and John Coolidge, son of former President Calvin Coolidge, were made today as florists, caterers and carpenters completed their plans.

The Congregational church where the ceremony will take place and the Trumbull home which will be the scene of the wedding reception will be transformed into bowers of autumnal beauty for the event.

More than fifteen hundred giant yellow chrysanthemums, transported from California by special car, will be used in the decoration of the church. Yellow pom-poms, smilax and palms are to complete the decorative scheme.

Bronze receptacles six feet tall, filled with the large chrysanthemums, will be spaced along the two aisles, closing in the center section where the eighty two guests will be seated during the ceremony. Pyramid candleabra holding tall waxed tapers are to be placed in front of the pipe organ, which will be screened by masses of palms and smilax.

The entry of the little church will be decorated by a plaque of chrysanthemums, yellow gladioli and pernet roses, surrounded by a bank of maiden hair ferns.

The home of Governor Trumbull also will be decorated with chrysanthemums, ranging from pale yellow to burnt orange tints. If the weather permits the reception will be held on the extensive grounds surrounding the house, where tents already have been erected to supply refreshments for the 400 guests.

John Coolidge and his bride will receive those who come to wish them happiness in the sunken garden at the rear of the house.

Six silvered airplanes will surmount the wedding cake which is to hold the center of the flower-decked bridal table. They will be added to the cake as a tribute to Governor Trumbull, the bride's father, whose interest in aviation has earned him the title of the "flying governor."

The cake is the handiwork of Isaac Fish, chief steward of the Shuttle Meadow Country club, a Czecho-Slovakian, who has known the Trumbull family for fifteen years. It is to be thirty six inches square, designed in tiers and coated with white frosting.

Gifts have arrived at the Trumbull home in such large numbers that many of them remain yet unopened. Those which have been opened fill three rooms on the second floor of the house and are constantly guarded by detectives.

Among them is a large silver bowl which bears the inscription "presented to Mr. John Coolidge on the occasion of his marriage by the heads of the diplomatic missions Washington."

Near it are two dozen jars of vegetables, the gift of a former cook in the Trumbull household, and a lace center-piece given by a servant in the Coolidge home.

Oriental rugs, antique furniture, silverware and bric-a-brac comprise the rest of the gifts.

The wedding service, which is to be brief, will be conducted by the Reverend Kenneth Welles of Albany, former pastor of the Congregational church at Northampton, Mass., where the thirtieth president of the United States now makes his home. He will be assisted by the Rev. J. Roy Wilkerson, pastor of the Plainville Congregational church. Only relatives and intimate friends of the two families will witness the ceremony. Miss Jean Trumbull will attend her sister as maid of honor and Mr. Stephan Brown of Northampton will act as John Coolidge's best man.

Ex-President and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge are expected to arrive at the Trumbull home shortly before the ceremony and will proceed to the church with the bridal party.

John Coolidge, who arrived for the wedding rehearsal on Saturday, has been a week end guest at the home of his bride. Members of the wedding party are being entertained at the homes of relatives and friends of the Trumbull family.

Governor and Mrs. Tumbull were host to the wedding party today at a mid-day dinner given at the Shuttle Meadow Country club and entertained them at a buffet supper tonight in their home on Farmington avenue.

Plans for the honeymoon of the bridal pair have not been revealed, although it is reported that they include a trip through New England and a visit to the Plymouth, Vermont, homestead of the Coolidges.

COOLIDGE—TRUMBULL GIFT SENT BY PLANE

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Miss Maude Irving Tait, local girl flier, hopped off this afternoon for New Haven, bearing a radio set as a gift to Major John Coolidge and Miss Florence Trumbull, who are to be married tomorrow. HIGHWAY CLOSED TO AUTOS DURING THE WEDDING

PLAINVILLE, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Two blocks of state highway number six, which passed through West Main street, here, will be closed to automobile traffic from 3 to 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon during the wedding of Florence Trumbull and Major John Coolidge.

The closed zone will be used as a parking area for wedding guests. The Bristol-Plainville trolley cars will be permitted to make only one stop in the area to discharge passengers who may attend the wedding or the reception.

During the two hour period, traffic will be re-routed over Canal and Washington streets.

AGED PRISONER DIED IN HOUSE OF DETENTION

NEW YORK, Sept. 22—(AP)—Charles F. Rideal, sentenced to four years in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., on charges of using the mails to defraud in connection with stock sales, died today in the federal house of detention. He was 75 years old. An ambulance surgeon said death was due to natural causes.

Rideal and Richard H. Woolfall, 65, both Englishmen, were convicted of mail fraud charges Sept. 13 in federal court, the first convictions obtained by United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle in his campaign against fake stock sales and financial bucket shops. Woolfall, for whom the jury recommended mercy, was sentenced to serve one year and a day and both men then were sent to the federal house of detention to await transportation to Atlanta.

At the trial both Rideal and Woolfall insisted they believed all the representation they had made with respect to the securities they sold. Assistant United States Attorney Thomas T. Cooke introduced a letter written by Rideal to a friend in London in 1903 in which Rideal wrote the only things Americans were good for was to make money out of them and "when it comes to that they are as silly a set of geese as ever were plucked by the human hand."

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 22. (AP)—Commutation by Governor Roosevelt of the sentence of Bert N. Garstin, journalist sent to prison for life in June, 1928, as a fourth offender under the Baumes law, was announced today at the executive mansion.

Garstin, who was convicted four times for issuing checks on accounts in which there were insufficient funds, receives immediate freedom under the commutation order.

The governor's statement said Garstin's fourth conviction, which under the Baumes law called for a mandatory life sentence, was for issuing a check for $300. The governor's statement pointed out that Garstin was an experienced and able journalist, that his four offenses were spread over 21 years, and that they were all said to have been committed while Garstin was under the influence of liquor.

The statement said the sentencing judge and the district attorney, as well as many newspapermen and publishers, had urged clemency.

White House Request To Senator Howell

Calls For "Definite Facts" of Prohibition Law Violations in the District of Columbia.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22—(AP)—The white house late today issued a statement calling upon Senator Howell, republican, Nebraska, for "definite facts" supporting his charges of prohibition law violations in the District of Columbia, in connection with which he asserted that the liquor laws could be enforced here if the president insisted upon it.

After saying that the chief executive is confident the Nebraskan would not make such charges unless they were based upon definite information as to the times and places of violations, the statement asserted that if the senator would lay any such information before the department of justice, a vigorous investigation would follow. It is intended, the statement added, that prohibition enforcement in the District of Columbia should be made a model for the rest of the country.

The statement also said that Senator Howell's charges seriously impugned the good faith of the enforcement officials.

Howell's remarks were made yesterday in the senate. He said that the president could enforce the dry laws in Washington if he insisted upon it and suggested that Mr. Hoover call the officials of the capital together and threaten to employ secret service agents to gather information regarding liquor law violations. He could tell the district officials, Howell said, "that if the secret service gets the violators before you do, you are out."

The complete text of the white house statement follows:

"Senator Howell's statement that the prohibition law is not being enforced impugns the good faith and capacity impugns the good faith and capacity of Commissioner Dougherty, in charge of police, Superintendent of Police Pratt, District Attorney Rover, and Prohibition Agent William Blandford. The president is glad the senator has raised the question. He is confident that the senator would not make these charges unless they were based upon definite facts with time and place, and if he will lay any such information before the department of justice, the president will have the matters vigorously investigated, for it is the intention not only to secure the fullest enforcement in the district possible under the organization of enforcement agencies as provided by law, but to make it a model in the country. Moreover, it is only fair to give to the district officials an opportunity to meet such charges."

The Vinces was brought in by coast guard boat 290, commanded by Boatswain A. C. Cornell. As with the Vinces, the customs collector here decided that the William Landry was taken in New York state waters. The 290 escorted the Marion.

DENIAL OF OUTBREAK OF CIVIL WAR IN CHINA

SHANGHAI, Sept. 22.—(AP) —Leaders of the nationalist government today said that reports of a fresh outbreak of civil war "in any part of China are groundless."

These denials by officials came as the result of many and conflicting rumors during the past few days alleging that reactionaries had again taken up arms against the central government in Nanking.

Outstanding among these reports was one from Japanese sources stating that the Cantonese Fourth division, known as "The Ironsides," which in recent months had been stationed at Ichang, Hupeh, had shown a tendency to return to Kwangtung province and possibly join the Kwangsi reactionaries in an attempt to overthrow the present Canton government which is favorable to Nanking. This division gained their nickname by their brilliant campaign as the spearhead of the nationalist forces triumphant advance in 1926 from Canton to Peking in which they achieved a long list of victories against the northerners with no defeats.

PANTAGES MURDER CASE IS NEARING THE END

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 22. (AP)—After one more day of summation of evidence, a jury of five women and seven men, trying Mrs. Lois Pantages, on a second-degree murder charge, was expected to begin deliberation of the fate of the vaudeville magnate's wife. Today, however, the 12 jurors relaxed on a padlocked hotel roof after spending yesterday under guard visiting Los Angeles county's fair.

The trial has been marked by sensations varying in nature from charges made by the Rev. R. P. Shuler that the jury was hung before testimony taking began and intimations by prosecutors that perjury complaints would be drawn against two defense witnesses, to a surprise attack by five defense medical experts. These witnesses launched an onslaught on th state's premise that Mrs. Pantages was responsible for Juror Rokumoto's death caused by injuries received in an automobile collision June 16, because they charged, she was intoxicated when she drove into his car.

NEW HAVEN CLUBHOUSE WAS RUINED BY FIRE

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 22. (AP)—The question of a new home for the New Haven Lawn club to replace the main clubhouse partly burned, but wholly ruined by fire Saturday afternoon with a loss placed at upwards of $40,000, will be determined this week by the board of governors. The origin of the fire has been definitely placed in a log fire kindled in the fireplace in the main dining room to warm it up for a banquet for the Graduate club, which had been prepared for the evening. The odor of the wood in the fireplace masked the smell of burning casement around the chimney and the fire was well developed in the partitions before servants saw it.

A party of ladies at lunch in a small room were told of the fire, waiters got their wraps and escorted each to the door without a flurry. The employes in the club were unable to save much, and the loss of furniture, tableware and the silverware on the banquet tables, was total.

They went to the home of Mrs. Shuler, but denied themselves to interviewers. Detectives questioned them in an effort to find some incident in the artist's life that might give them some clue to a motive for the murder.

The artist had been with them in Maine until a week before he was summoned to the door of his home last Thursday night and shot through the heart. Neighbors saw two men run from the house immediately after the single shot was fired.

Police searched today for two Negroes whom Whiteside helped send to jail more than two years ago for robbing his house. Since their release from prison they have been living in Wilmington, Del., but were said to have disappeared from there five days ago.

Weir and two friends, Harry Evans of New York and Charles Greening of Montclair, N. J., spent Saturday evening visiting friends and returned to Weir's apartment about 3 o'clock this morning to spend the night.

Police said Greening and Evans were in the living room of the apartment when Greening, dancing into the bed room, saw Weir attempting to balance himself on the window ledge. The two men hurried into the bed room, detectives said, to pull their friend to safety, but arrived only in time to see him topple and fall into the courtyard. They ran to the courtyard and carried the body to the street, where an ambulance surgeon said Weir had died of a fractured skull.

RECEIVES BROKEN BONE IN AUTO ACCIDENT

DANIELSON, Sept. 22.—The weekend in this territory produced a number of motor vehicle accidents, none of them of a highly serious nature, but sufficiently aggravated to require the appearance in court Monday, or some time thereafter, of operators of some of the automobiles.

Victor Nowak of Ballouville has a broken bone in one foot as the result of a crash in which the motorcycle he was riding had with a car operated by Wilfred Aubin, also of Ballouville. Both were traveling in the same direction when the accident occurred, and the state officer who checked up on the happening ordered Aubin to appear in the town court here to answer to a charge that he had failed to give a proper signal, as to his car operating intentions.

Cars operated by Charles Tetreault of Putnam and Robert Morrison of Goodyear crashed last night on the Elmville-East Killingly road near Bonneau's dance hall. There were no serious injuries to occupants of the cars. State Officer John Murphy, who made the checkup, ordered Morrison into court to answer to a charge that he failed to grant the right of way.

A wrecked Studebaker abandoned on the Putnam-Providence highway was the subject of investigation by state officers from the Danielson barracks today. It was one of what may be termed the products of last night. Three kegs were found in the machine, a matter of particular interest to the state police. Some time today Frank Nyack of Willimantic, in whose name the car is registered, reported to the Willimantic police that his car was stolen about 11 o'clock last night. Notwithstanding, State Officer John Murphy was out investigating this afternoon, and more about this case may develop later.

Frank Greene of Plainfield also will make a court appearance in that town to face a charge of violation of the road that it will 55 claimed by the prosecution resulted from his negligence. His car crashed Saturday with another car operated by George Hubbard, also of Plainfield, at a highway junction on roads leading to Packer and to Canterbury. Sergeant G. L. Gardner of the Danielson barracks investigated the accident, in which no one was injured.

Saturday in the Killingly town court William D. Bowers of Amesbury was fined $5 and costs by Judge W. Penner Woodward as the result of an accident in which the car Bowers was operating figured at South Killingly. The machine crashed with a horse-drawn vehicle being driven by Earl Phillips of that community. One of the horses was injured so badly in the crash that the services of a veterinarian were required. One of the horses, somehow, kicked or otherwise damaged the Bowers car. Both Bowers and Phillips escaped without serious injury.

The coming hunting season will have many limitations for men who go afield with dog and gun. These men, under restrictive laws, will be forbidden to shoot partridge or quail and may only legally kill male pheasants. Woodcock may be taken by them.

WEDDING
Lockwood-Stanton

A pretty wedding Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Stanton, Broad street, was that of their daughter, Miss Methel Miner Stanton, and George Russell Lockwood of Hartford. The double ring service was used, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Albert H. Stanton, an uncle of the bride, now pastor-at-large and superintendent of evangelism for the Baptists of New Jersey. The wedding march was played by the bride's sister, Miss Grace Stanton, a teacher in Killingly's schools. The bride's gown was of blue transparent velvet and her bouquet an arrangement of Talisman roses. Only the immediate relatives were in attendance. After a brief trip Mr. and Mrs. Lockwood will live in a newly furnished home at 47 Hebron street, Hartford.

The bride is a graduate of Killingly High school and of the New Britain State Normal school, and has been a teacher in the schools of Hartford for several years. The groom is a graduate of the Massachusetts Agricultural college at Amherst.

There appears to be some misconception in some quarters relative to the drive for the Day Kimball hospital fund that is now going on here. This particular effort, under the auspices of the Killingly Woman's club and in special charge of a hospital committee headed by Mrs. R. D. Banigan, has to do with obtaining contributions of money—not hospital supplies. At the present time the hospital needs money, not articles, because with cash the institution's representatives can buy to better advantage and get whatever it desires in uniform sizes. Some five and ten dollar contributions have been received by Mrs. Banigan during the past week, but many who have received letters relative to the drive had not responded up to Saturday evening. That they may have an opportunity to do so, the period for giving has been extended one week, to September 30. Gifts even as small as a dollar will be welcomed.

Saturday morning the funeral of Henry Boccali was held from L. E. Kennedy's funeral home with services at St. James' church at 9 o'clock, Rev. Alphonse Bergin, M. S., was celebrant of the high mass of requiem. Burial was in Holy Cross cemetery. The bearers were Michael Espinosa, George Davignon, George B. Guild and Leo Biladoeau.

For the first time in the history of the town, all of the eighth grade pupils from the various communities of Killingly—Dayville, Goodyear, Attawaugan, Ballouville, East Killingly, Killingly Center and South Killingly—are now assembled and studying in the Junior High school here in Danielson. This concentration of eighth grade school work has been finally accomplished after several years' effort, and is held to be to the great advantage of the pupils, all enjoying the better facilities of the Danielson school, all receiving the same approved instruction and all having the same valuable contacts. With the reception here the past week of three eighth grade pupils from the East Killingly district the consolidation of eighth grade work was completed.

Development of the new hotel that Earl C. Rogers, owner and landlord of the Putnam Inn, is to give Danielson is expected to be underway in a week to ten days. Mr. Rogers has been busy with plans for enlargement of the T. E. Hopkins homestead since acquiring the propert ay fortnight ago, and is about decided on the major part of the work to be done.

Leo Glockman, who had a flirtation with death at the Franklin street crossing here Friday morning, has been discharged from the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam and has returned to his home in Providence.

If your auto is driven by a minor, between 16 and 18, you must file proof of responsibility at motor vehicle department. See Reeves, Insurance, Danielson, Conn.—Adv.

This afternoon at American Legion hall there was a meeting of those who, with members of the Legion, are arranging for the observance of Armistice day in Danielson.

Joseph C. DeForest of New Bedford was a visitor with friends in Danielson today.

"Don't try to drive them around— it can't be done any more." This bit of wisdom came today from one interested in politics in Danielson and has to do with the coming town election, and, incidentally applies to various other features and phases of life.

Following the examination and admission of electors by town officials on Saturday it may be said that the books are closed for this year, insofar as new voters coming is concerned. The voters mare Saturday will cast their first ballots in the annual town election the first Monday in October.

This morning the apparatus at the central station responded to a four stroke alarm to extinguish a chimney fire in a house owned by the Bloom Mfg. Co., at 8 Church street. LOST TACKLE FOUND BY SATURDAY ANGLER

Wednesday last, George Wilcox, probably eliminated all other contestants for the prize offered by J. B. LeClaire, for the largest black bass taken in local waters, during the open season of 1929. He caught a large-mouth bass, which weighed on the official scales 5 pounds, 15 oz.

Returning, George had the somewhat ancient tale to tell of the big one he lost, adding that the failure to land the fish was made more bitter because attached to it was his perfectly good $1.25 Oreno plug, fitted with three sets of triangle gang hooks. Old fishermen grinned, sympathized with George, agreeing that it was "pretty tuff." Sequel—Saturday, three days later, Bennie Oska, trolling through the same bend, got a great strike, and landed a bass that weighed 5 pounds and 8 ounces on Edmond Jodoin's official scales. Fastened in the side of the fish's jaw was George Wilcox's, Oreno plug, a 12-inch gut leader and 7 feet of silk line.

Anglers were much interested, with the older ones recalling the time during the low waters of 1896. An item in The Bulletin, and a letter from the Out of Doors editor of Forest and Stream, tell the story.

The late Arthur C. Ladd, then the Jewett City postmaster, hooked a bass, in the fist bend, below Burton's cove. Thel ate A. A. Young, r., was also in the boat. Mr. Ladd, an expert fisherman, failed to bring his catch to the net, on account of too little water room. The bass, in one of its dashes, entangled the line in a pile of partly submerged brush that clogged the narrow channel. The line parted and the fish was lost. The next day Thomas McBroome, along towards evening was trying for bull-heads in a hole below the point where Mr. Ladd had fished the preceeding day. Tom said, he kept hearing a splashing around the bend, but supposed some one was throwing sticks for a dog to retrieve from the water. The splashing continued so long, that Tom going to investicate with his lantern, made out that it was a great fish. By means of his own pole he secured the end of the line and drew the bass to the bank. Attached to it was a red No. 3 Skinner spoon and 18 feet of line which Mr. Ladd readily identified as his. In order to determine the ownership, the late James H. Finn sought advices through the Forest and Stream. The return letter declared that the last man that takes a fish from the water is its owner. Hiram Miner declared that the bass weighed six pounds flat.

BLINDED BY HEADLIGHT DRIVER'S MACHINE SKIDS

Albert Cadieux, Charles Belisle and Agelas Gadue, all of Hill street, in a Chevrolet car, went off the state highway and halfway down the bank near the Shetucket railroad switch Saturday night about 10:30. The young men were traveling south, when a freight train came toward them the headlight blinding the driver. The machine skidded and turned around, going through the fence and down the bank. The three were taken to Backus hospital, Norwich, returning to Jewett City Sunday. Cadieux lost several teeth and had cuts and bruises on his face and neck. The other boys were bruised and cut.

Harold F. Geer and Dr. Frank D. Browning were witnesses of the accident in which Captain Wilmo, a human "cannon ball" was probably fatally injured when shot from a synthetic cannon that went wrong at Springfield fair.

SUPPER, CHURCH MEETING AND INSTALLATION HELD

A covered-dish supper, business meeting and installation was held in the Baptist church Thursday evening. It was primarily to get together that the official family, the officers of all groups and organizations, and all committeemen with the installation open to the public. Elmer and Harry West, Harry Denison, Olney Pratt, and Iga Baker assisted the pastor, Rev. R. W. S. DeWolfe inu preparing the meal. Mrs. Seaton, Mrs. Playdon, Mrs. DeWolfe, Mrs. Sanderson, Dorothy and Marjorie Mortimer aided also. A unique feature in arranging for the supper was that the pastor conferring with Mrs. Denison, Mrs. Hyde and Mrs. Roberts sent out letters requesting certain contributions of food, leaving it to the honor and interest of all to come and bring the food making due allowance for enforced absences. Almost 100 per cent attendance and cooperation were the result. Then astor led cheers, yells and songs during the eating. All turned to and helped clear up. The people then were arranged in certain forms to dramatize the installation. The deacons and trustees sat in the form of a cross, with the officers of each church organization and committee making a heart-shaped encirclement including the officers of the Men's Forum, the Church school, the Young People, the Ladies' Aid society. At the pastor's right was the choral society which has en enrollment of twenty voices, led by Mrs. Lewis Hoar, and on the left was the care-taker of the church, Harry Denison. There was one group which personified those who haven ot tasks such as call for lime-light importance but who attend, worship, pray and give, upholding the hands of their elected and appointed officials. Another group represented those of occasional interest in religious things, and yet another group was the Boosters' committee, composed of men who stand ready to help do things which must be done, in which their help is needed.

A ball game between teams of the two mills will be played at the Carpet grounds at 3:30, those coming from Worcester will be transported by bus, and the game trucks will carry the employes of both mills to Moosup pond, where the management serve a lunch on Dupuis' beach. In the evening there will be a dance in Beveau's pavilion, with music furnished by Dalbec's orchestra.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy A. Playdon and family are visiting friends in Fitchburg where they used to live and where they will renew acquaintance in the American Woolen mills of Fitchburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Daus, of Springfield, Mass., have been guests at Roy Playdon's. Mr. Daus is district manager of a sweeper company.

FUNERAL
Dr. William Waldo Adams

Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock the funeral of Dr. William Waldo Adams was held from his residence in Moosup. Rev. A. Elwyn Tingley, pastor of the Methodist church, read scripture passages, also several prayers from the Episcopal service selected by Mrs. Adams. A friend of Dr. Adams, Jehu Downs, of Waureean sang, In The Garden and Jesus, Saviour, Pilot Me, accompanied by Everett S. Johnson, organist of the Methodist Episcopal church. The bearers were Harold B. Morey of Sterling, Charles Brass, Central Village, Fred Swan, Waureean, Bradford W. Danielson, William H. Haywood and John C. Gallup, of Moosup. There were exceptionally beautiful flowers which were artistically arranged by Miss Florence Baker and Mrs. Lowell Salisbury. Many friends filled the house and stood about the grounds, unable to get near enough to hear the service. Those from out of town attending included Mrs. Ray Payne, Miss Anna Payne, of Block Island, Christopher S. Lyons, Assonet, John B. Stanton, Norwich, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ayer, Dayville and Sprague Gallup, of Boston. The Windham County Medical society was represented by Drs. Overlock, Morrell, Phillips, Russell and Murphy of Putnam, Dr. Garcin of Dayville, Drs. Todd and Panner of Danielson and Dr. Chase of Plainfield, Dr. Gardner of Central Village, Drs. Bouvier and Allen, Moosup, Dr. H. C. Dixon, Norwich, Rev. William C. Prentice, pastor of Plainfield Congregational church and Rev. R. W. DeWolfe, pastor of Moosup Baptist church, were in attendance. Burial was in Union cemetery, Moosup.

Dr. Adams camef rom a long line of honorable ancestry, dating from the earliest settlement in New England. He was born in Canterbury, April 15, 1869, the only son of William S. and Helen Waldo Adams.

He was educated in Canterbury, Plainfield Academy, University of Vermont and was graduated from Bellevue Medical college, New York, in 1891. He also took special courses in the Lying-In hospital, New York and at the Vanderbilt clinic. In the summer of 1891 he located in Moosup, as assistant to Dr. Frank Burgess, remaining with him until the following spring, when he opened his own office in the house known as the Richard Ward homestead, Almyville, then owned by Alfred Hill, now of Central Village. Dr. Adams lived with his friends the Hill family, for seven years, until in 1898 he built his present home and married Marcia Hattie Sprague, youngest daughter of the late Albert Barber and Julia Lyon Sprague of Moosup. He was a member of the Windham County Medical society and the Connecticut State Medical association. He served for years as town health officer and medical examiner. He was a director of the Danielson Trust Co., and a trustee of the Brooklyn Savings bank, both of Danielson. He was a member of Moosup lodge, No. 113, A. F. and A. M., of Warren chapter, No. 12, R. A. M., Montgomery council No. 2 R. and S. M., of Danielson, Columbia Commandery, No. 4, Knights Templar and Palestine Temple A. A. O. N. M. S., of Providence. He was a member of the Snake Meadow Country club, the Danielson Rod and Gun club and the X. Y. Z. club, of Moosup.

In politics he was a republican, always interested in the welfare of the town, serving on the town committee.

Moosup's most beloved doctor first felt indisposed Saturday, Sept. 7, and, as his condition grew steadily worse a specialist from Providence was called. Tuesday morning a consultation was held, it being decided to remove the patient to the Jane Brown Memorial hospital in Providence. It being impossible to operate, the supreme call came Tuesday, at 3 p. m. The cause of death was given as acute gangrenous appendix.

During the funeral hour, from 2 to 3 p. m., all business places were closed.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Gallup of Moosup and Mrs. A. A. Bagenmais, of Central Village, are staying with Mrs. Adams.

THE UNTESTED MESSENGERS

New York is once again face to face with the untrustworthy and poorly paid bank messenger. In this latest affair he has gotten away with over a half million in securities, lied about what he did and finally made a confession involving others.

What seems to be unusual in this case is that the young man had been allowed to engage in such work. He had been employed by the bank but a short time. Up to the theft of the securities he had apparently been straightforward but, if his story is true, he was most of the time in conference with the ring leader in the whole scheme. During such appeals as were made to him by the master crook he was paying attention. At least he did not turn a cold shoulder on the proposition even though he could not fail to recognize that any scheme which his friend had for getting rich quickly must be crooked.

Even though the messenger was insured, it was simply a case of putting reliance on the insurance and a 17-year-old boy, susceptible to temptation, whose honesty had been under test only a brief time. To trust him with cash or securities in large amount may have been only such a practice as is followed by the banking institutions of the big city, but the folly of it, and perhaps the folly of insuring messengers under such conditions, is well illustrated by just what has happened.

Because this young man has gone wrong doesn't necessarily mean that suspicion should be cast upon others who are engaged in the same work and are honest to the core, but it shows the need of applying some other test than that of appearance and a few days' work.

Through messengers New York banks have lost large sums of money and yet in spite of the illuminating experiences they have not solved the problem of transferring money and securities so there can be no slip. At least if they have devised a method it was not employed by the bank in question. The young man who has gone wrong has wrecked his whole career but there cannot help being the feeling that such work as he was engaged in should have been entrusted to an employe about whom more was known, one in whom there was real reason for imposing trust and confidence.

DETROIT'S FIRE

In view of what happened and the number of lives that were lost in the fire in the Detroit dining and dance hall, there can be no surprise that several investigations are to be started, or that one of the investigations has been launched with a view to making an inquiry that will center about those who were responsible for issuing the several different licenses that were necessary in running the place.

Here was a place where many people could be found at times and yet, as it was demonstrated, in case of fire there was only one way of getting out of the building and that on this particular occasion was shut off by the fire.

Just how it was possible to obtain a license for a restaurant and a dance hall in such a place, Detroit is justified in finding out. The indications are that there was no investigation of the situation, or else the licenses were issued in violation of the requirements which should be insisted upon in the interest of safety.

Had there been fire escapes at points to which the people fled when the fire shut off the exit there would have been no such loss of life. It was one of those places where a fire had not been anticipated and where measures for the prevention of the loss of life in a quick blaze had not been taken. Perhaps Detroit had not considered it was lax in this respect but this case is bound to awaken greater interest in this respect. Well may it inquire why licenses are demanded for such places if any and all who apply are served whether the place meets with established requirements or not. Certainly the proper amount of protection for the public is to be expected.

It is entirely possible that Detroit will find that that is not the only place of a similar character where there has been a failure to meet the important safety requirements, and that such a sacrifice of life was necessary to get the city's attention centered upon existing conditions. Detroit cannot afford to lose any time finding out all the circumstances, and there is in the Detroit case a good and sufficient lesson to other communities to see that similar conditions do not prevail unbeknown to them.

CANADA'S TRADE

England is a big customer for Canadian wheat, but because it is doesn't necessarily mean that Canada ought to buy all its imports in England. That is what J. H. Thomas, lord privy seal in the British cabinet, would like to see happen and what he is trying to bring about.

Go into Canada and it will be possible to purchase a great variety of goods which have been brought across the Atlantic, but that doesn't mean that all purchases are made there. Canada is a big customer of the United States and in spite of the efforts of Mr. Thomas there are reasons for believing that it will continue to be.

Canada, of course, sells much to this country, but it is also well known and frequently covered by American salesmen and there is full knowledge of the fact that goods from the United States can be delivered quickly while it will take a much longer time to get them from England.

England could go elsewhere for its wheat than Canada. It might buy in this country, or Russia, but in all instances it must transport it over a long distance and it is able to get it as quickly from Canada as anywhere. Other things being equal Canada is the logical place for it to buy wheat. It stands in a different position than does Canada when it starts out to purchase its needs.

There are advantages for Canada in the purchasing of goods in this country and as long as they exist it cannot be blamed if it insists upon getting the full benefit of them. While the British may expect to have close trade relations with their colonies they cannot expect to take all their exports or to furnish all their imports. There is a certain amount of business that must be done with other countries in the natural course of events. It is inevitable for economic reasons. Mr. Thomas may awaken some interest in his proposition but it is not believed that it will result in as great a success as he anticipates. He is striving to bring about the impossible and to turn trade from its natural and long-standing course. It is the case with Canada of doing business where it is to its greatest advantage, and it will be necessary to furnish good and sufficient reason for throwing it into other channels.

THE RIGHT DECISION

President Hoover has declined to have anything to do with the effort to get a release from jail for Harry F. Sinclair. He does this upon the advice of the attorney general, but it is no more than the public in general expected from him.

Just why there should have been any special privileges extended to Mr. Sinclair has never been made plain. He was deliberate in his act for which he was tried, found guilty and sentenced. Because he is a man of means and was able to make a long and hard court fight does not mean that he should be treated with any more consideration than the fellow who would have been obliged to accept the decision of the first court.

It is entirely possible that the time served by Mr. Sinclair will prove more irksome to him than it would have to some others. He has not been accustomed to such experiences. But if the course of the law in his case is going to mean anything, and if it is going to have the proper effect upon others through observing the results in his case, there should be no interference with its application.

There are those who cannot separate themselves from the idea that the law means something for certain people and something else for others. Nothing would confirm that opinion more quickly than to grant a commutation of sentence to Sinclair just because he is Sinclair, and there hasn't appeared anything to show that if the petition had been granted it would have been for any other reason.

President Hoover has reached the right decision and the only one that was to be expected. Anything else would undoubtedly have served to undermine public confidence in the administration of justice.

CHARGES AGAINST MACHADO

If Cuba has been playing fast and loose with the Barlow case it may decide that it has been putting itself in the way of more trouble than it had anticipated. If it hasn't and can prove it, it ought to be able to quickly clear up some of the charges that have been made against it. It is at least time for a show down.

Because of certain charges which have been made against the Machado government, the foreign relations committee of the senate finds it impossible to overlook or sidetrack them further. It is convinced that the truth should be brought to light and it has constituted itself the medium to do it. Evidently it believes that there is much to be learned right at home for it has appealed to Secretary Stimson for information concerning conditions in the island republic. Secretary Stimson has information which might prove or disprove the truth or falsity of the claims that have been made. The department of state is in close touch with charges and reports and should be able to give the committee much valuable inside information relative to complaints, the justification for them and the situation that has been disclosed as the result of inquiries concerning them.

As matters stand the charges made against President Machado indicate that conditions exist in Cuba which ought not to be expected in a constitutional government. In the collection of facts the desire is to find out whether these charges are justified, or whether they have been overdrawn for personal or political purposes. If they are correct Cuba is experiencing government conditions which should be stopped. On the other hand if they are magnified and distorted, or stories made out of thin air, it is time they were so branded in justice to President Machado and the Cuban republic.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Always keep jam in a cool, dark place.

Beets and carrots will keep fresh through the winter if stored in a box of sand.

A pinch of soda added to the water in which spinach is boiled preserves its color and flavor.

Never mix two kinds of vinegar when pickling. Always use the best and purest cider vinegar if you want good pickles.

When making jams do not have the kettle more than two-thirds full, otherwise there will be no room for the jam to boil as it should.

When white kid shoes begin to look shabby rub them with a piece of fine sandpaper, then with a little ammonia. When dry apply liquid shoe polish.

Never squeeze the bag from which the juice drips when making jelly. The pulp in the jelly bag may be reheated three times, thus increasing the amount of jelly.

Keep cucumber pickles always covered with brine. If left uncovered they will become soft. Use a pint of salt to a gallon of soft water in making brine.

Stoppers may be held securely in bottles when traveling if a piece of adhesive tape is placed over them and around the neck of the bottle.

To remove the brown rings that form on tea and coffee cups rub the discolored parts with salt moistened with water. The rings will soon disappear.

Add a cup of grated cheese to the cream sauce before adding the cauliflower when preparing creamed cauliflower. Light colored cheese will not change the color of the cream sauce and will give it a delicious flavor.

To sterilize jars for preserving first wash them thoroughly, then put them into a kettle or boiler of cold water, bring to the boiling point and boil for 15 minutes.

Sweet peppers may be preserved for winter use if after the stems and seed-pods are removed the peppers are cooked in boiling water five minutes, then packed in glass jars.

When making jelly test it with a fork. If the jelly does not run from the tines of the fork it has been boiled long enough. Never test jelly while it is over a flame—remove it.

FOR JELLY MAKERS

Before pouring hot paraffin over newly made jelly, lay a piece of white store string about six inches long over the top of the jelly. When the paraffin is added it will harden over the cord. When the jelly is to be opened it is necessary only to take hold of the two ends of the cord to lift the paraffin cover off.

MEAT.

Meat should never be placed directly on the ice. Ice will draw the flavor from fresh meat. Place the meat directly below the ice chamber on a plate and cover with a piece of waxed paper.

MEAL

When the left-over meat is not quite sufficient for a meal, whip up an omelet and serve that along with what you have. You will enjoy the combination and also have a satisfied feeling about using your left-overs.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Sunshine may be healthful but it is distressing to a patient in warm weather, so keep the window shades in the sickroom pulled down sufficinetly to subdue the light.

Don't be afraid to put your hands in dish water or washing suds just because you have burned or cut them slightly. It is splendid for them and will help the sores to heal.

Those who have learned the secrets of relaxation and deep breathing will always have poise and serenity. It is the habitual nervous tensions and shallow breathing that rob one of youth and beauty, etching deep lines in the face and making the body old before its time.

HOW TO LIGHT THE CARD TABLE

In lighting your card table it is important that the light shines as it should for each of the four who sit around the table. With ordinary lighting it is impossible not to have a glare in some one's eyes or to avoid the table glare that makes it trying for one at the table to watch the cards as they are thrown.

The ideal table light is to be gained from the electric lamps known as bridge lamps. These consist of a wood or metal standard standing on the floor that throws a shaded light about two feet above the table. Such a light should be set at one corner of the table. Usually one electric bulb is quite adequate and there is no reason why you should get a lamp that holds more than one bulb for this purpose.

There are any number of card table accessories that are not at all necessary to the experienced player. There are little devices on which may be registered the choice of trump for the playing of a hand. The real bridge enthusiast rather scorns such accessories. But they are pretty.

WASHING DISHES.

Washing dishes twice a day instead of three times, is the latest labor-saving device for housewives. The principle has been invented by a University of Chicago girl who received a master of arts degree for her study of dishwashing.

Various types of soap and methods of rinsing and drying were tested, but the most interesting conclusions had to do with the organization of the work.

It appeared that the quickest plan was to stack the dishes for three meals and do them up at one operation just before lunch. Thus the day's dishes for a family of four could be cleaned and put away in 22 minutes and 31 seconds, using 1015 movements.

LIGHT EFFECTS.

If you have a dark room or hallway, finish it in yellow paint or paper and see the way it simulates sunshine. Somewhat the same effect can be induced if you use bright yellow curtains at the windows of a dark room.

HANGING MIRRORS.

Never hang a mirror so that the sun shines directly on it. Use mirrors, rather, where they will reflect light into dark corners and give you a sense of more space and sunshine.

DICTATES OF FASHION.

The new brown which fall features is a warm chestnut. Rust orange and other bright tones are used to fleck or trim many worsted suits.

Silver, which will blend in admirably with an early American background, comes in lovely simple shades and is hammered for further beauty.

Delightfully luxurious are change purses and cigaret holders made of Chinese brocade in beautiful shades, and ornamented with carved pieces of white jade.

The young girl will enjoy wearing a flannel ensemble, which consists of a box pleated skirt and stitched cardigan of blue, and a blouse of red with an embroidered emblem in blue.

Autumn shoes are either two colors or two kinds of leather or both in fashioning the most fashionable numbers, both in wine shades and rust.

The white handkerchief overlaid in vivid color is new and decorative for coat pockets this fall. There are many capucine shades, suggesting that summer's preference carries weight with autumn.

A lovely new necklace consists of large beads of carved coral alternating with others of gold. The rondels set between are of crystal and jade, and the clasp is a bit of exquisitely carved jade.

Stunning is a lime-colored chiffon dance frock with long points and fluttering ends. One shoulder strap is of brillants and a bertha of chiffon embroidered in brilliants outlines the low back decolletage.

The college girl who is looking for an ensemble that will serve many purposes will be interested in one of tweed, which is made with a very long coat, and is accompanied by a blouse of egg-shell silk. The coat is fur-trimmed, and is long.

For evening wear, a charming eggshell Alencon jacket is made over pink chiffon and has pink flowers outlined on its own lace pattern. The flaring sleeves and lower edge are scalloped.

JACKET SUIT SMART.

Whether or not the "little jacket suit" would prolong its vogue by appearing in new versions for fall seems to be a settled problem with the appearance of several very charming models in velvet. The collarless jacket seems to be favored while the blouses are either simply tailored in flat crepe or more elaborately designed in metal fabrics.

SHORT COAT FOR EVENING.

Whether the short evening coat so popular this summer would be as smart for fall is a question which recent showings answer satisfactorily. Already the short coat is promising to have a tremendous vogue as it so perfectly carries out the trend of the new silhouette.

LONGER GLOVES

It is somewhat in the nature of a paardox to say that as sleeves grow shorter, gloves grow longer. But at the resorts many of the women are, of course, wearing sleeveless frocks, and with these are worn suede gloves in the neutral tints or white. These are long enough to wrinkle loosely at the wrists.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Soak soiled lace in soapy water to which one tablespoonful of borax has been added. This will loosen the dirt so that no rubbing and little handling will be required on the delicate mesh.

When washing a white silk slip for the first time, put a dessert spoonful of powdered borax into the water, enough to cover the garment, leave soaking for half an hour, then wash in the usual way. Your slip will not then grow yellow with washing.

New wash goods will not fade if dipped into a solution made of 2 tablespoons salt, 1 tablespoon of ammonia, 1 tablespoon of turpentine and a gallon of warm water. Dry without rinsing.

TAKING OUT SPOTS

In directions for cleansing garments or removing stains sponging is frequently recommended. To do this spread the article on a flat surface and use a lintless cloth—a piece of the material itself is best.

If you are merely freshening the garment use clear water to sponge out the wrinkles. If the garment is soiled use mild soap flakes or soap bark dissolved in water and follow this with clear water. To remove the gloss that comes from wear use one tablespoonful ammonia to one quart of water, then clear water. Sponge with light, even strokes in the direction of the warp of the material and use only a little moisture at a time, wringing the sponging cloth out of the cleansing liquid until partially dry.

To sponge out stains lay the fabric wrong side up and apply the stain remover to the back of the goods. Lay a clean piece of blotting paper underneath the stain to absorb the superfluous liquid. Change the blotting paper as it becomes soiled—if you have no blotter handy make a pad by folding several thicknesses of cloth.

HOUSE PESTS

Late summer is the worst time for mosquitoes, flies and moths. See that all screens are tight, that no stale food attracts flies and watch carefully for moths.

RAW VEGETABLES

Raw carrots, beets, potatoes, cabbage, peas and practically every other fresh vegetable make fine beneficial salads when grated fine and marinated with French dressing and served on lettuce or other salad green.

FLOWER CARE

Flowers cut in early morning while the stems are still filled with moisture will remain fresh twice as long as when cut later in the day. Plunge the stems into cold water the minute they are cut. If allowed to stay in water in a cool place several hours before making a bouquet they get "hardened" and will stay fresh for days.

NEW TABLE LINEN

A very dignified and rich looking tablecloth is of heavy cream colored linen embroidered at intervals of 12 inches or more with single flowers in violet or rose color. The embroidery is done in a manner that suggests the old crewel work of our grandmothers' day. Napkins to match are included in the set.

CONCERNING WOMEN

More than 400,000 women and girls in Vienna, Austria, earn their own living.

Forty-one per cent of the passenger automobiles sold in the United States are purchased by women.

The first woman to become a member of a police force in Jugoslavia is Miss Milana Illitch. She is attached to the Belgrade prefecture.

Mrs. Augusta Kusner of Aurora, Ill., recently celebrated her 110th birthday. Scarcely having a day's sickness, she attributes her long life to hard work and not worrying.

Miss Julia Stimson, head of the army nurse corps, is the only woman with the rank, insignia and rights of a major in the United States army; Miss Anita Phipps is in charge of women's activities in the war department, and Miss Beatrice Bowman is head of the navy nurses corps.

CLEAN STOVE

Wipe off your stove with a cloth soaked in vinegar before polishing. This removes all grease.

TAKES OFF RUST

To clean a rusted steel-beaded bag, put it into a box of fine emery dust, close the box and shake it until the bag is clean.

FOOD VARIETY.

Buy a different vegetable every day that you can and see what a real variety you can have in hot weather. When dinner is different each night, the task of preparing it seems less arduous.

RECIPES

Oatmeal Gems: Take one cup of cooked oatmeal, one cup of sweet milk, two teaspoons sugar, one beaten egg, half a teaspoon salt, half a teaspoon of baking soda and one teaspoon of cream of tartar, or one heaping teaspoon of baking powder instead of the baking soda and the cream of tartar, and just enough flour to hold the mixture together. Make the dough in hot gem pans in a quick oven.

Scallop Chowder: Take four medium-sized potatoes, four slices of salt pork, half a small onion sliced, three pints of sweet milk and one quart of scallops. If the scallops are large, cut them in two or more pieces. Use four hard crackers. Peel and slice the potatoes and parboil in a little salted water until nearly soft. Place the pork and onion in a frying pan and cook until the onion is a deep, rich brown color. Remove the scraps of pork and onion and place this gravy in a fairly large saucepan, and add a portion of the milk. When quite hot, add the potatoes. Cook for a short time, then add the scallops with a little salt, pepper and a little cayenne pepper. Mix a scant tablespoonful of flour or cornstarch in with a little cold milk. Add this to the chowder and cook a short time longer. Place the opened crackers in a tureen, having first soaked them in cold water. Pour the chowder over them and serve.

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22—There is something so cautious about Secretary Stimson's comments for publication on important phases of the Anglo-American naval conversations as to arouse special attention of any Washington on-looker.

Even Mr. MacDonald's announcement of his sailing date, clinching his plan to visit Washington, failed to shake the Stimson attitude of conservatism.

Looking back over the naval conversation news files, the Bystander finds only one development over which Mr. Stimson allowed himself to wax enthusiastic in public. He hailed MacDonald's acceptance of naval "parity" with what, for Stimson, was a shout of triumph.

The cause of his elation was hard to understand, since Lord Balfour at the Washington conference in 1921 had accepted British-American naval parity fully and without reservation as to any type of fighting ship. British spokesmen have never, at any time since then, held that the United States should not have absolute first equality with Great Britain if it so desired, gun for gun and ship for ship.

Parity in Fighting Power.

So what was there about the MacDonald acceptance of "parity" that so stirred Secretary Stimson? Clearly, it must have implied to him acceptance of an American notion of what actually would constitute parity in fighting power, although there should be wide disparity in aggregate cruiser tonnage and in the number of cruisers of each type each power would maintain.

Apparently the MacDonald statement to Mr. Stimson must have meant that Great Britain assented to the proposition that the United States should have more big gun cruisers than Great Britain, while the latter should have many more small gun cruisers than the United States, and that this should be called parity in fighting power. And right there the formula for an accord began to take shape, hence Mr. Stimson's triumphant remarks.

But Mr. Stimson already has achieved the reputation of being a very cautious man.

To uninitiated folk, announcement that Premier MacDonald would sail seemed to be an indirect method of proclaiming success of the naval conversations. It seemed that the labor chieftain, whose power rests on political uncertainties at home, would not risk the ocean voyage if there was any chance of failure. So why was Mr. Stimson so little enthused?

Job Half Done?

Obviously Mr. Stimson must have felt that the naval "hoss-trading" job was only half done. The rough draft of a parity formula might have been reached, but not the amount of naval reduction in tonnage for which President Hoover aimed from the start.

Go back to Ambassador Gibson's speech at Geneva, which started the whole thing. He indicated himself at that time that while the voice was Gibson, the words were Hoover. And the words said that any naval agreement which meant increased fleets, or even maintenance of existing fleets, was a "timid expedient".

"Let us," said Mr. Gibson, "take the bold course and begin by scrapping the term 'limitation' in order to concentrate upon a general reduction of armaments."

Does Mr. MacDonald's coming mean that he is prepared to make the last grand gesture face to face, and concede Mr. Hoover's demand for cruiser fleet reduction? It seems quite possible.

YOUR HEALTH

Typhoid Fever and Its Prevention.

By Douglas D. Martin, M. D.
Tampa, Florida.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Whenever a doctor is called to see a child with typhoid fever, the thought comes to him that here is a preventable illness in which some one has been negligent. Negligent may be the term applied, in that the parents of this child could have, most likely, prevented this long tiresome, serious illness that is always inevitable with a case of typhoid fever.

So many children with typhoid fever have complications of all sorts and kind, with all degrees of virulence.

Now that the health departments of our states, counties and cities are so well equipped and organized, there is no reason why every child can not be properly immunized against one of our most dreaded diseases.

The act of preventing typhoid fever is so simple a procedure, so harmless in its action, so painless in its administration, so lasting in it affect that all children should be immunized. Really when one stops to think, is it not rather a serious mistake not to have your child protected from so grave a disease as typhoid fever?

The injections are usually given one week apart, three injections, as a rule, conveying immunity from the disease for three to five years or possibly longer.

Knowing the origin of typhoid fever the modes of its transmission, no child can really be safe from the disease. When or where can you say that every drop of water, milk or food has not become contaminated with the germs of typhoid fever? The glass of water or milk may have been perfectly clean from its source and a fly might have touched the glass with its feet, teeming with the germs of typhoid fever and in a given time the child will come down with the disease.

Great strides have been made in the last ten years towards the control and eradication of typhoid fever. Do not forget the school child in helping to stamp out and prevent this disease. Talk to your doctor. Just because there is no typhoid fever in your community now, it does not mean that there never will be any, and it might be in your family.

A child of school age should be given the protective treatment, because, away from home and home surroundings, the cleanliness can not always be watched. The food taken can not be supervised and the quality of the food might not be the same as the food the child receives at home.

Ruth Herrick's Disappearance

Mr. Editor: In your edition of the 18th, it was printed that Ruth Herrick escaped from Long Lane farm which is a mistake. She was out working in Hartford on Warrington avenue. It is a mystery, her going away, for when she was in Long Lane farm she never thought of going away for she has had plenty of chances to go.

THAMESVILLE MAN KILLED BY AUTO; MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE AGAINST DRIVER

Struck on West Thames street, south of the city line, by an automobile driven by Malcolm H. Austin, 22, of Uncasville, Charles Muench, 63, living off West Thames street, near Everett street, was almost instantly killed Saturday night shortly before 8 o'clock. He sustained broken ribs, compound fracture of the right arm and compound fracture of the right leg and was dead when he reached the Backus hospital to which he was taken in the automobile of John W. Aston of Massapeag.

Austin, who formerly lived in this city, has a technical charge of manslaughter standing against him and is under bonds of $2,500 furnished by his brother, Willis Phipps Austin, also of Uncasville.

The accident happened at a point near the trolley stop below Everett street. Austin was driving towards New London in his Packard roadster and a trolley car was approaching from the opposite direction at the time of the accident. According to information obtained by Coroner Edward G. McKay and Medical Examiner C. C. Gildersleeve, an automobile coming from the same direction as the trolley passed Austin's car and Muench was one of a group of four or five people who stepped out from the sidewalk on the east side of the street to take the trolley car. It was stated that all but Muench stepped back at the approach of Austin's machine, but Muench started to run across the street in the path of the automobile. Austin swerved to the left trying to avoid hitting the man, but the right front fender struck him. Two eyewitnesses of the accident were William M. Skelly of West Thames street and Rev. Alexander H. Abott, pastor of the United Congregational church, both of whom stated, according to the coroner, that Muench was running across the street.

Austin stopped his car immediately after the accident and soon thereafter went to the Groton state police barracks, accompanied by Rev. Mr. Abbott, to report the accident. Later he was accompanied back to Norwich police headquarters by state police officers and his brother furnished the required bail.

Muench was hurried to the Backus hospital in the automobile of John W. Aston of Massapeag who was coming towards Norwich and arrived at Everett street just after the accident happened. He had with him in his car Fred Smith, 1108 Northampton street, Holyoke, Alfred Aston, and Elias Skuiezyzi, both of Massapeag. When they reached the hospital Muench was dead and the hospital authorities at once notified police headquarters from which Capt. Thomas Murphy sent Officers Frank Gwiazdowski and Patrick Shahan to the hospital to learn the identity of the men who had taken Muench there. He also notified the coroner and medical examiner.

The fatal accident happened about half a mile from the place where an automobile driven by Malcolm Austin on March 14, 1927, was in collision with another machine, resulting in severe injury to several people.

PALACE THEATRE RE-OPENS WITH MARKED IMPROVEMENTS

There have been changes and changes made at the Palace theatre under several successive operating managements, but the change supreme has now been made through operating management of Warner Bros. under which the theatre was re-opened Saturday after being closed for two weeks for extensive improvements.

The acoustic difficulties in the house have been conquered. This was perfectly apparent to the capacity houses that filled the theatre for matinee and evening performances, enjoying every spoken word and every note of music in the vitaphone programme that had Al Jolson in "Say It With Songs" for its stellar number.

To add to this satisfactory improvement in the house was the comfort of new leather cushioned chairs of abundant width, the rich beauty of new damask hangings, the brilliancy illumination of the new electrically lighted marquee at the front and numerous other improvements which brought many congratulations to Manager Hamilton from the patrons of the theatre at the successful reopening.

DOCTOR PAYS JUDGMENT GIVEN FOR SCHOOL TEACHER

Dr. Hugh F. Lena, of New London, has paid Miss Mary A. Shea, formerly a school teacher of that city, the sum of $12,500 in settlement of an award in her favor over a civil suit according to a satisfaction of judgment filed with the clerk, John H. Walker, of the superior court Saturday. The satisfaction of judgment papers state that Miss Shea has received the full amount besides the costs of court.

Miss Shea brought suit for $50,000 against Dr. Lena as a result of burns to her neck and face which she claimed were caused by treatment she received by Dr. Lena with x-ray apparatus. Following damages being fixed at $12,500 Dr. Lena arranged to have the case taken to a higher court. The present action brings the matter to a close.

United Workers House

Calling to mind what is done at the United Workers house, a member of this prominent Norwich organization said Sunday:

"During the week of special recognition of the varied activities of the United Workers of Norwich, we cannot omit a few words of appreciation of the house at No. 9 Washington street, which for nearly 40 years has been so closely identified with them, that we can hardly think of one without the other. And if that house could speak, what thrilling tales it would tell, and how utterly inadequate would feeble words become. From the very first, the house has been in complete sympathy with the United Workers, aiding and abetting them in every possible way, and often seemingly impossible ways also. Sometimes we think our house is 'the noblest Roman of them all'! For during these past 40 years, many changes have taken place. Many loyal workers have come, and gone. Some have passed on, others are no longer able to take an active part in the work which grows more strenuous and far-reaching every year.

"But our house never grows weary of well-doing. Never fails to respond to the demands made upon it, and has never asked for a day off, nor for a raise! While it is as quaint and old-fashioned in appearance as our Pilgrim fathers, or mothers, it is as modern in its methods as toxin-anti-toxin!

"To prove its versatility, it has acted the part of a home, a schoolhouse, an office building, a clubhouse, a hospital, a nursery, a veritable melting pot in fact, and over and above all, a friend in need, and a very present help to those in trouble. So, as a factor in the success of this wonderful organization, 'Of the people, for the people, by the people' of Norwich, the United Workers house deserves a place in the sun, and as an asset to our community, its value cannot be measured."

ST. PATRICK'S HALF CENTURY TO BE REACHED SATURDAY

Rev. John J. Reilly who read the gospel for the eighteenth Sunday after Pentecost, at the 9 o'clock mass in St. Patrick's church Sunday, stated among other announcements that the coming Saturday, Sept. 28th, will be the fiftieth anniversary of the dedication of the church. The corner-stone was laid July 13th, 1873, the church was dedicated Sept. 28th, 1879, and on Sept. 11th, 1911, it was solemnly consecrated to the service of God with the entire parish property in the best of condition and entirely free from debt.

To mark the anniversary the coming Saturday, there will be a mass of thanksgiving at 8 o'clock. Since the church was ready for services, over fifty years ago, it has never been closed, but the holy sacrifice of the mass has been offered even when, a few years ago the edifice was being re-decorated and the organ re-built.

The great organ which is a feature at St. Patrick's was that built for demonstration at the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia in 1876. Later it was purchased for the Buffalo cathedral, but was considered too large for that edifice, so eventually was bought for the Norwich church. When re-built a few years ago it was equipped with chimes, through a special offertory of the parish.

Announcement was made Sunday that the services will continue on daylight saving time the coming Sunday, but on Monday all parish activities will go back to standard time.

Sunday next, at all masses Rev. Father Loftus, a missionary priest will speak from the pulpit of St. Patrick's in behalf of his work among the Negroes of the south.

High mass, at 10:30, formal sermons, and Sunday afternoon services will be resumed Sunday next, Sunday, Oct. 6th, the Rosary society will have a reception of new members.

The special offertory Sunday was a parish collection for the building fund of the new $2,000,000 St. Thomas seminary at Hartford for the education of young men for the priesthood. It was not a diocesan collection; for while some parishes take their assigned quota out of the parish treasury, St. Patrick's makes up its annual $2,500 by a special offering.

An anniversary mass Wednesday was announced for the repose of the soul of Casper Hoffman.

In accord with the policy of the rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May in keeping the parish property in the best of condition, handsome new walks have been laid about the church during the past week.

At Sunday's mass for the children the organist Henry J. LaFontaine, directed the junior choir in singing a consecration hymn set to the melody of Abide With Me. The hymn after communion was Holy God, We Praise Thy Name. Rev. Father Reilly assisted Rev. Myles P. Galvin in administering the Eucharist to the usual large number of penitents.

At the 7:30 mass a good proportion of the Holy Name society with the general communicants received the sacrament from the rector and his assistant.

LIBRARY IN SALEM IS PUBLICLY DEDICATED

The new Salem library, gift of United States Senator Hiram Bingham and Mrs. Bingham and Mrs. Alfred Mitchell, was formally presented to the town Saturday morning, when dedicatory exercises were held. Nearly 200 people were present to hear the program, which was brief, with speeches by Senator Bingham, Lieut.-Gov. Ernest E. Rogers, Prof. Allen of Trinity and John A. Young. James Lane was presiding officer.

Senator Bingham recalled how 15 years ago, Prof. Ernest Brown, James Lane, John O. Young and a few others had talked of the library's beginnings. He saw this beautiful new library as a dream come true, and hoped it would rank with other town buildings, most of which had a history. He mentioned the present town hall, which was originally a church in Norwich Town, and was moved over to Salem in parts many years ago. The senator gave much credit to Mrs. Mitchell and Mrs. Bingham for making the library possible and stressed the point of how important such an addition was to the town as a community center. He spoke of the library which had for many years been the north room of Charles Malona's house. To show how it had been used, he pointed out that it had distributed to the children alone 1,500 books this last year, and to the grown folks 1,300.

He gave much thanks and credit to the New London architects, who designed it so beautifully, and their constant watch over its construction. In conclusion Mr. Bingham gave James Lane high compliments for his untiring efforts on behalf of the library. Mr. Lane was one of the first trustees and the one trustee who was always on the job right in Salem, he said. Much enthusiasm was shown when the senator stated in his closing remarks that Alfred Bingham, his son, had been elected to the board of trustees.

Recalls the Past

Lieutenant Governor Rogers was next to speak and he recalled the town of Salem 50 years ago, when he as a boy played there. He stated that even at that time this town was on the decline. Music Vale, one of the very few music institutions in the country at that time, situated in Salem, was commencing to fall to pieces. He stated the town of Salem was commencing to start on the down grade 15 or 20 years ago. Senator Bingham and other men, including himself, started in a small way to create among the children the idea of reading books. He spoke of books which Senator Bingham had given as prizes to the school children and as graduation presents. In conclusion Mr. Rogers stated that he was proud to be a taxpayer in the town of Salem and that the dedication of this library would be a historical event here.

Professor Allen of Trinity, spoke briefly of the colonial beauty of the library and how well it matched other old houses in Salem, which will always be remembered both for their historic background and early colonial construction. He spoke at length on the beauty of the interior and the lighting and other points. In ending he thanked Senator Bingham, Mrs. Alfred Mitchell and Mrs. Bingham for their gift to the town.

In introducing the next speaker John O. Young, Mr. Lane, the presiding officer spoke of him as the man who planted the seed of Salem library. Mr. Young gave a complete history of the Salem library.

Miss Coffey Presents Flag

Artice Coffey, president of the girls' auxiliary of the library committee, presented to Senator Bingham as president of the library board, a flag to wave over the library. Miss Coffey made a very pretty presentation speech and was warmly thanked by Mr. Bingham.

In concluding the meeting Mr. Lane, presiding officer, thanked Mr. Bingham, Mrs. Mitchell and Mrs. Bingham for the library and also thanked the senator for the beautiful new ball ground which he presented to the boys of Salem.

COLD WEATHER HAS GIVEN IMPETUS TO WHOLESALE AND RETAIL TRADE

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—(AP)— The general business situation developed few changes of significance during the past week, the expected seasonal upturn in wholesale and retail trade receiving considerable impetus from the cold weather, while heavy industries such as steel and automotive lagged nearer to the levels of this season a year ago.

Steel ingot production for the entire industry averaged around 83 per cent. of capacity as compared to less than 80 per cent at this time a year ago. Both this industry and the automobile manufacturers were watched closely for definite signs as to the fall trends.

Despite better demand for textiles and general expansion of activity in the clothing industry, prices of leading textile fabrics eased a little, due largely to technical market conditions. Grains also sagged somewhat, under the influence primarily of weather and world crop estimates.

Manufacturers of several of the lighter lines such as radio sets and tubes, continue to operate at a high rate, while orders were not so large as recently, shoe factories continued to maintain operations well above this time last year. Furniture producers were also active. Such products as machine tools, electrical equipment, paints and varnishes were in good demand.

The mid-month collection of income taxes and treasury refinancing was accomplished without any severe flurry in the money markets. Call money reached ten per cent in New York, but no changes were noted in the rates for business accommodations. The federal reserve weekly condition statements showed that the system continues to support the acceptance market but that there has been little change in the total amount of federal reserve credit outstanding.

The stock market showed marked reactionary tendencies which caused considerable uneasiness in both financial and business circles, as any prolonged stock market, decline at this time, it is feared, would have a serious effect upon the holiday trade. On the whole, however, leading bankers were inclined to regard the situation as due in a large measure to an over-bought condition of the market, rather than any fundamental weakness.

To Battle For World's Title Tonight

BAT BATTALINO

ANDRE ROUTIS

BATTALINO ATTEMPTS TO WREST CROWN FROM ROUTIS AT HARTFORD TONIGHT

HARTFORD, Sept. 22—(AP)—A fighting kid with a name designed for warfare—Bat Battalino—was as keen as he could be tonight to knock the featherweight championship from the brow of Andre Routis, fading French titleholder, in a 15-round duel tomorrow night in the Hurley stadium.

Only 21 years old, with but three years of professional milling behind him and not a single major battle outside his home state of Connecticut, young Battalino, christened Christopher, is a 3 to 2 favorite to defeat the French champion in the first title fight held here since Kid Kaplan, of Meriden, the last crowd holder from the Nutmeg state defended his laurels here against Bobby Garcia in 1926.

Battalino, a fast, clever warrior with a lethal belt in either fist, jumped into fame overnight by whipping Panama Al Brown, Nexro king of the bantamweights, in an overweight skirmish. Perilous to that contest Battalino fought every opponent available in Connecticut and lost only one six round decision in three years. He was the national amateur featherweight champion in 1926, winning the title in Boston.

Despite an overwhelming advantage in experience, Routis has shown signs of wear in his recent matches. After losing two or three overweight decisions to ordinary foes, Andre collapsed entirely before the vicious punching power of Al Singer, Bronx junior lightweight, and was knocked out in two rounds of an open air bout in New York this summer. Routis won the 126 pound crown from Tony Canzoneri a year ago.

The dynamic little Frenchman, a fierce body puncher and close range mauler, hopes to discourage his youthful rival with the bristling type of attack that forged him to the ton of the featherweight heap. He is not as clever a boxer as Battalino, cannot hit as hard, but concedes no edge in courage to any man in the ring today. Critics expect that the Italian youngster, even though he loses, will at one time or another dump Routis to the canvas tomorrow night.

Prospect of a crowd of 20,000 and a gate ranging between $60,000 and $70,000, loomed tonight as the fight faithful of Connecticut warmed to the prospect of a homebread successor to the former hero, Kaplan. Both boys completed training today in fine shape with little prospect that either will have difficulty making the weight tomorrow.

WORLD'S TITLE CARD AT HARTFORD TONIGHT

Featherweight championship bout—15 rounds at 126, Andre Routis, France, vs. Bat Battalino, Hartford.

Double semi-final—each bout eight rounds, Mickey Fiahive, Hartford vs. Gene Martin, Waterbury; Al Schell, Germany, vs Johnny Walker, Boston.

Johnny Kopp, Norwich, vs. Joe Zotter, New Britain, six rounds.

Johnny Kreizer, Water Wicks, N. J., vs. Roy Powers, Holyoke, six rounds.

Frankie Martin, Pittsfield, vs. Roland Roche, Holyoke, six rounds

KOPP MEETS TOUGH BOY IN SIX-ROUND PRELIMINARY

Some 70 or 80 Norwich fight fans will be at Hartford tonight attending the Routis-Battalino championship bout, drawn there not so much by the main bout as by one of the preliminaries in which Johnny Kopp of Norwich meets Joe Zotters of New Britain.

Kopp in meeting Zotters goes against a tough boy but since entering the professionals they all look alike to Johnny. Zotters took a questionable decision from Mosely a short time ago and then Kopp kayoed Moseley in short order. So by the process of comparison Kopp should have little difficulty in taking Zotters. The local boy has built up quite a reputation by his six knockouts in his first six professional fights and plans to give the customers at the Veledrome a few thrills tonight.

The cut on Kopp's thumb has completely healed and he is in real fighting trim. He boxed four fast rounds Saturday and was hitting with all the power which has brought him so far along. His hand did not bother him in the least. Sunday's work was devoted to light bag work and a short trip on the road. Today will be devoted solely to a short road run to keep his weight down.

INDIANS SCORE THREE IN TENTH TO BEAT RED SOX

BOSTON, Sept. 22—(AP)—Cleveland scored three runs in the tenth inning to stave off the upsurge of the Red Sox and win the final game of the series, 7 to 4, here today.

The Red Hose, who are battling to get out of last place, tied the count with a two run rally in the last of the ninth against Ferrell but Joe Sewell, Gardner, Hodapp, and Luke Sewell fell on Milt Gaston for two singles and two doubles in the next inning, sufficient to sew up the game.

It was Ferrell's 19th victory of the season and gave the Indians their 13th win against nine for the Red Sox in 1929. The score:

ROOKIE PITCHER BLANKS BROWNS IN FIRST START

DETROIT, Sept 22—(AP)—Elon Hogsett, lefthander from Montreal, blanked the St. Louis Browns, 5 to 0, today in his first start for Detroit on Navin field. Hogsett was aided by four fast double plays, all of which were started by Bill Akers, recruit shortstop from the Texas league.

Sam Gray pitched seven innings for St. Louis, being removed for a pinch batsman in the eighth after the Tigers had scored all their runs.

The Browns obtained seven hits off Hogsett's delivery but only three of these were out of the infield. Akers' brilliant fielding stopped the visitors when they threatened to score. The score:

The world's most uncomfortable looking man is the feller who has his hands manicured for the first time.

Anybody would think to look at him that he'd just been caught stealing the nursing bottle from the baby.

Of all the sheepish-looking individuals he takes the palm without the slightest doubt. As he sits there with one hand submersed in a bowl of warm water and the other in the palm of the manicurist he looks like a kid that was stealing jam.

The other afternoon while waiting to have the bob shingled I had a very pleasant, not to say laughable, time watching one of our so-called he-men having his digits shined up.

This great big specimen of the great open spaces comes in like the lamb that was lost. He don't step like he was treading the greensward but like he was headed for the dentist's chair, or the electric chair.

He gives everybody in the place a little fleeting side-long glance but apparently there's nobody there he seems to know, me having my head stuck in one of those last year's joke books you find in barber shops, and dentists' offices.

The sigh he lets out when he finds he's not discovered would have done credit to a switching engine. In fact, one guy in the barber chair remarks that there must be some breeze out and asks the barber to close the door.

Well he kind of eases into the manicurist's little booth and sits down after telling the young lady what he wants. The young woman brings out her tools and a bowl of warm water. Big Boy looks at the bowl apparently not knowing whether to drink it or wash his face and hands in it.

And the work begins. I can see the young woman is talking to him and I know he's answering her 'cause I can see him swallow his Adam's apple a couple times before his lips move.

Every time he hears the door open in the outer shop he ducks and then takes a peek to see who it is. The first couple customers that came in must've been strangers but the third one he apparently knew for he just slid down in his chair and all you could see was the top of his head.

About that time the barber says "Next" and as I was it I left him there. I'll bet he sneaked out the back way. I know he didn't come back through the shop again.

Are you going to the fight tonight?

SENATORS BEAT MAKE-SHIFT ATHLETICS IN TEN INNINGS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22—(AP)—Washington defeated a patch-work Philadelphia team today, 7 to 6, in ten innings.

Connie Mack led with his ace, Bob Grove, but retired him at the end of three innings during which the Senators had not obtained a hit. The Washington team then fell on Earnshaw for six runs and won the game off Walberg, who went to the mound after Earnshaw.

Marberry relieved Hadley in the ninth after the Athletics had driven four runs across, and he got credit for the victory. The score:

LOCAL BOYS ON FROSH SQUAD AT WILLIAM AND MARY

Word comes back from William and Mary college, at Williamsburg, Va., where several local boys are enrolled, that Jack Marks, Amie LaCroix, and Johnny Greene, Academy luminaries, have made the freshmen football squad. Marks is placed at fullback and LaCroix at halfback on the '33 team. LaCroix captained the Wildcats in 1928 and Marks the previous year.

HENDRICKS RESIGNS AS MANAGER OF CINCINNATI TEAM AFTER SIX YEARS

CINCINNATI, Sept. 22. (AP)—Jack Hendricks, manager of the Cincinnati National baseball team today handed in his resignation, effective at the end of the season, October 6. Mr. Hendricks said he would represent the Reds at the annual draft meeting in Chicago and his work would be finished. He said he had no future plans and did not know who would pilot the team next year.

Hendricks is completing six years at the helm of the Reds, having taken over the direction of the team March 7, 1924, at the death of Pat Moran in Orlando, Fla., the Reds' spring training camp.

Though there have been numerous rumors regarding a successor for Hendricks, the club management said nothing would be done until the conclusion of the World's series. Both Donie Bush, who resigned the managerial position at Pittsburgh several weeks ago, and Clarence Rowland, manager of the Nashville club of the Southern association have been mentioned as probable pilots, but there has been no official statement regarding either.

YANKS DIVIDE DOUBLE BILL WITH WHITE SOX

NEW YORK, Sept. 22—(AP)—In the final appearance of a western team in the Yankee stadium for the year, the Yankees and the Chicago White Sox divided a double header today, Chicago winning the first game, 7 to 4, but the Yankees evened the day's count by taking the second, 3 to 1.

The Sox batted Herb Pennock at opportune moments to win the first game. A homer by Reynolds gave them a tie in the fifth inning.

Johnnie Kerr's double in the eighth drove in the winning run. They added two more in the ninth. Faber improved after the second inning and Durst's homer was the only run scored off him after that frame.

Roy Shirdid had the better of Al Thomas in the second game. He held the Sox to five hits and drove in two of his team's runs. The scores:

CINCINNATI, Sept. 22—(AP)—The Reds again drew alongside Philadelphia for a sixth place tie by winning the final game of the series here today 3 to 2 in ten innings. The Red victory gave the teams eleven games each in the season's encounters.

Rixey and Sweetland staged a pitching duel up to the seventh.

Today's game was the final one at Redland field this year with an eastern invader. The Cubs will play a four game stand here in October, followed by St. Louis in a one-day stand for the season's windup. The score:

CARDINALS SPLIT TWIN PROGRAM WITH DODGERS

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 22—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals divided a double header with Brooklyn today and retained their lead of four and one-half games in the fight for fourth place. Jim Lindsey, young Cardinal hurler from Houston, gave Vance a battle for seven innings in the first game but was batted out in the eighth when Brooklyn staged a five run rally to win 7 to 2. In the nightcap, Al Grabowski, flashy rookie from Danville, Ill., fanned eight batters to score a shut-out over the Dodgers, 4 to 0.

Babe Herman got only one hit in nine trips to the plate, slumping in his fight for National league batting honors. The score:

MANY CHANGES IN E. C. HIGH SCHOOL COACHING

There have been many changes in the coaching personnel of Eastern Connecticut high schools over the past year and when the season opens this week many new faces will be seen. The shifts have been more numerous this year than for a long time.

William F. O'Brien, who held the reins at Stonington for four years, now has charge of the Bulkeley squads in New London, his place at Stonington being held by Leo Smith, formerly Westerly high athlete, who recently graduated from Providence college. At Chapman Tech, E. Stanley Taylor, formerly director of athletics, has left to take up graduate work at Columbia, his position being filled by Johnny Conway, coach of baseball, football and basketball and who is entering his second year at that school. George Tracy, formerly track coach at Tech, is another who will be missing, he having accepted a position as teacher in a California high school. Matthew J. Seridan has been succeeded as coach of track and cross-country at the Academy by John P. Murphy. Both are Holy Cross graduates.

COAST GUARD PILES UP TREMENDOUS SCORE

The All Coast Guard team, composed of men from every unit in the Coast Guard, went down to New Rochelle, N. Y. Saturday and played the All-East coast Army team before about 6,000 people at Fort Slocum. The score was 93 to 0 in favor of the Coast Guards.

Fourteen touchdowns were made. The Coast Guards used their first team at the start and during the first quarter Ensign Roland, a recent graduate of the Coast Guard academy, made a 50-yard run. The third team was used by the Coast Guards in the last quarter and touchdowns came just as easy with this aggregation in the fray.

The All Coast Guards will go to Buffalo to play Canisius college on Thursday of this week.

TWO HEAVYWEIGHT BATTLES ON CARD FOR THIS WEEK

NEW YORK, Sept. 22—(AP)—Despite the featherweight championship battle between Andre Routis of France and Bat Battalino at Hartford, first honors for banner battle attractions this week must go to New York.

Metropolitan fans will have a chance to see two heavyweight shows involving four more or less legitimate contenders for the long vacant heavyweight throne.

Starting off the week will be Humbert Fugazy's ten round offering at Ebbets field tomorrow night between Phil Scott, of England, and Victorio Campolo of the Argentine. On Thursday Madison Square Garden offers the much-ballyhooed fray between Jack Sharkey and Tommy Loughran, erstwhile king of the lightheavyweights, at the Yankee stadium.

PUTNAM HIGH OPENS SEASON ON SATURDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 22—While Killingly high school of Danielson actually cracked open the Quinebaug Valley football season Friday when it invaded Fitton field at Webster and took on the heavy Bartlett high team, they did so away from home and it remains for Putnam high school to pry off the lid on next Saturday when they take on the fast East Douglas high eleven at the local campus. Saturday's season opening tilt at Putnam should prove of unusual interest to all northern Windham county followers of the gridiron. Both elevens are comprised of several veterans. The Noyesmen's forward wall is generously sprinkled with old timers and its backfield with the exception of Cacciaputi, who is to hold down a half back's berth, is identical with last year. Coach Noyes will devote the coming week to intensive practice in signal drill and included in the schedule for the week are several scrimmages with the substitutes and second string men.

MANCHESTER AND ALBANY SPLIT IN INTER-LEAGUE SERIES

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 22—(AP)—Albany, champion of Eastern league, split a double-header today with Manchester, winner of the New England league pennant. In the first game Manchester came out ahead, 5 to 2, but lost the second, 7 to 4.

Today's contests ended the four-game series, each club having won two games. The scores by innings:

NEW LONDON IS CROOKS' PARADISE—DOORS LEFT UNLOCKED SAT. NIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 22—An example of the carelessness of New London merchants was given Saturday night when the entrances of several stores were found unlocked, some of them with the keys in the door, making thieving an easy matter had crooks sought entrance to any of the stores. Patrolman Louis Tooker discovered the Velie and Marmon sales station entrance, 125 Howard street, unlocked with the key in the door. The officer locked the door and delivered the key to police headquarters. Patrolman Henry Hick found the entrance of the Chevrolet sales station, 64 Huntington street, unlocked, but could not secure the door. Clarence W. Thompson, owner, was notified and secured the building for the remainder of the night. Motorcycle Officer Thomas Cavanaugh found the entrance of the Model laundry, 46 Jefferson avenue unlocked and was able to secure it. Patrolman Louis Wheeler found the rear door of Freeman Brothers' market, 55 Truman street unlocked, and made the place secure.

MEN FROM U. S. S. FANNING CAUGHT WITH RED LANTERNS

NEW LONDON, Sept. 22—Joseph Mathvint and W. F. Clift, U. S. Coast Guard, members of the crew of U. S. S. Fanning, state pier, were arrested Saturday night by Patrolman Dennis Murphy charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. The sailors were released today upon furnishing a surety on their respective bonds of $50 and will be in court Monday. Mathvint and Clift were on Main street about midnight and amused themselves by removing red lanterns from danger spots where the city is engaged in widening the street. When arrested Mathvint and Clift each had a lantern in his possession and these together with the prisoners were taken to police headquarters.

Harold M. Lavalle, Hyannis, Mass., employed by the Almac Yacht club, Mystic, was arrested at the week end by Groton state police charged with evasion of responsibility and driving while under the influence of liquor. Lavalle was driving a Ford beach car. On Thames street, Groton, while proceeding south, he attempted to crowd between two other automobiles in an endeavor to pass them. One of the latter machines was driven by Clarence W. Scott, Stonington. This car was side-swiped and the left mudguard and running board were ripped off. Instead of stopping to determine the extent of the damage done Lavalle drove to New London and going to State street, parked there while he dined at the grill. The state police requested the New London police to arrest the driver and when Motorcycle Officer George Cockell found the auto in front of the restaurant he found Lavalle inside and took him into custody. He was turned over to State Police Officer John Smith.

TWO NORWICH CARS BUMP WHILE CROSSING BROAD ST.

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 22.—Two automobiles collided this evening with the result that both cars were damaged and Angelo DeGrasso, 140 Washington street, Norwich, was slightly injured. The car DeGrasso was driving, a Buick sedan, was traveling northerly on Ledyard street and in crossing Broad street, a car owned by Mrs. Mildred W. Spaulding, 205 Washington street, Norwich, and driven by Archie R. Spaulding, of the same address, struck the Buick with great force, causing the Buick car to be thrown across the highway and against a telephone pole. DeGrasso sustained a lacerated scalp and the injury was dressed at the office of a physician. The car which Spaulding was driving, a Peerless sedan, was but slightly damaged.

Most of the cases that will be tried in the police court Monday will be for intoxication for there are about a dozen such cases waiting a hearing.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Arthur Train's delightful novel of youth, romance and action, "Illusion," which in a brief year has jumped into the "best seller" class, makes an even better all-talking picture, judging by the enthusiasm of the capacity audiences last night at the initial showing. That lovable pair of youngsters Nancy Carroll and Charles (Buddy) Rogers fresh from their triumphs in "Close Harmony" and "Abie's Irish Rose," are teamed together again, after a brief independent starring experience, as the vaudeville team, separated by prosperity, which weaned the boy away into the primrose path of society, forgetting his little partner until a queer twist of Fate threw them into each others' arms, foreswearing forever the "illusion" of the gilded life for the reality of true love. The stage scenes, as in every Paramount production, are authentic and true to life, there is a boarding house in the "roarin' forties" of New York, sumptuous society affairs, and a brilliant night club scene featuring Lillian Roth and a clever stepping chorus. Little Nancy captures new honors, with her cute singing and dancing, and Buddy also wins new laurels with his work. Regis Toomey, famed in "Alibi," has a distinctive character and June Collyer and Kay Francis are delectable as blue-blooded debs. The supporting cast is equally brilliant, furnishing a corking hour and a half's entertainment. Louise Fazenda has a rollicking all-talking comedy, "Hot Lemonade," with the "aid" being furnished by chubby Walter Hiers and tiny Johnny Arthur. James Barton has a talking sketch "It Happened to Him," and the latest Paramount Sound News, completes an up-to-the-minute program. The youngsters of the city are lining up for the scooter races, with valuable prizes, to be held after school Wednesday afternoon.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

Richard Barthelmess has at last made his debut in talking pictures—and what a debut! Our favorite motion picture star has entered into this newest phase of the cinema with a vengeance and we herewith predict for him a career of success that will dwarf his already brilliant one.

Barthelmess appeared— and was heard— in his newest First National starring vehicle, "Weary River," at the Breed theatre last night.

"Weary River" is the thirty-second feature in which this popular star has appeared in his brilliant career which began upon his termination of his sophomore year at Trinity college, Hartford, twelve years ago.

Barthelmess was born in New York city and is best remembered for his classic interpretations in "Broken Blossoms," "Tol-able David," "'Way Down East," and many others. His most recent successes have been "The Patent Leather Kid," "The Noose," "Wheel of Chance." He was recently seen in a story of the high seas entitled "Scarlet Seas."

"Weary River" gives Barthelmess his initial opportunity in Vitaphone synchronization. For the first time this star's voice will be heard in conversation.

He also plays the piano. The story is one especially suited to his dramatic talents and is teeming with action and heart interest. Frank Lloyd directed it with a superlative cast headed by Betty Compson and including William Holden, Raymond Turner, George Stone, Louis Natheaux, De Sacia Mooers, Robert O'Connor, Gladdens James.

"Weary River" was published as a short magazine story by Courtney Ryley Cooper and was adapted to the screen by Bradley King, the dialogue by Tom Geraghty.

Ladies' Classes At The Y. M. C. A.

The gymnasium and swimming classes for women and girls at the Norwich Young Men's Christian Association will begin in full swing on Wednesday, September 25th, and continue each Wednesday through the fall and winter months.

The Y. M. C. A. management has been most fortunate in retaining for instructor of the gymnasium classes, Mrs. Albert P. Streeter, and although the very efficient swimming instructor of several seasons past, Mrs. Arthur Wirth could not continue this year, the committee is most happy to announce that Miss Signe Seaburg has consented to care for the classes in swimming. Miss Seaburg has had splendid training in this work, and doubtless will prove most efficient.

Indications are that a large number of girls and women will enroll in the classes this season.

The schedule of classes follows:

Grammar school girls, 11 and over, 4 p. m.

Afternoon class for adults, 5:15 p. m.

Evening classes for adults, 7:00 and 7:45 p. m.

In regard to the evening classes it is announced that all the new members this year will be assigned to the 7:45 class and all who were members last season and renew this year will be assigned to the 7:00 class.

Palace Theatre

It seemed as if the crowds that packed the Palace theater Saturday afternoon and evening to see Al Jolson in "Say It With Songs," were as warm in their praise of the newly-remodeled theater as of the picture itself. The new soft lights, the damasked walls, the exquisite designs of the interior, the comfortable upholstered theater chairs, and above all the perfection of the projection and reproducing apparatus all won the acclaim of the large audiences.

There was many a tear, many a sob heard during the performance Saturday. But that is always the case when Jolson plays. So heart-rending and so human are the home scenes of this famous film that no one, however hardened, can watch Jolson and Little Davey Lee and listen to the former's glorious voice and the childish syllables of the latter without being intensely moved.

There was laughter too, as the audience, responding to the emotions of the players, joined in their joy. "Say It With Songs" is such an unusual picture that it runs the whole gamut of human emotions.

There is no voice quite like Al Jolson's. No other singer can so easily win the hearts of those who hear him. Just think that not so long ago, crowds were packing the legitimate theaters at $4 a seat to hear him sing. Now through the wonders of Vitaphone both his presence and voice are brought to all the cities of the land at popular prices.

The accompanying features, "Look-out Below", all talking comedy scream, Jan Garber's band, novelty and sound News.

Wednesday the Palace presents an entirely new program, the feature of which will be that fiery and mad epic of the younger generation, "Our Modern Maidens," a spectacular and powerful synchronized sound production in which Joan Crawford makes her bow as a star. And Miss Crawford is not alone in the cast of the master saga of the Jazz Age. She has with her no less than Rod La Rocque, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Anita Page and the lovely Josephine Dunn. Altogether, "Our Modern Maidens" is a classic of the axe, a flaming dramatization of our pleasure haunted younger set—the set of young people who bargain with the Devil for all they can get, and cheat him if they can.

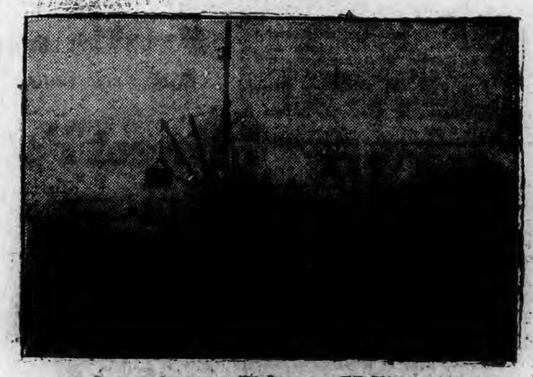
Byrd Antarctic Expedition in need of Coffee

11,000 mile radio message reports shortage of Coffee in Little America



OFF FOR LITTLE AMERICA! The U. S. S. Nidoma, Alcona in port at Norfolk, Va. Three huge cases of Bokar Coffee are being lowered into the hold for the 11,000 mile journey to the Byrd Expedition Base Camp.

A brief radio message bearing an urgent request for five hundred additional pounds of coffee has been received from the Byrd Antarctic Expedition Base on the Ice Barrier Little America.

Within the short space of about one year the members of this expedition have consumed almost the entire original shipment of two and one half tons of Bokar Coffee. This quantity of coffee means 5,000 one pound tins, enough to supply a normal family for more than ten years.

It is natural for the men on Little America, where they are enduring the bitterest cold known to man, to have a keen desire for a steaming hot cup of this thrilling beverage. The following message, addressed to Captain Richard E. Byrd, leader of the expedition, is explanatory: "Please request the cases of Bokar Coffee, of which the ARA Norfolk will receive three, be transferred to the Alcona, which will receive the remainder of the five hundred pounds a month, in Boston, and on the whaling vessel Nielsen-Larsen, which left Norfolk this week and is sailing direct to the Ice barrier as will the expedition is discovered. This will reach the ice barrier around Christmas as it is impossible for a ship to break through before that time.

FIRE BURNS ASTON HOUSE WITH RAILROAD STATION AT MASSAPEAG

The Central Vermont railroad lost its Massapeag station in the town of Montville when the W. F. J. Aston house in which the station was located was burned to the ground about 10:30 Sunday morning.

The building is a two and a half story frame house located off the Shantok park road and alongside the tracks of the railroad, the station occupying the lower part and the Aston family lived in the rest of the house.

The loss on the building and contents is placed by the owner between $7,000 and $8,000, partly covered by insurance. A number of articles of furniture and clothing were saved by Mr. Aston and his sons.

The blaze is said to have started in the attic of the house near the chimney and was discovered by Mr. Aston, who went into the building and smelled smoke. Together with his sons, the owner attempted to extinguish the blaze with pails of water, but it got away from them and efforts were then made to save the furniture and other articles.

PROCEEDING WITH MERGER FOR TWO NORWICH BANKS

A proposed merger of the Thames bank and the Bankers Trust Co., has been approved, it was learned Saturday, by the directors of both banks.

An agreement of consolidation has been arrived at by the officials of the banking institutions. It is understood that the proposed merger will be laid before the stockholders of the two banks next month for ratification, the meeting being scheduled for October 16.

If the project is favorably acted on, the plan, it is said, is to remove the Bankers Trust Co. to the Thames bank building on Shetucket street. This merger will give the new bank a combined capital of $1,100,000. At the present time the Thames bank has a capital of $1,000,000 and the Bankers Trust Co., a capital of $100,000.

The new bank will be known as the Thames Bank and Trust Co. Under the consolidation plan the stockholders in each bank will turn in their stock for stock in the new bank. If the plan is adopted, the merger will probably be completed by December 1. The new bank will have a board of directors of not less than 11 nor more than 28 members and it is understood that first board of directors for the new corporation will probably include the following: Arthur M. Brown, John Porteous, Grosvenor Ely, John D. McWilliams, William H. Oat, Dr. James J. Donohue, William G. Park, Henry A. Tirrell, Walter F. Lester, Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, C. V. James, Frank B. Ricketson, F. Russell Smith, T. C. Murphy and Joseph C Worth.

TELEPHONE CHANGE ON PARTY-LINE RINGING

Telephone men are making the necessary equipment changes for an improvement in the service given party-line subscribers in the Norwich exchange to be effective with the winter telephone directory.

At that time semi-selective party-line ringing is to be inaugurated in this exchange area, having been introduced recently in other of the larger exchanges in the state where it has proved very acceptable to subscribers. This type of party-line service involves number changes for party-line subscribers, but has so many advantages that it has been approved generally wherever it is in effect. With this new class of party-line service subscribers will hear but one ring other than their own, instead of hearing, perhaps, three or more. This innovation here will make it easy for the subscriber to distinguish his call from that for another party on the same line.

In the winter issue of the directory the letters W, J, R and M will supercede the present ring numbers in the directory listings. The calling party will give the line number and the letter suffix to the operator and when she rings whatever party that is called, only one other party on the same line will hear the ring. It is stated by Manager E. S. Lyon that the subscribers having the W and J suffixes will answer to the ring one and those having R and M suffixes will answer to the ring two. There will be no other ring numbers under the new system.

It will require some time for the telephone men on this work to make the necessary changes at subscribers' premises and also in the central office of the telephone company, but it is probable that the work will be finished next month and with the effective date of the next directory party-line patrons in the Norwich exchange will have the very latest development in the business applicable to the form of service they use.

GRAPHIC DESCRIPTION OF THE COOLIDGE-TRUMBULL NUPTIALS AND RECEPTION

Puritan Dignity Marked the Actual Wedding Ceremony—The Word "Obey" Was Not Used—Throughout the Ceremony the Vesper Song of Mount Holyoke College Was Played as an Obligato—Some of the Nation's Most Prominent Personages Were Among the Attendants—Reception Was Held on the Vast Grounds of the Trumbull Estate.

PLAINVILLE, Conn., Sept. 23.—(AP)—The daughter of the governor of Connecticut ,became the bride today of the son of a former president in a ceremony colored by Indian summer tints and marked by Puritan dignity.

The bride was Florence Trumbull, daughter of Gov. John H. Trumbull, the groom was John Coolidge, son of Calvin Coolidge, former governor of Massachusetts and thirtieth president of the U. S.

Some of the nation's most prominent personages among them ex-President Coolidge, two U. S. senators and four former Connecticut governors, gathered with simple folk of New England in the white frame Congregational church to witness the wedding.

The residents of this little town and surrounding villages turned out by scores along Main street and Farmington avenue to catch a glimpse of the wedding party as it was whisked to and from the church.

Ex-President and Mrs. Coolidge

Former President and Mrs. Coolidge arrived at the church shortly before the ceremony began. They had reached the Trumbull home a few minutes before, coming by motor from Northampton. Their late arrival was explained by Mr. Coolidge's desire "not to be around too long before the ceremony."

As Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge alighted from their car in front of the church, the crowd which had gathered at the curb broke through the state troopers lines and swarmed onto the church yard lawn cheering lustily.

The troopers, proceeding gently to push back a throng which contained so many women who had brought young children to the scene found cries of "Shame on you" as effective a weapon as any, but had hardly gotten the yard cleared again when Gov. Trumbull arrived with the bride to be.

Again the multitude burst its bounds and there were more handclans and murmurs of applause, but the onlookers retreated good naturedly as Miss Trumbull and her father entered the church to the last peals of wedding bells rung by A. H. Dresser, 85, who has been the sexton of the church since the middle seventies.

Only 82 Guests Present

The simple Congregational wedding service and a single ring ceremony made John Coolidge and Florence Trumbull husband and wife. The marriage took place at four p. m., in the Congregational church in the presence of only eighty-two guests, limited to that small number in response to the wishes of the bride and groom.

Two ministers officiated at the nuptials. The wedding vows were read by the Rev. Kenneth Welles, of Albany, former pastor of the Congregational church at Northampton, Mass., where ex-President Coolidge makes his home. The Rev. J. Roy Wilkerson, pastor of the Plainville Congregational church, read the preliminary service, consisting of the vows of the church and the announcement. As the strains of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin, played on the pipe organ by Prof. William C. Hammond, of Mount Holyoke college, sounded through the yellow flower-decked church, the bridal party made its appearance and marched slowly down the left aisle.

First came the four bridal attendants followed by Miss Jean Trumbull, who attended her sister as maid of honor.

Then came the bride on the arm of her father.

John Coolidge, accompanied by his best man, Stephan Brown, of Northampton, Mass., entered the church from the right and awaited the procession at the chancel steps. There he joined his bride and they stepped forward together as the Rev. Mr. Wilkerson read the preliminary wedding service.

Simple Ceremony

A hush stole over the little church as the Rev. Mr. Welles began the actual wedding ceremony which united the bridal pair in marriage, "For better, for worse, for richer, for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish, till death do you part."

The word "obey" was not used in the ceremony.

John Coolidge then took the engraved platinum wedding ring from his best man and placed it on the finger of his bride, next to the engagement ring with its 13 diamonds which she has worn for several weeks.

Throughout the ceremony the vesper song of Mount Holyoke college adapted from an old Connecticut air, was played as an obligato. Then came the benediction, which completed the services; and the wedding party began the recessional to the strains of Mendelsohn's wedding march.

As the bridal party emerged from the church, Miss Trumbull smilingly paused to pose once for the photographers and then saying "That's all" entered the waiting limousine. John, whose mien was more sober turned after climbing into the car and smiled genially at the crowd.

Former President Merry

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge senior added to the merriment of the occasion as they came out of the church and the former president waved his hat and Mrs. Coolidge her handkerchief as they drove away.

Their motor cars sped the party along the patrolled street to the home of the bride's father on Farmington avenue where 400 guests awaited them for the wedding reception.

At the recention the former president relaxing somewhat from his usual silence smiled and chatted with members of the Trumbull family and guests. He wore a black cutaway coat, and striped trousers, and had a white gardenia in his buttonhole.

Mrs. Coolidge was constantly surrounded by friends and well wishers. Both she and her husband seemed to enjoy the festivity surrounding their son's marriage.

Costumes

The bride wore at the wedding ceremony and the reception a gown of old ivory satin, designed in the long lines of the princess silhouette. Her veil of old ivory tulle was draped softly over her blonde hair, ornamented with duchesse lace, falling in panel effect almost the length of her gown. The lace was lent her for the wedding by Mrs. Coolidge. Her slippers were of ivory satin.

She carried a great sheaf of white lilies bound with white ribbon, the realization of a dream which she has had since her school days at Mount Holyoke college.

Her maid of honor was costumed in a frock of capucine chiffon, also designed in princess styiew ith a slight train and ornamented by a bertha of imported lace embroidered in gold. The bouquet which she carried was of orphelia roses and lilies of the valley.

The general yellow and burnt orange color scheme of the wedding was reflected in the gowns of the bridal attendants. Their soft chiffon frocks were in a warm amber tone, and their bouquets, tied with matching chiffon bows, were large clusters of garden flowers in lemon and orange tones.

John Coolidge and his best man wore the conventional cutaway coats with striped trousers and boutonierres of lilies of the valley.

Bridal Attendants

Miss Esther Trumbull and Miss Dorothy Clark of Plainville, cousins of the bride; Miss Virginia Rogers of Pittsburgh and Mrs. Philip Morehouse of Brooklyn were the bridal attendants.

Ushers were Pierce Clark of Plainville, a cousin of Miss Trumbull; Philip Morehouse of Brooklyn, and Richard Brown and John Hills, both of Northampton.

Mrs. Coolidge wore a frock of biege lace, a large brown picture hat and brown slippers, completing her costume with a sable scarf.

Mrs. Trumbull's gown was of beige chiffon designed with an irregular hemline and worn with a sleeveless coat bordered by Alencon lace. She wore a beige hat of medium size.

The mothers of both bride and groom wore shoulder bouquets of rare orchids of a bronze tone shading to deep rose violet bound with ribbon and maiden hair ferns.

Half Hour Musicale

While the guests assembled for the ceremony a half hour's musicale program was given by Professor Hammond, who comes from Mount Holyoke college. Miss Trumbull's Alma Mater. He was assisted by Emil Heimberger Hartford violinist to the music of whose orchestra the bride had often danced.

The March Triumphal" by Grieg, the "Prelude to Lohengrin" and "Elsa's Bridal Procession," both by Wagner, and the Bach-Gounod "Ave Maria" were included in the program, which ended, just before the wedding march, with "Oh Promise Me." by Reginald De Koven.

Church Decorations

The church was transformed into a bower of yellow flowers, palms and ferns. More than 1,500 giant yellow chrysanthemums transported by special car from California for the event, were banked in the chancel and along the balcony interspersed with golden pompoms and ferns. The windows and pews were draped with smilax.

Scores of the great lemon chrysanthemums were placed in bronze receptacles six feet tall, stationed along the two aisles of the church to enclose the center section where the guests were seated.

Pyramid candlebra holding two lighted tapers were placed in the chancel. Behind this was a bank of chrysanthemums, rising against a mass of palms and ferns which screened the organ. The whole ecffct was a golden glow of autumnal beauty.

The vestibule of the church, where the wedding party assembled before the ceremony, was hung with great plaque of chrysanthemums, yellow gladiolas and pernet roses, surrounded by a border of maiden hair ferns.

Lindbergh Completes 2,595 Mile Journey

New Air Mail Line Shortens Mail Transportation by 14 Days.

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh arrived at Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, at 4:20 o'clock this afternoon, adding to his feats the accomplishment of a new air mail line, bringing the northeastern coast of South America closer to the United States by 14 days than heretofore.

The new extension of the air mail took the flying colonel from San Juan, Porto Rico, its former southerly terminus in the West Indies, over the Leeward and Windward group and down the South American coast for a total of 1,920 air miles. The arrival at Paramaribo completed a 2,595-mile journey since Lindbergh took off here last Friday morning for San Juan to inaugurate the mail.

Lindbergh today flew from Port of Spain, Trinidad, stopping at Georgetown, British Guiana, on a regular scheduled air mail halt. Leaving Port of Spain at 7:18 this morning, the colonel took the giant Amphibian plane across the narrow strait to the South American coast, skirting the Orinoco river delta and thence into Georgetown at 11:30 o'clock.

The take-off at Georgetown at 12:45 followed one of the most colorful receptions on this journey. All ships in the harbor were dressed for the occasion and the air was rent with shrill blasts from whistles. Government officials were in the welcoming party that brought Lindbergh and his party ashore while the work of refueling the plane and unloading the mail was on.

With the colonel, and enjoying every feature of the long air cruise was Mrs. Lindbergh, the former Anne Morrow, who kept a diary of the trip as she rode as one of her famous husband's passengers. For Lindbergh, in flying from Miami, with mail and passengers, assumed the regular job of a commercial air pilot, taking out the West Indian limited of the Pan-American Airways. He cleared his cargo and passengers in all of the countries visited just as the captain of a ship would do.

$462,000 OF $512,000 STOLEN SECURITIES RECOVERED

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Police tonight recovered from an unaddressed package deposited in a mail package box all but $50,000 worth of the $512,000 in securities stolen from R. V. Hiscoe and company, brokers, by an 18-year-old messenger boy several days ago.

Police Commissioner Grover A. Whalen announced recovery of the securities when he arrived at police headquarters with them shortly before midnight.

A substitute carrier found the package, which resembled a waste paper package, in a mail box on the East Side and first thought of throwing it away, but finally placed it in his mail sack and took it to the Tompkins square postoffice station.

There a clerk dumped the contents of the mail sack on a table and upon opening the brown parcel found a messengers' brief case bearing in gold letters the name R. V. Hiscoe & company, with the name of Milton Alter, the messenger, scratched on it in two places. Postoffice officials called the police, who found all of the stolen securities excepting $50,000 worth of "Fabri: Finishing 60's" due in 1933.

Cardinal Louis Ernest Dubois

PARIS, Sept. 23.—(AP)—France today lost its most popular prelate by the death of Louis Ernest Dubois, cardinal archbishop of Paris, at the age of 73 years.

He was recognized as the man who had done more than any other to reconcile the Catholic church to the lay republic and to end the long conflict which had torn France since the separation of church and state. He also was recognized for his simple piety and his activity for the church and other worthy objects. In 1926 he found time to attend the eucharistic congress in Chicago and had interested himself in many church and other manifestations apart from his regular charges.

The cardinal left important literary work as well as a reputation for goodness that was not limited by his creed. He had known that the end was coming for several days. He died in his bed, as if simply going to sleep, with a crucifix in his hand. The popularity and esteem in which he was held was attested by the condolences from persons in all stations in life, beginning with President Doumergue of the republic.

Cardinal Dubois celebrated the 50th anniversary of his priesthood on Sunday. A native of St. Calais, he was bishop of Verdue before he was named archbishop of Paris.

W. B. SHEARER'S REPORTS WERE CONSIDERED "BUNK"

Shipbuilding Executives Lament Their Action of Employing Shearer—Testimony Given Before Senate Investigating Committee—Homer F. Ferguson, President and General Manager of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Corporation, Said It Was a "Damn Fool Decision" to Hire Shearer.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—(AP)—The last two of the three shipbuilding executives whose firms paid William B. Shearer $25,000 for services rendered at the 1927 Geneva naval limitations conference—which collapsed—lamented their action today before a senate investigating committee, and insisted his reports were "bunk."

S. W. Wakeman, vice-president of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp., related regretfully that he had been "jazzed off" his feet by a "super salesman," and said it was a "damn fool decision" to hire Shearer.

The other, Homer F. Ferguson, president and general manager of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Corp., said he knew nothing about his company's employment of Shearer until afterwards and that he could not approve it.

Tonight the investigators summoned Laurence R. Wilder to appear tomorrow. He is a former president of the American Brown-Boveri Electric Corp., which was listed on the $143,000 "legislative" fund of the American Shipbuilders for use at Washington as the dispenser of $36,000.

Chairman Shortridge of the committee of inquiry gave notice, however, that numerous requests for a general investigation into lobbying activities would have to be passed over because of lack of authority by his committee. He said he would support the resolution of Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, for a general investigation of lobbying activities which now is before the senate.

Ferguson said Frederick P. Palen, vice-president of his corporation, had represented the firm at the New York meeting of shipbuilders which hired Shearer. He revealed that company books did not show the $18,000 which had been paid Shearer and that the money had gone from a "merchant marine" promotion fund.

Wakeman testified also the records of his company would not show payments to Shearer, as his firm paid its third of the fund through Henry C. Hunter, counsel of the Council of American Shipbuilders. Wakeman said Hunter called the New York meeting which employed Shearer. Hunter also was summoned to appear tomorrow.

Ferguson paused in his reply to questions to state that the owners of his corporation, the H. E. Huntington family, and the chairman of the board, Henry M. Robinson, of Los Angeles, knew nothing about Shearer's employment. Robinson, who is a friend of President Hoover, has been chairman of the Newport News Corp. board of directors since May, 1928.

Both the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp and the Newport News concern now are building American navy cruisers which were undertaken at the ference at Geneva, there is now before

Senator Allen, republican, Kansas, questioned Wakeman about a "surprising" letter which Shearer wrote to Wakeman in 1928, and in which Shearer asserted that "as a result of the failure of the tri-power naval conference at eneva, there is now before the 70th congress, a 71-shipbuilding program costing $740,000,000."

Wakeman said it was "absurd" to attribute to Shearer the break-down of the Geneva conference. Allen remarked that counsel for Wakeman in answering Shearer had not denied his claims and in fact had given him a certificate of the fulfillment of his obligations to the shipbuilders.

Reading from Shearer's report to the shipbuilders, Senator Robinson, democrat, Arkansas, asked Wakeman "Why didn't you call a halt to these activities?"

In his reports Shearer intimated the use of his influence on the conference. "I didn't believe those reports," said Wakeman. "I thought they were bunk."

"Why didnt you tell him?"

"I thought ultimately he would get something of value out of him. The reports were disgusting and we should have done something about it but we didn't."

Questioned by Chairman Shortridge as to the reason for employing Shearer, Wakeman insisted that it was only for the purpose of reporting "events that happened there."

Mr. Ferguson, who did not complete his testimony, told the committee he had considered going to the Geneva conference himself but had dispensed with the thought.

PEACOX'S CONFESSION OF THE SLAYING OF HIS WIFE

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 23.—(AP) — District Attorney Frank H. Cohne, revealed today that when Earl F. Peacox formally confessed the slaying of his wife, he asserted that he burned her her body as an act of kindness to her mother.

The stenographic report of the confession was read in full relating the defendant's version of the slaying and reiterating his contention that the killing was not willful murder, but entirely the outcome of a family row.

"After I hid her body in the woods, it read, "I didn't know what to do. I still loved that girl. I got in my car and drove away, going for breakfast to the home of her mother.

"During the next week I thought a lot of her lying out there. It got on my mind. I got some kerosene and went back there and threw it over her body and lighted it. I did this so that she would not be found and so that her mother would never know to what a disgraceful end her daughter had come."

Peacox's story of the killing had been told many times before the court reading of the formal confession. It is briefly that he took her to his apartment on the first anniversary in an effort to effect a reconciliation, that she called the place a "dump" and that in an ensuing argument he struck her with the butt of his pistol and then grabbed her by the throat to prevent her screaming.

The defendant himself will go on the stand tomorrow to tell the story again in his own voice, to admit that his actions caused her death, but to deny that he ever meant to kill her.

SENATE PASSED TEN TARIFF BILL AMENDMENTS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—(AP)—The senate today disposed of ten committee amendments to the tariff bill and cleared the way for early consideration of the major controversal sections relating to the tariff commission, the power of the president to change duties, and new valuation methods.

Eight minor amendments were adopted. By rejecting two, the senate restored house provisions designed to strengthen the anti-smuggling laws relating to smoking opium of making the owner, as well as the master of a vessel, liable to a fine of $25 an ounce for all such opium found unmanifested on ships.

Under the restored provisions, the penalty also would constitute a lien upon a vessel, notwithstanding the low providing for exemption of common carriers in such cases unless it is shown that the owner or master had knowledge of opium being on board.

The finance committee proposed elimination of the house amendments, but was turned down in both instances without a record vote.

AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE HAS BEEN REMOVED

That ancient prejudice which hoarded gold with the fanatical zeal of the miser has vanished. Under the sheltering wing of AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE flourish thousands of banking institutions to which the individual safely entrusts his wealth.

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful, corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against cigarette smoking by men and by women.

"It's Toasted"—the phrase that describes the extra "toasting" process applied in the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes. The finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—are scientifically subjected to penetrating heat at minimum, 260°—maximum, 300°, Fahrenheit. The exact, expert regulation of such high temperatures removes impurities. More than a slogan, "It's Toasted" is recognized by millions as the most modern step in cigarette manufacture.

"It's toasted"

No Throat Irritation—No Cough.

DANIELSON

NEW SECURITIES COMPANY ORGANIZED AT MOOSUP

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 23.—A newly-organized securities company—The Talbot Co.—with an authorized capital of $250,000 and an additional subscription of $100,000, which has been paid in, is starting to function at Moosup. The newly incorporated company, which is in effect an investment trust, has Charles T. Aldrich of Providence and one of the owners of the Aldrich mills at Moosup as president, W. Irving Davis of Danielson as vice-president, Robert B. Hough as secretary and auditor, Lewis A. Hoar of the Moosup Trust Co. as treasurer and assistant secretary and Edward Bilodeau as assistant treasurer.

The directorate also includes Henry T. Aldrich of the Aldrich mills, Judge Sabin S. Russell of Danielson, A. L. Backus of Putnam & Co., of Hartford, Thomas Hope, Lucius B. Cranska and Thomas J. Seaton, all of Moosup, in addition to the officers mentioned.

While several of the members of the board of directors of the Moosup Trust Co. are directors of the Talbot Co., the two concerns have no immediate connection and will operate separately. The Talbot Co. has been organized numbers of people in Moosup and nearby sections of Windham county who desire such a service. The funds that the stockholders pay into the new concern will be invested for them to give the most generous possible return, safety and underlying security always being first considerations. When the concern is in full operation it will have quarters of its own in Moosup.

CORN CROP HARD HIT BY FROST IN THIS SECTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 23.—It developed today that there has been serious corn crop damage all through this section during the exceptionally cold nights and mornings, for this time of year, that have been experienced over the week end. Beset by dry weather, corn-borers and other adverse circumstances during a particularly unfavorable season, the grower of corn now in many instances faces a serious financial loss through the frost visitations. Today reports came in of quite wide-spread damage to corn all through this area. Fields in high areas seem to be the hardest hit. This applies both to late sweet corn and to feed corn. It is not to be interpreted from what is set down here that Windham county's corn crop is near or anywhere near a total loss. Far from it. There are many fields untouched by frosts and, on the other hand, many fields from which corn already has been cut and is past possibility of damage from frost. But, on the whole, it would appear, when all of the results are tallied for this year, corn growing has not been the success, at least in eastern Windham county, that usually is the case. As there are exceptions to all rules, so there is as to this. Some particular successes have been made by individuals with their corn crop during 1929, but such growers are far from being in the minority. All of this may not seem important to a great many whose interests are other than those of the farm, but it is, nevertheless, a matter that eventually, in one way or another, affects the great majority of the people.

WEDDING

Poirier-Leanna

A pretty wedding at St. James' church at 7:30 this morning was that of Miss Mildred Leanna of Lewis boulevard and Adrian Poirier, of School street. Rev. Joseph Bergin, M. S., performed the nuptial ceremony and was celebrant of the marriage mass. The bride wore a gown of white satin and a veil of lace. Her bouquet was of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. She was attended by Miss Mabel Cup of Webster, who wore a gown of peach-colored satin with overlace and a peach-colored cord hat with shoes to match. Her bouquet was of tea roses. Roland Poirier, brother of the groom, was best man. After the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Philias Poirier of School street. After their wedding trip, during which they will visit New York and other cities, the newly-wedded couple will make their home with the groom's parents.

Entry clerks and all others that have to do with organizing the annual exhibition of the Windham County Agricultural society—oldest organization of the kind in the United States—the show popularly known as the Brooklyn fair, were prepared tonight to handle with expedition the rush of entry business that will come on Tuesday, when exhibitors begin to bring what they have to show to the ground and arrange to display them. The gates of the fairgrounds will be open early Tuesday morning. Attendants will be on hand to expedite the work that must be accomplished within a few hours. Cattle, in many instances, will come in late Tuesday night or very early Wednesday morning, and all will be in their places when the gates are opened to the thousands who will attend the fair on Wednesday and Thursday, the big days.

There will be no important innovations in the program for this year's fair. The general line of exhibits will be much the same as in other years. The Old Home day spirit also remains as one of the big assets of this old time agricultural show, attracting each year large numbers from far and near.

Powdrell & Alexander, operating six mills in the town of Killingly and come to be the largest manufacturers of curtains in the United States, is going strong these early fall days. It is not a matter of concern to the hundreds of operatives of this largest of Killingly's manufacturing concerns what the stock of the company is selling for on exchange, nor do the officials have anything to say about it. Yet followers of the market have noted the sharp advances made within the past few weeks in the value of the securities, a comparatively small amount of all outstanding being held here. The advance has been surprising, nevertheless, to experienced observers of the market who also are informed as to the decidedly increased earnings of the corporation during 1929.

That an impressive observance of Armistice day will be held here on Nov. 11 seemed to be assured today following a meeting in American Legion hall yesterday afternoon at which plans for the program were talked over in a general way. Last year Danielson had only a vestige of a celebration of the anniversary of the fighting, "over there." It will be different this year. Various organizations were represented at yesterday's meeting, and spokesmen for a very considerable number of organizations promised their support and co-operation. Plans are to have Armistice day observed as a general holiday in Danielson this year.

It is announced that the Westfield Congregational church desires during the fall and winter season to continue its policy of making its facilities available for its own members and organizations and to outside groups and individuals. Thomas A. Beckett has consented to take charge of scheduling different gatherings and will handle the assignment of places and times for meetings. A monthly schedule of church events and appointments will be maintained on a bulletin board at the church, in the basement of the parish house, in order that all interested may acquaint themselves with arrangements that have been made.

Miss Madelyn Cronin, graduate of Mt. St. Vincent college on the Hudson in June last, has entered Columbia university to do post-graduate work leading to an M. A. degree.

Several officers from the Danielson barracks were detailed today for duty at the Coolidge-Trumbull wedding at Plainville, along with other state officers from various parts of Connecticut.

Numbers of the horses that are entered for the races at the Brooklyn fair this week have arrived at the grounds and some of them were being worked out on the track today.

Flowers at the Westfield Congregational church yesterday were in memory of Deacon Albert C. Greene. Had Deacon Greene, who died the past winter, lived until Tuesday of this week he would have reached his 100th birthday.

Rev. J. Ross Jones, rector of St. Alban's church, will go to Wallingford for a three days' conference of members of the Episcopal clergy, at Choate school.

This is the last week of daylight saving time in this territory for this year. The change to standard time will be effective next Sunday. Church services at the Westfield Congregational church will be on standard time next Sunday. The schools also go on standard time Monday of next week.

The Baptist church has invited members of other churches to join in the 50th anniversary dedication service to be held Thursday evening of this week, when the address will be made by Rev. J. Walter Houck of New York.

The fall meeting of the Eastern District of Congregational Women of Connecticut is to be held at the local church of the denomination on Oct. 3.

Mrs. A. V. Woodworth has returned to her home after spending the summer season at the Woodworth cottage at Pleasure Beach.

After spending the summer motoring to many points in Canada with his daughter, Miss Georgette Jette, D. E. Jette has returned to Danielson.

There was only one minor case having to do with the violation of a section of the motor vehicle laws for Judge W. Fenner Woodward to dispose of at this morning's session of the town court.

The volume of parcel post matter continues to grow at the Danielson post office, the outward shipments being particularly heavy and going to many parts of the United States.

Of interest is the fact that rails being taken up as the old trolley line is removed through this territory is that allotments of the rails are due for shipment to England, Egypt and points in South America.

Clifford H. Starkweather of the Danielson Building and Loan association reports that the organization has had a very successful year, the earnings being good and the surplus increased. A new issue of shares is to be made in October—the 29th series since the association was formed.

Only a few days remain before the opening of the duck shooting season, a sport that claims the attention of numbers of hunters in Danielson and vicinity.

Late last night some unidentified person started to drive an automobile along the railroad track from Franklin street crossing, but managed to get the car back on the highway before a train came along. Police were checking up on the matter today.

PUTNAM

SUPERIOR COURT SESSION OPENS TUES. AT PUTNAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 23. — Everything was in readiness today for the opening of the September term of criminal and civil superior court which will take place in this city Tuesday. The large courtroom in the court house block on Main street has been groomed for the fall session. Heading the list of cases is the state vs. Pierre Chabot, who is charged with violation of motor vehicle laws, but the major case slated for trial is that of the state vs. Thomas Mazzola, of Willimantic, who will be tried on a charge of murder. There was nothing definite said today that would indicate the Mazzola murder case will be tried in Willimantic and there was likewise no statements made confirming that Judge Edward M. Yeomans, of Danbury, who is to preside, will hear the case in Putnam. State's Attorney Howard C. Bradford of this city will lead the prosecution in the criminal cases.

Another important criminal case which has attracted a widespread interest in this section is that of the state vs. Ora L. Smart, warden in charge of the town farm in Woodstock, who is charged with a serious statutory offense. Smart is at liberty on a heavy bond posted by him following a justice court hearing in South Woodstock several weeks ago when he was bound over to superior court for trial. Smart will be defended in this section by Attorney Irving H. Miron of this city.

Small Boy Kills Rattlesnake

Donald T. Webber of Union, who is eleven years of age, has proved himself a worthy gladiator. Webber's opponent was not a vicious lion, but on the other hand was a three foot rattlesnake. The youth, while wandering in woodlands adjoining his father's farm on Saturday, encountered a rattler. The boy attacked the reptile which fought back. After a fracas of several minutes the boy was successful in killing the snake. He brought the lifeless body of his victim home to add it to his already long list of wild life trophies and many have viewed the skin of the snake. Webber's prize is not the first rattler to be taken in the wilds of Union. In past years other hunters have encountered such ground crawlers and have killed them.

At a late hour today neither state nor local police had unearthed any convincing clues as to who the driver of a Studebaker touring car, which crashed an embankment on the Providence pike road yesterday, was. Captain of Police William Jarvis and State Officer John T. Murphy, of Danielson barracks, continued their investigation of the case, but have procured little or no evidence from the mass of wreckage that will identify the driver whom it is believed miraculously escaped death when his car left the road. Kegs, which contained a quantity of some alcoholic beverage, are in possession of the police.

In police court this morning an outof-town driver, arrested Saturday evening, was before Judge M. H. Geissler and was found guilty of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor. The minimum fine required by the state in such cases was imposed by the local magistrate. Officer Alpherie Sponcey of the local police was the arresting officer.

State Officers John T. Murphy and Henry M. Mayo, of Danielson barracks were in Plainville, Conn., today where they acted with the state police cordon of officers performing duty at the wedding of Miss Florence Trumbull, daughter of Connecticut's governor, and John Coolidge, son of the ex-president.

Announcements have been received here of the marriage of Miss Doris Berthiaume, a niece of Judge Henry N. Benoit of probate court of Putnam, to William Doherty, New York stock broker, which took place in New York city on September 2. Miss Berthiaume resided in this city for several years and is widely known here.

Within a few months as work progresses on the vast estate of Mrs. T. Morris Murray, wealthy Abington woman, a miniature menagerie containing a wide variation of wild animals will be had. Already the zoo is in possession of a small collection of foreign and native birds and animals. On Saturday, a baby elephant was delivered to "Gwen Careg farm," the country home of Mrs. Murray in Abington. The native of India is still in his infancy, but, according to the caretaker, who is an expert, little Jumbo will attain full growth within a few years. Many species of beautiful South American birds are to be brought to "Gweng Careg" before the work will have been completed. In addition to instituting a zoo, Mrs. Murray is expending vast sums of money on the repair of her beautifully located country home, including the setting out of species of foreign landscape products.

Sergt. George Liard of the local police is off duty for his annual vacation. Officer Joseph Page is directing the work of the police department nights in the absence of the sergeant. Officer Edward Benoit of the supernumerary force, is performing duty during Sergt. Liard's absence.

Town Clark Henry N. Benoit stated today that 18 applicants appeared before the board of selectmen on Saturday to assume the electors' oath. Forty-five future voters were enrolled and made application for the voting privilege, but less than half of that number assumed the responsibility.

MOOSUP

WORCESTER-MOOSUP CRANSKA MILL EMPLOYES' OUTING

Saturday afternoon the Cranska Thread Co., of Worcester and Moosup held their second annual field day at the Carpet grounds, Moosup. The Worcester contingent came by automobile and bus. The program opened with a ball game between teams of the two mills, which was interrupted at the end of the third inning in order to take some snapshots. Lucius Cranska took some movie pictures.

The Moosup mill team got a fine and fast start. Walter Eno was in good form and with fine support, a continual accumulation of runs finally netted 12. Worcester used two pitchers, but support and batting were poor. However, they managed to score nine runs, to the accompaniment of much horn-honking.

After the game the employes and their families were treated to a picnic lunch on Mae and Lionel Beach. Dancing was enjoyed during the remainder of the evening. Mr. Cranska was given three cheers as the visitors left for home.

Wauregan Wins, 14-1.

Moosup had a day off from baseball Sunday afternoon in the third game of the series with Wauregan, the litter winning, 14 to 1. INJUSTICE TO DEPARTMENT

While he is not the only one who has referred to the injustice of charging up to the postoffice department of expenses for which it is not responsible, Senator McKellar gives valuable support to such a view when he insists that the bookkeeping of the government should be amended.

His discussion of the expected deficit of $95,000,000 in the postoffice department is timely, especially since there is an investigation underway to determine what can be done in the way of possible rate changes to increase the revenue and overcome this annual deficit.

It is a well known fact that the postoffice department is made to stand the expense of transporting all of the departmental mail without any compensation. In addition there is the huge bill that it also stands because of the great volume of franked matter that is furnished by members of congress. Could the department get the expense that is involved in handling such mail matter it would be able to cut down the deficit by millions.

When the government undertakes to give assistance to the merchant marine and when it seeks to stimulate the development of air mail lines it leaves it to the postoffice department to provide the funds. It considers it necessary to furnish this assistance but it means a burden upon the postoffice department to pay far in excess of what it would otherwise cost for it is a government subsidy for these services which is being taken out of the postoffice department.

If it were so that the postoffice department was a money maker and was turning in a surplus to the treasury every year it would make a difference, but as it is the department seldom if ever makes ends meet and yet in addition it is required to shoulder huge expenditures for which it has absolutely no chance to get a return in some instances or to break even in others.

All of this may and does mean service for the people but it is time that congress provided for it in such a way that it does not reflect upon the postoffice department, or obligate that department to produce revenue for outlays which are improperly imposed upon it.

WASHINGTON ENFORCEMENT

When Senator Howell launched into charges before the senate that Washington was lax in the work of enforcement and declared that the responsibility rested with the president he was apparently indulging in the passing along of gossip.

His declaration drew a quick response from the president, who not only stated that he desired Washington to be a model of enforcement for the country but expressed his pleasure that the Nebraska senator had raised the question, expressed his "confidence the senator would not make these charges unless they were based upon definite facts," gave assurance that he would see that there was a vigorous investigation if these facts were furnished and asked that the officials in the district be given an opportunity to meet the charges.

When he was questioned about his charges Senator Howell declared that he had no specific evidence of liquor violations. He added that it was a matter of common knowledge that bootleggers were plying their trade freely, but he didn't want it understood that he had any particular evidence.

Probably there are many others, taking the same attitude as the senator, who are passing along hearsay. The president has indicated his faith in the officials in the national capital who are engaged in the work of enforcement, but he is ready and willing to do whatever is necessary to improve it, but it can hardly be expected that hearsay evidence is going to accomplish very much. Certainly something better than that will be required to get convictions in any prosecution.

If, on the other hand, those who feel the same as the senator does and are helping to circulate the gossip will lend a hand in providing evidence on which the enforcement authorities can work, or make definite charges that can be run down and proven, there may be less ground for complaint. The senator gives the impression that he has run to cover immediately after the "charges" he made in the senate brought a response from the president. The president has hit the nail on the head but apparently the senator didn't. He was talking without being able to back up what he said, and yet the gossip may be right.

ABANDONING SUBS

While there have been developments which would seem to give encouragement to the desire for the elimination of the submarine as a naval vessel, it is perhaps too early to rejoice. While it appears to be a desirable move on the part of this country and Great Britain no such expression has come from other countries which must be considered.

It was at the Washington conference that the move for the abolition of underwater boats was blocked by the unalterable opposition of France to any such action. France has insisted that it needed these small vessels for the adequate protection of its coasts and possessions. It favored these vessels because the cost of construction is small and it cannot afford to indulge in the building of the larger and more expensive vessels. With France it is a case of serving its own needs, and while France continues to insist upon submarines Italy is not going to abandon such vessels. There again the cost is considered. If those two countries could be made to see the desirability of doing away with underwater boats there seems to be good reason for believing that such a thing might be accomplished.

It is evident that the United States and Great Britain could hardly be expected to abandon the submarines as long as the other leading nations are insisting upon adding to their number, although they would be willing to enter into an agreement that would involve the other countries. With none of the countries possessing the underwater boats there would be removed any advantage which may now be possessed and there would likewise be removed that recognized extra danger for those who serve in such vessels.

But because it has been impossible to get a general agreement for the abolition of submarines in the past, and there still exists a demand for them on the part of at least two of the leading nations, hope for the ultimate realization of the ambition is not necessarily dashed. It has long become evident that the limitation of naval vessels must be accomplished through long but persistent efforts. Through the advantages that are displayed in the gradual reduction there is ground for believing that the end of the submarine will be ultimately obtained.

MORE DANGER, MORE SAFEGUARDS

There isn't a city which can claim that street conditions are so safe that there is no need for continued safety efforts. This is disclosed almost every day in the number of accidents and in the fatalities.

Every year brings an increase in the number of cars and the corresponding increase in the amount of highway traffic. One doesn't have to figure very long to arrive at the conclusion that because of this situation, and because of the speed at which vehicles are driven, that more emphasis needs to be placed upon safety. It is required in crossing the street and in walking in the highways. It has gotten to the point where in congested sections it is actually dangerous to play in the streets.

While this means that drivers of motor vehicles should exercise all necessary caution, there is also a responsibility resting on the pedestrian which cannot be dodged. In the quest for safety there is a large contribution which can be made by all. It is time to recognize that streets are not what they were 25 years ago and they must be treated in keeping with present-day conditions. There is help that can be given by the motorists in recognizing and anticipating bad conditions, but the pedestrians need to charge themselves with the task of not making them worse.

Let the auto drivers give the pedestrians a fair deal at those points where they are expected to cross the streets and let the pedestrians, including the children, do the same by the motorists and keep out of the lanes of traffic and there will be a marked reduction in the deaths and accidents. This is no more than should be expected in these days of increasing highway traffic and considering that it is so often a matter of life and death there is enough at stake to see that it is given due consideration. Daredevil stunts do not contribute to safety. More cars and more danger call for more safeguards by those directly concerned.

ELEVATED HIGHWAYS

As if to pattern after the methods that have been followed in large cities of erecting elevated lines for the better handling of the transportation requirements, the suggestion has been advanced that this should be done with railroads, except that instead of building an elevated track over existing rail lines the elevated would be a highway for the accomodation of motor traffic.

This would be for the solution of traffic problems in large cities for it could hardly be expected that there would be any such outlay as would be necessary to build such a highway for the accomodation of traffic across country.

Transportation has required the construction of subways as well as elevated lines and it is entirely possible that the motor vehicle traffic will develop to the point where it will be necessary to resort to similar relief. With elevated highways built in large cities so as to accomodate the large number going to certain factories it can be appreciated that it would be a big relief in the morning, at noon and again at closing time.

This plan has been suggested to the city of Detroit by a member of its street railway commission. It hasn't gotten to the point where action is called for but it appears to have been suggested by the plan of the Grand Trunk railroad to build an elevated highway between Detroit and Pontiac. With that a really Detroit will have an opportunity to study its merits and decide whether such a scheme is worthy of being adopted on a bigger scale. No one could be so rash as to say it will not come.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.— It is sometimes amusing to watch floor leaders of the house, and note their widely different characteristics. Tilson, republican floor leader, is broad of shoulder and long of leg; he is finely proportioned and has a heavy shock of dark hair, now tinged with light touches of grey. He stands more than six feet, and has a voice that needs no amplifier to carry it to the farthest corner of the great house chamber; in fact, when amplifiers were in use in the house, there was an S. O. S. call sent to the man in charge, to "shut off that darned thing; Tilson is going to speak now." On the other hand, Floor Leader Garner of Texas, democrat, is light of build, light of hair and light of voice. He is peppery, where Tilson is calm; he is "sandy" in complexion, Tilson dark; Garner wears a light grey suit most of the year; Tilson dresses in dark clothes. They are warm personal friends, and get on well together as leaders of opposing parties, never letting unpleasant personalities drift into their debate, however hard they may whack the opposing party as a whole.

When Speaker Longworth was republican floor leader the contrast was even more noticable. For Longworth is solid in flesh, ruddy in color and dresses in a way his tailor approves, while Garner's grey suit sometimes shows the need of pressing. Longworth comes from a family of wealth and ancient lineage—Garner is rich, but a Texan who made his fortune from raising goats.

It is always interesting to watch any change of seats made by senators from New England or elsewhere. Some prefer to retain their old seats, even after more desirable ones come to them through seniority in office. This year Senator Bingham holds to his former location. He sits in the back row of the senate but in a commanding position directly in front of the president of the senate, though a number of sections away from him. Senator Walcott, as junior senator has the same place as when he took his office, it is the back row, but he is in excellent company, being near Gillett of Massachusetts, who could long ago have changed his seat, had he so desired. Hale of Maine, Moses and Keyes of New Hampshire, and Metcalf of Rhode Island, all prominent and influential, are near neighbors of Walcott.

On the other side of the chamber, Walsh of Massachusetts, the only New England democrat in the senate chose to select a seat precisely identical in its respective location, to that held by Senator Bingham. The back row near the center aisle, where he commands, as does Bingham, a view of the entire chamber and where his voice can carry to all parts, without turning his head from one side or the other to reach the corners, or the Cherokee strip, where a few belated republicans sit in the midst of their political enemies.

Senate seats and committee rooms rest largely on seniority in office. They can be "bespoke" and then referred to a committee, and the request granted if possible, and within the limits of senatorial courtesy, which includes seniority in service. But a wide variety is shown in the preference of senators, some selecting the front and some the back row, when their choice was unrestricted.

Senator Gillett was down in Maine testing his golf record with his crony Senator Frederick Hale of Maine during the recess. Both are members of a select little golf circle where rivalry runs high. Senator Gillett is one of the best golfers in Washington senatorial circles. In fact, he is quoted as having once admitted that he was second in rank, and that the one man who could defeat him was Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi. Funny, but it happens that "Pat", although one of the most bitter foes of republicanism to be found in the senate, is one of the best liked and closest senatorial chums of many of the most staunch regulars republicans of that body. Men let partisanship stop at the deadline of senate debate. Once that is over they know no clan, no party, no north, south, east or west. They are just comrades. Regulars hob-nob with Lafollette, Borah and staunch democrats—"off the floor." Even the late Senator Lodge and the elder Lafollette were often seen strolling in the senate chamber, arm-in-arm, chatting and laughing in warm personal friendship.

Of course, there are a few exceptions of this rule of senate non-partisan comradeship. Perhaps Heflin and Carraway are the most notable. They are too apt to "hit below the belt" and disregard senatorial dignity and courtesy. Harrison's sharp political thrusts are keen, and cut deep. But they are witty and not barbed with personal malice. He uses them to make his point, not to personally offend his colleagues.

The toy industry of New England was brought into prominence when representative of toy factories pleaded for a protective tariff when they appeared before the senate committee on finance. They showed that New England is the center of toy manufacture in the United States, with Connecticut and Massachusetts carrying off the palm. They are anxious over the present situation. The delegation composed of New England men spoke in behalf of all toy manufacturers in the country. They stressed that the ad valorem rates of a law should be applied to a domestic basis of valuation. "It is not for an increase of the existing rate that we plead, but for effective means of giving that rate proper application." Basing the duty on the selling price in the United States would be the solution of the toy manufacturers problems. It was shown that a great percentage of foreign made toys shipped here were made for the purpose of sale in this country and should be made to protect our own manufacturers. The present classification of certain mechanical toys was regarded as unfair to our home manufacturers. New England will have to swallow a bitter pill if the tariff on its shoe and leather industries does not meet its needs. This seems likely to happen, according to the latest reports on how the senate will deal with the bill. One recent report on the cotton mills of the south is encouraging to the textile industry of the New England states. It is to the effect that there was a decrease in number of spindles running in the southern states over that of the previous year.

Official reports show that an immense amount of textiles is exported to the Philippine Islands from this country. In fact the market is now overstocked.

The United States continues to be the leading purchaser of German made toys. The volume is measured by tons. According to a report from the department of commerce the trade is decreasing, the figures for 1926 being 11,100 metric tons which is 1800 tons less than the previous year.

The same report shows a marked increase of sale in the United States of boots and shoes made in Czechoslovakia. A decrease was noted in the sale of similar goods in Germany.

BETTY INHERITS A DOG

In spite of his immense proportions he was all affection, in high spirits and filled with the desire to make himself welcome. His ears stood up in alert attention, his tail waved majestically and his large paws slid all over the waxed floors as he pranced about the room in puppylike playfulness. A beautiful black police dog, he was a present from devoted Uncle John and had just arrived by express. Needless to say, the Miller household found itself turned upside down.

In the first lull of the general tumult which followed his arrival Betty Miller found to her surprise that her voice was at last audible and that her husband and children were actually listening to her.

"He can't stay up here," she was saying. "He's too big. Take him down to the basement, somebody, and give him some food and water and make him a bed."

"I will," agreed Wilma. "Come on, Sultan."

"Aw, let me, let me," begged Mary Jane. "Come on, Sultan!" The dog gave one leap and knocked her down in his efforts to obey. Mother reached for her and set her on the table well out of Sultan's way.

"I can't understand, Jim," she remarked with a touch of irony, "why Uncle John didn't send the family one of his prize steers for the children to play with."

"For the children, did you say?" asked her husband as he patted the dog affectionately. "Why, when John wrote I thought he said that he was sending the dog to me."

Tom who had been wanting a dog for the last six years, now came to the front and began pulling the dog out of the room by his leash.

"This dog," he announced in the authoritative tone of a 12-year-old, "should belong to me. I'm the only boy in the family and it's the boys who always own the dogs. Come on, Sultan!"

He started for the basement stairs, but was in excepted by his father.

"Here, give him to me," he commanded. "You don't know how to take care of a dog."

"Aw, say," Tom defended himself, "don't you s'pose I know something? I don't see why I can't take care of my own dog."

"He's not your dog," interposed Wilma. "Uncle John didn't send him just for you. And I asked first to take care of him, so I don't see why I can't." Mrs. Miller, who sensed instinctively that affairs were reaching a climax, decided to arbitrate. She reached over and examined the tag on the dog's collar.

"It says here," she announced, "'To Jim Miller, and family, this dog is affectionately dedicated.—Uncle John.' So you see," she exclaimed, "the dog belongs to everyone. You can all three go down and see that he is comfortable for the night."

"All right," they all agreed. "Come on, Sultan!"

It was two weeks later. Sultan, chained to his new dog house, was growing restless. Betty Miller, gazing out at him from the kitchen window, turned to her little family.

"I don't believe," she remarked, "that Sultan has been taken for a walk lately. We can't keep him chained up all the time, you know." There was silence. Betty came more directly to the point.

"Which one of you," she asked, "is supposed to take care of the dog today?" Again a silence just as profound. At last Tom spoke.

"It's Wilma's turn, I think."

"It is not, Tom Miller; It's Daddy's!" Jim, from the depths of his chair, and newspaper, seemed too deeply concentrated to hear the conversation. Betty sighed, dressed for the street, and went out to the neglected dog. All Sultan's pent-up energy manifested itself in loving greetings as Betty heroically unfastened the leash and a few minutes later she found herself held taut as the dog towed her down the sidewalk at a rate of what seemed to her about fifty miles an hour.

It was with almost superhuman effort that she was able finally to brace herself against a post and greet her old friend Marjory Watkins.

"Why, Betty Miller!" exclaimed her friend. "What a handsome dog! Do you mean to say he belongs to you?" Betty wound the leash once more about her hand as the dog strained impatiently at his collar.

"Why, I suppose he does!" she exclaimed, speaking as though an idea had just formed in her mind. "Yes, I believe he does. His name is Sultan, and he belongs to me!"—Exchange.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Change in The Calendar

Mr. Editor: May I address a letter through you to the members of the chamber of commerce? The proposed calendar change is of vital interest to every one in the world when he fully understands the issue. The able speaker who advocated a change in the calendar according to the plan known as the Eastman plan was heard at the dinner held recently at Gardner Lake. The chamber of commerce expects soon to vote on its attitude toward this question and I believe is negotiating the referendum now. I presume from this that the objections to the calendar reform have been carefully weighed by the membership but since many brilliant minds have not been instructed as to this matter I venture to doubt that each member is enlightened thereto. It would be a desired event before such vote is taken for the chamber of commerce to appoint one of its members who can present the opposing side of calendar reform and have his speech published also so that the uttermost member might not be in a for as to how to vote, for it seems to me the influence is too overwhelmingly one-sided in favor of the calendar change since only the one brilliant speaker has been publicly heard.

There are weighty arguments against the Cotsworth calendar and Sol Bloom of New York, representative in United States congress, has printed in the Congressional Record many objections to this calendar change. Surely his views are worthy of consideration. See Congressional Record Appendix, date June 18, 1929, page 3174.

I quote from him, "thousands of other business men object to the new proposal," and "also sensible business men rendered a report which should be given attention at this time because the belief has spread that the chamber of commerce and all successful business organizations are wholeheartedly behind the new plan."

Again I quote: "Mr. Speaker, there are approximately 120,000,000 people in the United States and I sincerely doubt whether there are so many as a thousand who earnestly desire the change of the calendar."

As I study this question I find increased unemployment would be induced for many and the final result to big business would be a loss and not a gain, as we must look at financial success in the light of final profits.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Flip Makes a Lot of Trouble.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The curious will soon or late
For other people trouble make —Mrs. Peter Rabbit.

Flip was excited. He was very much excited. He had chased Peter Rabbit into a hole in the old stone wall and now he was barking his head off. "I almost caught that fellow!" he exclaimed as Bowser the Hound came up.

"But you didn't catch him," said Bowser, sniffing at the hole. "That was Peter Rabbit. You may as well stop your barking and come along with me. You can't get in there and Peter won't come out."

Reluctantly Flip left the hole and followed Bowser. He knew that Bowser was right. But somehow he couldn't forget Peter Rabbit. As soon as he got a chance, when he thought Bowser wasn't looking, Flip slipped away and started as fast as his legs could take him over to the old stone wall. Just before he reached that hole in which he had chased Peter, he got a glimpse of Peter's white tail as it once more disappeared down between the old stones. Peter had been out to see if the way was clear. Flip sniffed at the hole. He tried to pull away the stones. He barked and barked and barked.

"He's a noisy fellow," thought Peter. "He's a nuisance. I hope he isn't going to stay around here long. I wonder where he came from anyway. I hope he'll keep away from the dear Old Briar Patch. Just listen to that silly barking! I wonder how long he'll stay?"

Flip acted as if he intended to stay a long time. He lay down beside the hole and panted. He was still for so long that Peter began to think he had gone away. Peter started to come up to find out. Flip's ears are quick. Peter made very little noise, but Flip heard him, instantly he was on his feet and at that hole, barking as before. He barked and barked. Bowser the Hound, over in Farmer Brown's dooryard, was grinning.

By and by Farmer Brown's Boy came out of the house. He heard Flip barking and went down to see what it was all about. As soon as he saw the hole in the old wall he knew who was in it. He had seen Peter use it often.

"Come away, you silly dog!" said Farmer Brown's Boy. "You can't get Peter out of there by barking."

Flip didn't want to leave, but he didn't dare disobey his master. So reluctantly he trotted along at the heels of Farmer Brown's Boy back to the house. He went over and lay down beside Bowser. Farmer Brown's Boy went into the barn to do the evening chores. Flip tried to keep quiet, but he couldn't. He got up and walked about uneasily. Finally, when he thought Bowser was taking a nap, he once more raced down to the Old Orchard to that hole. Again he had a glimpse of Peter. He just had to bark. He was so excited he couldn't help it. So he barked and barked and tried to dig under the old wall and tried to pull apart the stones. He didn't succeed in doing either.

Farmer Brown's Boy finished his work and started for the house. Flip was barking down there by the old stone wall. Farmer Brown's Boy smiled. "I guess that silly dog would stay there all night," said he. "He'll have a sore throat if he keeps on barking like that. I'll have to go get him and shut him up." Once more Farmer Brown's Boy went down after Flip. Flip looked very much ashamed when he saw him coming. He crept to his master's feet. His master scolded him. Flip trotted along back, keeping close to the heels of Farmer Brown's Boy. When they reached home Flip was chained up.

"You've made trouble enough," said his master severely. "You've made a lot of trouble for Peter Rabbit and you've made a lot of trouble for me."

Little Talks on Thrift

Advancement Opportunity Never Better Than Now.

Are chances of success as great today as they were a generation ago? This question was recently asked the writer, who replied that opportunities are unquestionably greater today than they were twenty, forty or sixty years ago.

New inventions and new developments have created opportunities for the men and women who are sufficiently wide awake to seize them. The radio, the automobile, the airplane, the commercial development of electrical power and the science of chemical engineering are all comparatively new. Within the last few years the numbers employed in these industries have been increased manyfold.

Remember that environment has less to do with success than the individual's attitude on the problems of life. Among the common errors of those who fail to advance are lack of vision and concentration.

The problems of life are so large and complex and the range of human endeavor is so wide that individual effort, to be effective, must be limited to definite lines. The young man of today has a limitless range of opportunities before him and he can be successfully fit into the scheme of progress if he will realize that there is always need for those who can do things well.

Our schools and colleges are sending their young men and young women out into the world. While they have completed their academic lessons, they still have before them those larger lessons which can be learned only in the practical school of life. In entering this new life the only practical lesson they should learn first of all is that it is better to know one thing well than to know a score of things superficially, and that it is better to be able to do one thing right than to have twenty slipshod accomplishments.

To see ahead in the light of observable circumstance and tendency, to concentrate on some particular ambition and to do the chosen work with real thoroughness are all keys available today for those who wish to thrive and achieve.—By S. W. Straus, president American Society for Thrift.

The Eyes of 45. Don't Fail to Heed Signs of Failing Eyesight

(From Georgas Memorial Institute)

By Harry S. Gradle, M. D.

Chicago, Illinois.

Just like death and taxes, there comes a time in the life of every individual called presbyopia. This is concerned with the hardening of a little bit of transparent tissue lying deep within the eyes. When that time comes, it becomes necessary to help one's self out and purchase a pair of reading glasses.

Up to the time of presbyopia, the normal person can see in the distance and read nearby without artificial aid, due to an extremely ingenious mechanism that lies just behind the colored part of the eye. Here is a spherical bit of transparent tissue called the lens, which can be flattened when one wishes to look in the distance, or which can become fatter when one wishes to read or look at things at arms' length or less. That change in the thickness is due to the action of a small circular muscle in the eye plus what is known as the normal elasticity of the lens. When the muscle contracts, the lens becomes fatter exactly as does a drop of water that hangs on a thread. When the lens becomes fatter, the rays of light from nearby objects are brought to the proper focus so that the image is clear. But when the annoying age of presbyopia comes on, the lens loses its natural elasticity so that no matter how much the muscle contracts, the lens cannot assume its former rotundity and the image of things nearby is blurred. The time of life at which that loss of elasticity occurs varies with the health and state of tissues of the individual, with the amount of use to which the eye has been subjected in past life, and whether the eye is farsighted or nearsighted. In the former, it appears earlier and in the latter, is apt to come much later.

Fortunately, however, the loss of elasticity can be compensated for with glasses. When you find that the numbers in the telephone directory are no longer clear or that needles are being made with eyes too small for you, don't blame it all on the poor light. Stop and count back on your fingers how old you and see if you have not arrived at the age of presbyopia, the time of reading glasses. And then when you do consult your oculist, tell him your true age and if you are tender on that point, swear him to professional secrecy. But there is no use fighting against presbyopia, for like death and taxes, it is bound to come, and no manner of so-called eye exercises or eye massage or what have you, will put it off one single minute.

"IT'S a pity," thought Jean as Rita confessed she had had a miserable time at the party.

"Rita is adorable, but everybody slights her. I'd love to tell her why. But I just can't."

Luckily though, Rita's doctor was more frank. Today, there's no "B.O."—no body odor spoiling Rita's attractiveness. She has flocks of admirers since she found this delightful way to keep perspiration odorless.

The mirror may say "dainty"—but that's no proof we're never guilty of "B.O."

"B.O." catches us unawares. It gives us away, hurts us, while we least suspect it. We become insensitive to ever-present odors. But pores give off as much as a quart of odor-causing waste daily.

What folly, then, to take chances! Use Lifebuoy always. Once you feel the thrill of a refreshing, invigorating Lifebuoy bath, you'll favor it for life. Its marvelous, antiseptic lather purifies pores so deeply, "B.O." stays away.

BRAKES FAILED TO HOLD FIRE WAGON ON HILL

While responding to a telephone call for a small fire on Happy street about 7:30 o'clock Sunday morning, Squad A truck tipped over on John street. Poor traction made it impossible for the truck to climb the steep hill and the brakes were set when the truck had proceeded about half way up the hill. The brakes failed to hold the heavy machine and it started to roll backwards and, striking a low spot, it tipped over on its side damaging the rear step and rear fender. The firemen escaped injury.

The blaze was a stove pipe fire at the home of Austin Furlong. There was no damage.

COMMERCE REPORT GIVES LOCAL STATISTICS ON MANUFACTURING

According to statistical figures just issued by the commerce department of the census bureau on manufactures in Connecticut in cities of 10,000 population or over in 1925 and 1927, the number of manufacturing establishments fell from 2,107 in 1925 to 1,981 in 1927, but the average number of wage earners increased from 174,403 to 175,901 and the value of manufactured products from $902,266,225 to $921,502,928.

In this city, New London and Willimantic, the three cities of eastern Connecticut in the 10,000 population classification, the census figures show that there were 74 manufacturing establishments in Norwich in 1927, which was one more than two years previous, the number of wage earners decreased from 4,140 in 1925 to 3,988 in 1927, wages dropped from $5,026,397 in 1925 to $4,795,702 in 1927 and value of products decreased from $20,908,609 to $20,046,617.

In New London where the manufacturing business is at much less volume than in Norwich the experience was about the same, 1927 being a smaller business year than 1925. There were 57 manufacturing establishments in New London in 1925, but two less in 1927, while the number of wage earners was 2,517 in 1925 and 2,451 in 1927. The wages in 1925 totalled $2,783,672 and $2,722,103 in 1927 with value of products $13,375,367 in 1925 and $12,853,530 in 1927.

In Willimantic the experience was the other way around as 1927 is shown to have been a better year than 1925. The number of manufacturing establishments, 30, is given as the same in both years, but there were 2,102 wage earners in 1925 and 2,412 in 1927, wages increased from $2,117,319 to $2,548,433 and value of products from $10,230,574 to $11,880,719.

Cities in which there were more wages paid in 1927 than in 1925 included Bridgeport, Bristol, Danbury, Derby, Hartford, Meriden, Naugatuck, New Haven, Stamford and Torrington.

Cities in which less wages were paid in 1927 than in 1925 were Ansonia, Middletown, New Britain, Norwalk and Waterbury.

This census, although involving figures two years old, contains the latest information available. The commerce department is always about a couple of years behind hand in its gathering and compilation of any detailed state manufacturing statistics. The job is slow and complicated.

BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA SEEKING ENDOWMENTS

Scout Executive John L. Sellman, who has just returned from a Regional Scout conference in the Rangeley Lake region, Maine, declared that the meeting was characterized by carefully prepared reports and sober discussion. One hundred and eight persons attended the conference, every local council in New England with the exception of two, being represented by an executive.

One of the high spots of the meeting was the discussion of the ten million dollar endowment fund. Plans have long been under way for the wealthiest people in the country to endow the Boy Scouts of America nationally. This endowment, according to Mr. Sellman, will have no effect on the local organization other than to stimulate interest and renewed confidence in the movement. Of the the 14 councils endowed in this region, the average endowment is $62,500. Locally the contribution scouting could make to the city could be increased many times by endowment. The raising of the national fund, it is thought, will stimulate local endowment.

Some of the uses of the national fund will be the establishment of a National Scout Training college. According to Dean Russell of Teachers college and other educators, Scouting represents the greatest educational force the country has experienced in three decades. The sum of ten millions is not large when one remembers that four millions of boys and men have belonged to this movement since 1910 and that every one of these men and boys have subscribed to the scout oath and law.

According to Mr. Sellman it costs approximately $10 to keep a boy a Boy Scout for one year. This is less than 25 cents a day. Few educational institutions in the country could hope to affect the lives of so many boys at so cheap a rate. This has been made possible by the thousands of volunteers who find inspiration in helping boys.

Some of the major projects which will become effective locally, it is anticipated, will be the incorporation of the local council, a building and adoption of a five-year program, training courses for scoutmasters and troop committeemen, a new council name, a cub scout program for boys from 9 to 12, a rover scout patrol for older boys.

DECLARES SPORTS IMPORTANT IN AMERICA'S DEVELOPMENT

"Sports" was the topic of an interesting address given by Rev. John J. Reilly, curate at St. Patrick's church, at the weekly meeting of the Contact club at the Wauregan hotel, Monday noon. William J. Fitzgerald, chairman of the recreation commission, who was to have been the speaker, was unable to be present owing to illness. President Ernest O. Rodier presided at the meeting which had the usual large attendance.

After speaking of the sports of remote days, especially in Greece and Rome, Father Reilly told of the benefits derived from sports and of the influence of sports on character. Continuing, he said:

Is America following a wrong path in allowing athletics to occupy so important a place in her public life? Is she flinging away her millions which each year throughout the country she is spending in this direction? I do not think so. If by doing it she is giving strong bodies to her children, if she is developing and welding a manhood that is being helped to serve God and country then let her go on, the money should not be begrudged. It is better than buying battleships and the like. And you will find that our policy is being imitated elsewhere. They are a little jealous of our superiority in sport and the other nations are taking means to wrest this from us. Centuries ago there were started in Greece in the city of Olympia games and contests of sport taking place every four years. It seems the Greeks had everything their own way. Later the Romans took the lead and the Roman amphitheatre rang with the shouts and applause. These games have come down to our day and the nation that has taken the place of Greece and Rome, that has set the pace for every nation and has been a victor every time since the renewal of the games, that has had her flag wave victoriously from the arena of Stockholm, Antwerp, Paris and Amsterdam, is America. America has come out triumphant in these international games with monotonous regularity. And in all those branches, be it swimming, boxing, tennis or track, the world concedes the superiority of the American athlete. This is a tradition to keep up, a tradition as glorious as ever made on a battlefield, a tradition which can be kept up only by such institutions as the playground and the school where the children are taken kept from harm's way, given a physical training that will harmonize with the training of their souls and make them better men and better women, better citizens not only of America and the world, but stalwart citizens of heaven, too.

9 Out of 10 Men and Women Have Nervous Scalp, Probably the Commonest Cause of Dandruff and Thin, Faded, Brittle, Falling Hair.

There is no longer any guesswork as to what causes hair in the great majority of cases to fall out, grow brittle, scraggly and dull. The scalp has nerves like any other part of the body, and scalp specialists now recognize that the nervous strain of modern living is very bad for the hair.

Nervous scalp is commonly the condition causing a too oily, too dry or dandruff-caked scalp.

To correct and prevent nervous scalp and the harm it does to even naturally fine heads of hair, Parisian Sage was scientifically developed.

From the very first application, Parisian Sage has a wonderfully soothing, relaxing effect on the scalp nerves, increases the blood supply to the dying hair-roots, insures them the nourishment they so badly need for vigorous new hair growth.

ACADEMY GRIDSTERS PLAY OPENING GAME SATURDAY AGAINST CHAPMAN

The Academy football season opens Saturday at the campus with Chapman Tech, a school which promises to be one of Eastern Connecticut's best this season, furnishing the opposition. This is a conference tilt and will give local fans a good idea of the manner in which the Wildcats are to conduct themselves this autumn on the gridiron.

Coach Courtland C. Whitney has four more days in which to get his men in fighting trim for this stiff tussle. The Red and White has had about two weeks of stiff work and no doubt the latter part of the week will be devoted to polishing-up the raw edges. Sessions have been held on the last two Saturdays in order to round the team into as good form as

CHET BERGHINZO
Academy Captain

Tech will show. The New Londoners will have about two weeks edge in training on the Academy for Coach Johnny Conway sounded the first call down there in August.

Tech will present practically a veteran team Saturday and this, with the added time for practice, will at least put them on a par with the locals, whereas for the past few years the Academy has had a rather easy time with this club.

Coach Whitney has not selected any starting lineup as yet and probably will not do so until Friday. The squad of 35 candidates has been through a couple of scrimmages and is in fairly good physical shape. The annual transformation from a diamond to a gridiron at the campus has been nearly completed. The goalpost uprights are in position waiting for the cross-bar while the bleachers have been placed along both sides of the field.

The Alling Rubber Co. of this city is offering an All-American football to the boy under 15 picking the Academy football lineup. All selections must be in by Oct. 1 and no doubt this will create much interest among the younger generation.

Other games involving Eastern Connecticut schools this week, which is really the opener, follow:

Friday

South Kingstown, R. I., at Westerly.

Saturday

East Douglas (Mass.) at Putnam. Stonington at Plainfield, Bulkeley at Meriden.

BEAUREGARD TO RESUME TRAINING IMMEDIATELY

He is to join the recently organized Shyma club of Taftville, at whose quarters he will attempt to reduce his avoirdupois to fighting weight. He fights at 118 pounds.

Beauregard, who is anxious to get back into the squared ring, at the present time weighs five pounds overweight, having put on that much poundage in traveling. With consistent and painstaking training Al expects to be in first class condition in about a month, when he will take on all comers in his class. Up to the present time Beauregard has made an enviable record against fighters in this state and elsewhere.

On the trip to the west coast he was accompanied by Robert Graham of the Canal Zone, Panama, having covered more than 10,000 miles in less than five weeks. In remarking on the trip, which took them to the important scenic spots in the states, the Taftville boy said that the New England states could not be beaten for scenery.

Beauregard will fight under the management of Denny McMahan of Meriden.

MGR. HUGGINS CONDITION STILL REMAINS CRITICAL

NEW YORK, Sept. 23—(AP)—The condition of Miller J. Huggins, veteran manager of the New York Yankees, took so serious a turn today that a blood transfusion was necessary in an effort to check the spread of infection, growing out of an attack of influenza and erysipelas.

The outcome of the transfusion was in doubt, according to the only bulletin issued by Dr. Edward H. King, the Yankee's club physician, late in the afternoon. He described Huggins as a "very sick man" and explained that in such an illness, arising from infection, there was no crisis.

Huggins was taken to St. Vincent's hospital last Friday, upon the insistence of Dr. King, after being affected, first by a cold and then by a boil on the face. Complications quickly followed and his condition became so critical today that a hurried consultation of specialists was called by Dr. King, resulting in the decision to try a blood transfusion.

The news of the little Yankee pilot's relapse stirred baseball men generally but particularly the players and officials of the club which Huggins has led to six pennants and three world's championships in the period of 12 years in which he has directed its destinies. The Yankee offices kept in touch with the hospital hourly or otherwise were advised of Huggins' condition by his brother and sister, Myrtle and Arthur Huggins, who spent most of the day by the bedside.

Through a stormy career as the leader of the Yankees, where he has even had to fight against criticism while winning pennants with a celebrated cast headed by Babe Ruth, Huggins never has enjoyed really robust health. He underwent minor operations in 1922 and again in 1925. Often he has insisted upon getting into uniform and going on the field to direct the team when his health was far from the best.

The taciturn pilot celebrated his 45th birthday last March 27. Born in Cincinnati, he has been in baseball since 1898, in the majors since 1904 when he joined his home town Reds and a major league manager since 1913. He took command of the St. Louis Cardinals that year and was picked by the Ruppert-Huston regime to reorganize the Yankees in 1918.

At 7:30 tonight Dr. King issued the following statement:

"Mr. Huggins' condition is continuing about the same, has temperature of 104 degrees. He has reacted well from his transfusion. His condition remains critical."

At 10:30 o'clock, Dr. King issued a bulletin in which he said Huggins' temperature had risen to 105. The bulletin said:

"Mr. Huggins' temperature has increased to 105. This may be due in part to the reaction of the transfusion which sometimes occurs. Then again this increase from 104 may not be due to the reaction. His condition is still critical."

MACK AND BAKER FAVOR SHORTER BASEBALL SEASON

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 23—(AP)—Both Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, and William F. Baker, boss of the Phillies, lined up today with E. S. Barnard, president of the American league, for a shorter baseball season. Barnard stated here a few days ago he was convinced the season was too long, and declared that so far as his league was concerned the schedule in 1930 would be shorter. The 1929 season ends October 6.

"This season is much too long," Mack said, "I would much rather have the championship games end with the last day of September. I can see no benefit in going along until October 6. The world series does not start until October 8, and, if it should require seven games, it means the series won't be over until the 16th. This is the time for football and we should be finished with the world series by October 10."

EIGHT MEETS PLANNED FOR N. F. A. CROSS COUNTRY TEAM

About 25 candidates are working out daily at the Academy in preparation for the opening of the cross-country season. First call was issued last week by Coach John P. Murphy. Mr. Murphy succeeds Matthew J. Sheridan as the mentor, the latter having entered Yale Law School.

A schedule with eight meets is planned including tilts with Conn. Aggie Frosh, Suffield school and leading schools of this section. The schedule at present is but tentative, some dates being listed as pending.

BAT BATTALINO
New World's Featherweight Champion

I suppose a good many of you folks either saw, or read about the Battalino-Routis fight last night.

I was one of the fortunate ones to see it but I'll reserve my comment on the scrap until tomorrow. But didja ever hear a wife give her hubby a send off to an open air fight?

It's really laughable how much interest friend wife takes in her subordinate when he's going out alone. Especially if he's going with several men and there's a woman in the crowd.

"Now John," says the frau, "you'll want your heavy overcoat 'cause you know how cold it gets nights. And those river fogs certainly make your asthma worse."

"And John, don't drink any liquor. You know what terrible stuff they have at those fights, and I'd hate to have you come home blind. If you must drink something get a cup of hot coffee."

"And John, don't eat too many hot dogs and peanuts you know your stomach has been upset for the last few days. The Lord knows I don't want you sick when I've got a bridge party on this week."

"And John, do be careful and don't drive fast, you know there's lots of traffic on a night like that and you never know what will happen. I'll be worried until you get back."

"And John, just one more word, you know Mrs. Blank is going to be in your party and you know what an outrageous flirt she is. Now use discretion 'cause you know how people talk."

"No, I'm not jealous, but it's the appearances that I'm thinking of. Just to please me sit with the men instead of with her. Now kiss me and be a good boy."

Wow, if John remembered all those things he must have had a whale of a time. It probably took all his time to remember his instructions.

So long.

ABOUT 17,000 PAID $60,000 TO SEE BATTALINO WIN TITLE FROM ROUTIS

The featherweight title came back to Connecticut last night at the Hartford Velodrome when Bat Battalino, 21 year old Italian of Hartford, wrested the crown from the rugged brow of Andre Routis of France in a 15 round bout that was devoid of much open fighting. Routis, a clever infighter, ripped and tore at the challenger's body, only occasionally loosing a swing for the law. Battalino, whose forte is his long range fighting, was at a loss at close range but was effective in his sharpshooting to the head.

So far did the slim Italian youth outpoint his more rugged opponent that Referee Jack Conway's official card showed 75 points for Battalino and 53 for the Frenchman. However not a few of the 17,000 fans who paid something like $60,000 to see the battle, disagreed with Conway's count. Routis really scored heavily in the infighting, a factor that escaped many of the critics and although he clearly lost his crown it was by a much smaller margin than 75 to 53, Conway gave Battalino the entire fifteen rounds but many of the newspaper fraternity credited Routis with four rounds, the second, seventh, eighth and fourteenth rounds while two were even, leaving Battalino nine rounds to his credit.

Early in the fight Battalino opened an old cut on Routis' eye and later cut his scalp but outside of this little real damage was done. Routis started a trickle of blood from Battalino's nose in the second round and then in the fourteenth he split the inside of the Italian's lip. Both went to the floor once, not by knockdowns but through slips. There were only a few spots where there was real action Routis declining to stand and swap punches with the Hartford boy, except on one occasion and in this flurry Battalino showed to advantage.

Routis fought a cautious fight, much too cautious to retain his title. Although he is a past master at infighting he was unable to hurt Battalino with his fierce body punching, although he jarred him several times with his rights to the jaw in the clinches.

Although it was known to only a few at the ringside Battalino displaced amazing grit after the seventh round for one of the bones in his hand was broken in this round. With his hand paining him he continued to battle on to the championship and when it was all over he was suffering so that he was unable to shake the hand of the defeated champion. Known to have brittle hands no one suspected that his hand had gone back on him as he continued to use it with the same effectiveness as he did in the early rounds although every blow sent a shooting pain through his arm.

And so the featherweight title comes back to Connecticut after having been vacated by Kid Kaplan several years ago. Battalino a youth of only 21 years has had a sensational rise from almost pugilistic obscurity to the glaring limelight of a championship. Only three short years ago he was battling as an amateur and has never fought outside the state in any major battle. His most prominent ring victory being his win over Al Brown, the sensational Negro battler a few months ago.

Johnny Kop Kayoes Zotter

Johnny Kop's sensational knockout of Joe Zotter of New Britain in the third round of a scheduled, six round bout was the real high light of what was otherwise a rather drab show. The Norwich lightweight displayed as much finish in his boxing as any man on the card not excepting the principals in the championship bout. After a rather tame first round Kop opened his two fisted attack on Zotter and with clean punching battered his way to a knockout. Once in the second round Kop caught Zotter with a stunning left to the jaw and the New Britain boy went down for a count of seven. He climbed to his feet and Kop was slow in following up his advantage with the result that Zotter weathered the round.

At the opening of the third Kop tore in to meet the New Britain boxer, drove him to the ropes in his own corner and then slipped over a crushing right flush to the jaw. Zotters dropped in his corner and was counted out. In fact, it was several minutes before he was able to leave the ring under his own power. Kop's victory was his seventh straight knockout since entering the professional ranks a few months ago.

The result of the fight as given out early in the evening by a Hartford reporter through the Associated Press and broadcast by the Bulletin editorial rooms was erroneous. This report said that Kop was knocked out in the first minute of the third round by Zotter.

Preliminaries

In the first preliminary Frankie Martin, of Pittsfield, Mass., defeated Roland Roche, of Holyoke, in a four-round decision affair. Roche weighed 136½, Martin 126.

Johnny Krieger, 166½, of New Jersey, won a six-round decision over Roy Powers, 163½, of Holyoke.

In the first of two preliminaries staged after the main bout, Alf Schell, German welterweight, won from Johnny Walker, of Boston, on a foul in the seventh round. Schell dropped from a low punch after the bell ended the round. Walker weighed 145, Schell 146.

Mickey Flahive, of Hartford, 135 3-4, won the final match of the evening on a decision in eight rounds over Gene Martin, of Waterbury, 139 1-4.

HENRY CIUCI COPS FIRST MONEY IN N. E. P. G. A. TOURNEY

HARTFORD, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Henry Ciuci, slim young professional from the Mill River club, near Bridgeport, sent a $300 eight-foot putt spinning into the cup for a birdie three on the home hole at the Wampanoag Country club today, and that dead-sure stroking gave him first money in the annual New England P. G. A. tournament under the auspices of the Butchard-Nichols Co.

That eight-footer for a birdie gave Ciuci a dramatic one-shot edge over Louis Chiapetta, Sequin pro, who was in the same foursome, and Jack Stait, Hartford golf club. Ciuci was 73-74—147, Chiapetta 75-73—148 and Stait 71-77—148.

Massie Miller, Norwich, had a card of 153.

Jimmy Sullivan Outpointed

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Sept. 23—(AP)—Joe Tavelieri, 161 1-2, of Cambridge, outpointed Jimmy Sullivan, Miami, Fla., battler, 160, in ten rounds at the Pittsfield A. C. tonight. Milt Sample, 158 1-2, of Adams, won an eight round decision over Kid Decker, Housatonic, 160, in the semi-final.

SCOTT WINS CLOSE DECISION FROM CAMPOLO IN TEN BRUISING ROUNDS

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP)—After being on the verge of a knockout in the very first round, Shufflin' Phil Scott, British heavyweight champion, made a remarkable come-back tonight to defeat Victorio Marlo Campolo, the galloping gaucho of the Argentine, in the battle of the leaning towers.

Scott carried off a close decision after ten bruising rounds of battling between a brace of the tallest and buikiest heavyweights in the business. The decision was 2 to 1 in favor of the Briton, who gained the votes of the two judges, Harold Barnes and Charles F. Mathison, to offset the ballot which Arthur Donovan, the referee, cast for Campolo.

A crowd of 15,000 fans in Ebbets field, the Brooklyn National league ball park, received the decision with a mixture of cheers and boos.

Scott swayed the official decision in his favor by a rally which he sustained throughout the last four rounds, outboxing and outsmarting the heavier, harder-hitting Italian from the Argentine Pampas after withstanding severe body punishment throughout the first half of the bout. This rally by the crouching, shuffling Englishman enabled him to show a margin of five rounds to four for Campolo with one even. The big Argentine, weighing 223 3-4 to Scott's 215½ and packing much the more dangerous wallop in his right hand, came close to scoring a knockout in the first round but he found the Briton's defense difficult to penetrate after that and appeared tired at the close.

"It took me seven rounds to recover from that first right to the jaw," Scott declared in his dressing room after the battle. To ringside observers it appeared, on the other hand, that Campolo's short, crushing rights to the region under the heart were chiefly responsible for the Englishman's distress in the first few moments of the fight.

This opening rush of the Argentine almost swept Scott off his feet. With both fists pumping furiously, Campolo had thee Englishman's legs buckling and his knees sagging. The crowd roared for a quick knockout but Shuffling Phil fought on desperately, weak and groggy, until the bell saved him and sent him to his corner for the smelling salts and good advice from his chief handler, "Jimmy" Johnston.

For the next five rounds, Scott boxed warily, employing a left jab and a choppy right to the head as he bounced in and out of Campolo's reach. The angular Argentine stalked his foe persistently. Occasionally he landed the crushing right to the body, forcing the fighting most of the time, but he was clearly outboxed. Twice, in the fifth and sixth, Campolo was warned for hitting low.

As if emboldened by his success in standing off Campolo's vicious rushes, Scott took the aggressive in the seventh round for the first time. This, as it developed, was the turning point of the fight. The Briton went so far as to slug it out with the Argentine at several stages in the last few rounds, stabbing Victorio off balance with stinging lefts and battering him with a short right. Campolo's nose and left eye were cut in the ninth and his attack, while always dangerous, had slowed up appreciably.

It was so close a fight, however, that Scott needed to outpoint his man in the tenth and final round to gain the decision. The Briton, never throwing caution so far to the winds as to risk any prolonged exchange at close range, finished with a fine exhibition of boxing.

The defeat abruptly checked the rush of Campolo into the heavyweight picture, as the result of a recent victory over Tom Heeney, and at the same time boosted the stock of the British contender for heavyweight honors.

The paid attendance was 11,073 and the gross receipts $45,674 although promoters estimated approximately 15,000 spectators were inside the park.

Ernie Schaaf, sailor heavyweight from Boston, won the decision from Jack Renault, veteran and somewhat rotund Canadian, in a ten-round match fought after the main bout. Renault was on the floor from a left hook to the chin and had taken a count of six when the bell rang in the seventh round. Schaaf weighed 195½ to 206 for Renault.

FIGHTING SPIRIT PERVADES RANKS OF CHICAGO CUBS

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Fighting spirit, inspired by profound loyalty to William Wrigley and Joe McCarthy, pervades the ranks of the bristling Cubs as they start fortifying against the World series assault of Connie Mack's rampant Athletics.

Scouts and sports writers, who have studied baseball teams year in and year out, admit they never before have they seen a happier and still determined group of players than the fighters Manager McCarthy will send against Philadelphia.

"What the Athletics have over the Cubs in actual playing talent, the Cubs will make up for by their indomitable spirit and loyalty," one grizzled diamond scout remarked.

POETRY

To a Young Girl.

I, who have found the way that you must go,
I, who have learned so much that you must know,
Watch wistfully, and long to take your hand
Through a strange land.
To walk the way with you—and, side by side,
Swerve from the rocks on which I fell and cried.
Swerve from the ragged paths that grow too steep
For feet to keep.

I, who have surely touched reality,
Turn today—to go with you and see
Once more the morning highway gleaming bright
With shimmering light.
To watch you, with the dreams still in your eyes,
Meet at each turn some exquisite surprise;
A gold-winged bird—a wild rose in the grass,
Too sweet to pass.

Dear little girl, before our journey's end,
Perhaps—perhaps around some blossoming bend,
Young love may turn, and running straight and true,
Will come to you.
And I will leave you then—as shadows pass
Over the long, sweet blowing Summer grass
Glad, glad for you. Oh, little girl, I know
When I should go.

—Grace Noll Crowell, in the Delineator.

Why? Why?? Why???

If one is a tooth and the whole set are teeth,
Then why shouldn't both in the plural be be eth?
If the plural of man is always called men
Why shouldn't the plural of pan be called pen?
You may find a lone mouse or a whole nest of mice,
But more than one house is most surely not hice.
A cow in the plural is properly kine
But a bow if repeated is never a bine.
Then one may be that and two would be those,
Yet hat in the plural would never be hose.
We speak of a brother and also of brethren
But though we say mother we never say methren
The masculine pronouns are he, his and him,
But imagine a feminine she, shis and shim!
So the English, I fancy you all will agree,
Is the funniest language you ever did see.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Anxious Sufferer—"Doctor how soon do you think I shall be well enough to eat things that don't agree with me?"
—Boston Transcript.

"Mama, what's all that noise in the cellar?"
"Oh, that's only papa keeping still."
—Calif. Guardsmen.

"Well, you're a fine little man. How old are you?"
"Oh, two mumps and a few years."
—Humorist.

"Who the deuce do you think you are?"
"I'm just a little dandruff trying to get a head."—West Point Pointer.

Passer-by (suspiciously): "Why are you begging with two hats?"
Beggar: "Trade is so brisk that I've had to enlarge my premises."—New York Sun.

"I say! Your ears are extraordinarily long," said the would-be wit.
"Yes, put them on your head and we should have a fine donkey."—Kloda Hans.

Teacher—Which is farther away, Africa or the moon?
Small Boy—Africa.
Africa? What makes you think that?
'Cause we can see the moon and we can't see Africa.—Children.

The boots at San Diego were getting instruction in regard to firearms, when the drill sergeant asked one of the recruits: "Say, Jones, what's the first thing you do when cleaning your rifle?"
"I always look at the number," replied Jones.
"Oh, you do," said the sergeant, sarcastically. "What's the big idea?"
"So I won't clean someone else's."

Computations of triangulation observations of the Peak Garmo in Russia have just been completed by Richard Finsterwalder, a member of the Soviet-German expedition to Pamir, revealing that Peak Garmo has a greater aldtitude than any other mountain in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. Its height is computed as being 7,495 meters or about 24,583 feet. No mountain on that part of the world exceeds Peak Garmo in height. The tallest in North America, Mt. McKinley, is only 20,300 feet in height, while South America's loftiest peak reaches but 23,080 feet. Peak Garmo is also taller than any of the peaks in the Alps. In fact, the only mountains which are known to be taller are some of the peaks in the Himalayas and other of the tallest Asiatic mountains. Peak Garmo lies among the wild and inaccessible summits of the Pamir mountains. Its heights have probably never been reached by any human being.

VERY ATTRACTIVE ENGLISH HOUSE ERECTED ON McKINLEY AVE. EXTENSION

New Ten-Room House Recently Completed

Without doubt what is one of the most attractive as well as the most modern homes in Norwich has been built by Edward Neiderman at the corner of Rockwell street and McKinley avenue extension. The house which is built on the English type of architecture was designed by Mr. Neiderman himself and he has paid particular attention to making the house attractive as well as convenient.

The house is set on a large corner lot among beautiful shade trees which tended to enhance the beauty of the building. The exterior is finished in 24-inch creodipt shingles on the sidewalls. The roof is covered with Johns-Manville red shingle roofing. The chimney which is on the outside is in broken stone much on the colonial plan of chimney. Stone steps lead to all entrances from old-fashioned stone walks.

The interior of the house is beautifully designed and finished in craftex, tile and sand finish. On the first floor is a reception room, large living room with sunparlor, dining room, kitchen, breakfast nook, and bath. On the second floor is a library and music room, master bedroom, two smaller bedrooms and a bath. All the rooms are finished in either craftex or sand-finish, in which a panel effect is carried out.

The living room has a large stone fireplace with a hearth of tile from a Mauravian castle. The doorways connecting the various rooms are of the arch effect.

The floors throughout the building are of quartered oak laid in log cabin style. The floor surfacing has been done by Charles MacNeil, who has done an exceptionally fine piece of work in bringing out the beauty of the wood.

The bathrooms are in white tile with gray trim and the walls above the tile are in blue craftex. The kitchen is exceptionally well appointed. The floor is of terra cotta and black tile and the sidewalks are of white and black tile. There is a built-in gas range. The sink is of white porcelain with tile drain board and a built-in electric dish-washer. The washer and range were installed by Carl Berkoff who also put in the heating system.

Other convenient appointments in the house include clothes chutes to the laundry in the basement, built in telephone nooks, and venetian medicine cabinets in the bathrooms.

In the basement is the laundry, two garages, storage space and boiler room. The heating is done by Super-oil heater installed by Mr. Berkoff. There is also a hot water heater that supplies hot water the entire year. The plumbing is all in brass.

The house is one that compares very favorably with any house in eastern Connecticut. By very little work the house is so arranged that it can be made into a two-family house.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

In Norwich during the past week there were 14 sales of real estate, nine more than for the corresponding week in 1928. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $27,950 and $38,950.

There were 12 sales of real estate in New London during the past week as compared to 13 sales for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $167,140 and $49,800.

CHAMBERLIN METAL WEATHER STRIPS
"The Standard for 36 Years"

You cannot get the story of the Chamberlin Weather Strip from a competitive weather strip salesman—and some people found that out when it was too late.

I talked with one man a few days back and he said: "Chamberlin is too expensive. I can have a strip put on my door that will only cost me $10 while your strip will at least cost me $15." This man was talking about a spring bronze job. I told him this same job he gets for $10, I would sell him for $9, and I have been selling it at that price for five years and that is my price today.

He invited me in the house and after hearing the Chamberlin story he gave me an order for 12 windows and 2 doors and when I was leaving him at his door he said:

"It Pays to Call a Chamberlin Salesman and Get the Story Right."

FIREPLACE BUILT ON METAL FRAME HAS STRENGTH

Builders of modern homes are often specifying a new built-in fireplace unit that is guaranteed to provide perfect operation with more than double heat from the same fuel. Especially enthusiastic are those who, therefore, have been denied the pleasures and comforts of an open fire due to smoke, cold drafts and lack of actual heat.

This unit is a simple metal form around which the masonry is laid. It is scientifically designed and constructed to furnish a new source of air circulation and heat. The fireplace built around this device operates on the same principle as a warm air furnace. Cold air circulates through the double-walled heating chamber which surrounds the fire, is heated, and sent back into the room again. This heat, previously wasted up the chimney, saves furnace operation on unseasonable cool days. For southern homes, summer cottages and mountain cabins this new type of heating equipment is in many instances all that is needed.

Not only does this method of construction provide a source of extra heat, it also elliminates the common drawbacks of fireplace operation. Smoking and cold drafts that mar the enjoyment of an open fire are completely eliminated, according to the manufacturers.

This unit is not an addition to the fireplace, it is the fireplace itself. Only the decorative masonry is needed to complete the installation and can be laid by any mason.

Each unit is complete from floor to chimney flue, ready to install. It saves cost of firebrick, damper and smoke chamber as well as labor in correctly forming the fireplace. Most builders figure that these savings make the cost little if any more than that of the ordinary installation.

This modern method of fireplace construction provides a fireplace that the home owner will be able to use and will want to use.

NEW LONDON.

Permits for 15 new houses have been granted by the city council this month, making September one of the outstanding months of the year in respect to the number of new houses started in the process of construction. Five of the 15 new house permits were issued at the regular council meeting this week and ten had been previously granted.

Besides the new house permits there have been 27 other permits issued thus far this month, indicating that there is no lagging of local building for the immediate future.

ANNUAL AUGUST DECLINE SHOWS IN STATE BUILDING

Building permits issued by cities and towns in Connecticut during August showed their customary mid-summer decline in volume, according to the monthly survey compiled by the committee on industrial development of the New Haven railroad. Among the 22 communities covered in the railroad survey, August permits fell off by $1,903,252 as compared with the July total of the same places. August permits, however, compared favorably with those issued in August, 1928, 12 of the 22 communities showing increases over their figures of a year ago. These were Bridgeport, Danbury, Derby, Greenwich, Hamden, Hartford, Middletown, Naugatuck, Norwich, Torrington, West Hartford and Willimantic.

Greenwich topped the list for the month with permits valued at $854,425. Hartford was second with $750,259, and West Hartford third with $701,272. All three of these, together with seven other cities and towns enjoyed gains over July figures. The others were Danbury, Derby, Meriden, Middletown, Norwalk, West Haven and Willimantic.

Comparative building permit figures for August, 1929 and August, 1928, are as follows:

Bristol	$ 56,580	$194,222
Bridgeport	230,713	208,513

FIVE BUILDING PERMITS GRANTED THIS WEEK BY FIRE MARSHAL H. R. TAFT

Five building permits were granted by Fire Marshal Henry R. Taft during the past week for construction work within the city limits. The largest of the permits is granted to Contractor P. F. Sweeney to alter and build an addition to the building of the Greek Orthodox church on Boswell avenue.

The present building is to be moved back from its present location and a brick addition 9x34 feet and one story high built on the front of the building. The basement of the church is to be remodeled into a school. The estimated cost is $10,000.

Other permits issued include the following:

To Contractor P. F. Sweeney to erect a dormer window on the second story of the present frame house owned by Julius Cadden on Broad street. The estimated cost is $200.

To Louis Sadernsky to remodel house into a store at 27 Fifth street. The store will have a plate glass front. The estimated cost is $100.

To Robert Goldstein to build a one-room addition to his present house at 123 Maple street. The addition will be on the south side of the building and will be 15x18 feet. It will be of frame construction to conform to the present building. The estimated cost is $500.

To Archibald Cochran to add to the present frame shed at 28 Fountain street to make a one-car garage. The addition will be 15x12 feet. The estimated cost is $50.

Work has been started on the metal and asbestos storage building for the American Thermos Bottle company on Laurel Hill. The building will have a stone and concrete foundation.

Good progress has been made on other buildings in the city and several have almost reached the completion stage.

STEEL CASEMENTS SAVE MUCH TIME AND LABOR

A sun-worshipping generation finds that the best way of bringing a maximum of sunshine and fresh air into its homes is by the specification of steel casement windows when home building. With such windows open no part of the sash obstructs the full passage of air on days in midsummer when all available breeze is so much needed in the house.

The new combination casements of one manufacturer do away with building up fixed and hinged units on the home buildings job. These units, completely assembled in the factory, eliminate costly field labor. By this means a casement window is delivered to the home builder ready to fill a prescribed opening.

If, for instance, the problem is that of a long narrow window it may be desirable to fill the upper quarter with a transom two feet deep and the lower part with a single casement four feet deep. Winter ventilation is made more simple by such an arrangement. In this instance the units would be combined at the factory and delivered to the home builder ready for placing in the window opening.

These combination units are painted with a priming coat, even in concealed spaces that could not be reached when the painter applies the final coat. It is necessary only to attach the hardware which is furnished with the casement.

PAINT BRUSH PLAYS AN IMPORTANT ROLE

Everybody knows that a paint brush is made up of two main parts, the bristles that spread the paint and the handle that the painter grasps. What may not be so apparent is the wisdom of knowing in any painting job just what is going on both the handle end and on the bristle end.

At the bristle end of the brush we have the materials for the work to be done, the white-lead, linseed oil and tinting colors. These must be mixed and tinted to the individual taste and applied in such a manner as to insure a satisfactory and lasting job and it is in this end of the work that the competent painter proves his worth and in the long run pays for himself.

Some people upon deciding to have a room decorated or a house painted think first of how cheaply the job can be done instead of taking into consideration the fact that in the long run the painter who charges a little more and guarantees a perfect job is by far the cheapest painter of all.

Good painters, men of reputation, are forever on the lookout for new ideas in decoration, for means of doing the work so that it will last longer. And although as a result they may charge more they will invariably stand back of the work after it has been done.

The Twentieth Century MOLOCH

Moloch was a fire god. Ages ago parents cast their children into his lap—hoping thus to gain the favor of this deity.

Inhuman! Ghastly! But no more so than today's mad sacrifice to fire—that carries not even the hope of reward the pagans had. About half a billion dollars a year direct loss; a yearly toll of more than 10,000 lives to make the record gruesome. The Presidential proclamation preceding is sufficient evidence of the seriousness of the country's avoidable fire waste.

The solution to this problem is a community matter. More than six hundred cities and towns have committees on fire prevention and control. These function effectively all year.

Stimulated by the President's proclamation, thousands of communities, through civic bodies, business organizations, schools and other means, observe Fire Prevention Week.

In support of such movements the Stock Fire Insurance companies, through the National Board of Fire Underwriters and affiliated organizations, have long maintained staffs of engineers and experts in fire prevention. These facilities are offered free to any community, that the spirit of Fire Prevention Week may be further promoted year by year.

Public co-operation with the Stock Fire Insurance companies has already effected a reduction in the annual fire waste, and continuous reductions in the cost of fire insurance for practically twenty years.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

Chinese Kites.

They hang beside the wall
Bright butterflies, green dragons,
Fish and tiger heads,
Gray hawks and giant restless birds.
The crowding lookers watch
The moving tissue on the wall;
Children test with grimy hands
The thickness of the paper wings,
And laugh in wiggling joy.
When coppers can be found to buy,
Down narrow lanes they run
And fly their paper treasures
High over towers, moats,
And palace walls.
The air will soon be singing
With the wind on whipping cord,
And brightest coloured fantasies
Will dive and soar above
The dusty city streets
And welcome in the coming
Of the spring.
—Robert Merrill Bartlett in the Christian Science Monitor.

The Glow-Worm.

Nor crush a worm, whose useful light
Might serve, however small
To show a stumbling-stone by night,
And save man from a fall.
—William Cowper.

Speak Gently.

Speak gently! It is better far
To rule by love than fear;
Speak gently! Let not harsh words mar
The good we might do here.

Speak gently! 'Tis a little thing.
Dropped in the heart's deep well,
The good, the joy, which it may bring.
Eternity shall tell.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE-AWAKES.

Throughout the United States there are over 25 species of the wren, one of the best-known birds in the country. The wren, in one species or another, is found in almost any part of the nation. It is a small bird, somewhat the color of the mouse and, as it flits about in the bushes and hedges, reminds one somewhat of the mouse.

The wren is seldom seen in the open country, as no flights are taken, because the bird confines itself to the bushes. If one is quiet, one may observe this little bird as it moves about and may be able to come very close without interfering with the home life.

The wren is a great singer and produces some very loud songs for a creature so small. When the nest is made and Mrs. Wren is busily engaged in incubation, Mr. Wren sits outside, close by, and with his head thrown back sings until it seems he will split himself with song, his little body shaking all over with vibration.

The male is dark brown in color, barred somewhat with black. The female is practically the same color and markings but is a little smaller in size. It is the female that makes the selection of the home and attends to all the domestic details. So far as she is concerned Mr. Wren may go, never to return for she will soon pick another mate.

In food habits the wren is entirely beneficial, for the food is almost entirely animal. Of a great number of stomachs examined, 98 per cent. of the contents was made up of insects or their allies and only two per cent was vegetable food. This included bits of grass which had evidently been taken while capturing insects. The stomach contents contained grasshoppers, beetles, caterpillars, bugs and spiders. The bird is a great hunter and searches diligently about barns, decaying trees, posts, vines and spaces in walls for insects.

The nest is made up of sticks, grass, string, moss and almost any material available. Often a great quantity of sticks is taken into a box, carried out again and once more the work of carrying them back begins. Often several nests will be built in the vicinity and it has been thought by many, that these were practice nests built by the young of the previous year; others say it is a peculiarity of the bird that it tries several nests before making a final decision.

The wren is not particular as to the place of building but will take up its abode in boxes, tin cans, or crevices. One family built in the body of a hawk which had been nailed to a barn door; another built in the skull of a calf; still another built in an old mitten. No matter where the bird takes possession, it pours out its thanks in sweet song. The house is kept clean and tidy and free from vermin.

Six to eight eggs are laid. They are of a creamy color and so thickly spotted with brown that the whole egg appears tinged.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE-AWAKES.

Living in the Country.

Dear Uncle Jed: I live in the country and like it very much. It seems so good to be away from the city where you don't have to play in the crowded streets and get all the smoke from the trains, and have to listen to the noise of trains and trolleys and cars all night. I find in the country that everything is quiet and you can get plenty of good milk and fresh eggs. It just seems like I never could go to the city again to live. So let us all appreciate living in the country.

JANE FRANCES, Age 9
Eagleville, Hank's Hill.

My Birthday Party.

Uncle Jed: Last week some of my friends gave me a surprise birthday party and I had a wonderful time. They all came to the house one afternoon and I didn't know they were coming. I wanted to go out and play but my mother said I had better stay in that afternoon so I did, as she said she wanted me to help her. It was my birthday but I didn't know anyone was coming to surprise me. But finally they came, 13 of them, and all girls I knew. We played games and I won one of the games. Then we had sandwiches, peaches and best of all ice cream and cake. They gave me a lot of nice presents. I will write again some time.

ALICE BARROUN, Age 12
Willimantic.

Back at School.

Dear Uncle Jed: I had a wonderful summer vacation this year and now I am back at school. I am in the sixth grade. We went to the beaches a lot this summer and one week we spent at Pine Point, Maine, where my uncle has a cottage. We went up in the train and had a nice time there. We went fishing off the little dock and caught some fish. We also went swimming and walking around the high rocks. They have a little church there and we went there Sunday morning. We were going to come home by train but some friends were driving in their auto to Putnam and we came back with them. I want to go there next year if I can. I didn't think I would like to go back to school but now I like it.

JIMMIE SHADROCH, Age 11
Thompson, Mass.

Fishing.

Dear Uncle Jed: One cloudy day my boy friends and I decided to go fishing. We got our fishing articles ready and started out about 1 o'clock in the afternoon. When we got there we quickly put our poles in the water and waited patiently for our first bite.

Waiting and waiting I soon got one, which made my sinker go about one or more feet down in the water. Seeing this I rapidly jerked and guess what I hooked up, a turtle.

Later I took it off the hook and tried for different luck. This time I hooked up a fish. Waiting for another, I suddenly glanced up and saw the sky clouded up with dark blue clouds. I knew we were to have a shower.

At last it began. I started to walk homeward. A boat was near shore and so I thought I'd go under it. I tried to lift it up but failed. Trying again I finally succeeded. There I remained until the storm was over.

A Marshmallow Roast.

Dear Uncle Jed: I have written to you before. The name of my story is Enjoying a Marshmallow Roast. Sunday we went to visit my grandfather's farm. When we got there we did not have anything to do. We arrived at the farm at eight o'clock at night. So we decided to have a dance. We took the victrola out on the porch. We brought out many lamps and candles and lighted up the porch. After we danced for an hour or so we got tired and wanted to do something else.

My brother and cousin went to town with the automobile to buy riet entertained us with a dance, came back they went down a lot where they had a camp three years ago. After they started the fire all of us went down to enjoy ourselves. We all sat around the fire and sang many songs. Then my brother and my cousin roasted the marshmallows and passed them around.

After we finished eating the marshmallows we told stories and cracked jokes. Then my cousin Harriet entertained us with a dance. After we put out the fire we sang the song, We Hate to Leave You Now, When we went home we were tired but happy.

ANNIE ALPERT.
Colchester.

The Fish I Caught.

Dear Uncle Jed: I want to tell you about the fish I caught while I was visiting in Massachusetts about a month ago. My father and mother asked me one day how I would like to go to Provincetown. I told them I would like to go very much so a week after that we started in our auto. It took all day to get there and we were all tired when we arrived. After supper I went right to bed and got up early next day, about 7 o'clock. Then with a boy next to us I went fishing. We fished a long time and didn't get anything. Then all of a sudden I felt a tug on my line and I pulled it in. I got a silver colored fish on it. I thought it was a mackerel but it wasn't. It weighed nearly a half a pound and my mother cooked it for my dinner. I tried fishing again that afternoon, but didn't get anything. Finally a man told me I wouldn't get any more fish because the tide was out. I went the next morning and got two more fish and we cooked them.

EDWARD GERNON, Age 12
Putnam, Conn.

At Grandpa's Farm.

Uncle Jed and all the Wide-Awakes: I thought you might like to hear about how I spent my vacation. I spend it at my grandfather's farm in New York state. It is a little village quite a distance from Albany. I went to Albany with my father and then we drove a long time in an automobile and finally we got there. They were all glad to see us and had a big supper for us. I was awfully hungry and not a bit tired but they made me go to bed about half past nine. The next day I helped carry in the milk in cans. I watched them milking the cows and then I went out to the pasture where the cows were kept and also watched the men looking after the potato plants and other vegetables. My grandfather has quite a big farm. He sells stuff to the people in the city. They also have a lot of fruit trees.

THOMAS M. WADROLEK. Age 14
Norwich.

A New Arrival.

Uncle Jed: I am about 13 years of age and we have just moved to Norwich. We came here from Fall River two or three weeks ago and my father works in a mill. I think I am going to like it here because I have made quite a lot of boy friends since we came. We live in a tenement and there are a lot of boys and girls around here. I like to watch the boats when they come in and go out. There are quite a lot of boats coming and going all the time. Some time I am going to get a job on one of the boats. I want to go on a big boat that goes way across the ocean. My father used to be a sailor when he was about my age or a little older. I'd like to see China some day. I have a lot of homework to do so I will have to stop now. I like to read books.

JAMES RODRIQUEZ, Age 13
New London.

My Vacation.

Dear Uncle Jed: I haven't written to you for a long time. I read so many good stories, that I thought I would write one too! My story is about "An Incident Which Occurred On My Vacation".

My two brothers and I went to pick huckleberries. We had to pass through several spaces of undergrowth. Leo and Paul went first, and I went after them. They passed the undergrowth in safety, while I was walking I stepped on a beehive without noticing it. The bees came out from the hive and began stinging me. At first I didn't know what to do, but after a moment's hesitation I began running toward the farmhouse. While running towards the farmhouse the bees were following me and stinging me. When I reached the farm, I was so excited I could hardly speak.

About an hour later Leo and Paul returned with three boxes of huckleberries. They didn't know why I hadn't continued to pick huckleberries, until I told them. Never again shall I go through thick undergrowth.

SAUL KIVELEWITZ
Norwich.

When We Went Fishing.

Uncle Jed: My sister, father and I went fishing. We walked about four miles into the country. We went up a hill. We found a brook and we followed the brook which led to a pond and then we started to fish. My sister caught four fish, my father caught six fish and I caught one. We walked all around the pond and that's all we caught. We returned home tired and hungry.

EILEEN RATHBUN. Age 9.
Norwich.

My Pets.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about my pets. I have three kittens, one all black, one black and white and one white. I am saving my pennies to buy some ducks.

"Wonderful Preparation for Varicose Ulcers"

Bangor, Me.—"Some time ago my right leg was in a terrible state where the veins had burst, causing varicose ulcers. Was told I would have to go to the hospital, but I couldn't do that so I tried many different remedies and prescribed treatments, but fount no relief. I was very discouraged until I tried Resinol Ointment. I think it is the most wonderful preparation for varicose ulcers, and I wish everyone knew about it. An ulcer is a very stubborn thing to heal, but patience and Resinol Ointment will do the work." (Signed)—
Mrs. NELLIE E. CURTIS.

ADVANCE OF CALL LOANS TO 10 PER CENT CAUSED STORM OF SELLING OF STOCKS

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP)— High call money rates again played havoc with speculators for the advance in today's stock market. Instead of the lower rate generally expected, call loans advanced from 8 to 10 per cent and the market ran into another storm of selling which carried more than a score issues to new low levels for the year despite the strenuous efforts of "bull" pools to revive speculative confidence by bidding up U. S. Steel common, Anaconda and an assortment of high priced specialties.

Encouraged by the remarks of Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of the National City bank, on the eve of his departure for Europe last week that credit conditions were sound and the business outlook promising, and by the favorable character of the week end trade reviews, operators for the rise started to bid briskly for stocks at the opening. Before the end of the first hour a long list of issues were selling 1 to 7 points higher.

The selling pressure was renewed against Radio and several of the other recent speculative favorites, and quoted values melted rather rapidly. Short selling played an important part in the day's operations but there was also evidence of liquidation from state margined accounts, inspired in part by the bearish attitude of some of the leading commission houses. Failure of the general to follow the leadership of U. S. Steel common on the up-side also proved disappointing to pool operators.

Strength of sterling exchange coupled with reports of the further withdrawal of gold for continental account, revived reports of an early increase in the Bank of England discount rate. Fears that this action might result in a withdrawal of some of the heavy foreign balances from New York probably influenced some of the selling in today's market. Foreign banks and corporations have been heavy lenders in the call loan market, as evident in the substantial increase in the loans made "for the accounts of others" in recent federal reserve bank statements, so that any appreciable withdrawal of these funds would be a source of concern.

Motor shares were among the principal selling targets, due to "recurrent reports that the keen competition in the industry had impaired profit margins this year. Chrysler, which sold as high as 13 in January, dropped four points to a new 1929 low at 61 and a half, but recovered a point of its loss. Nash, Graham Paige Studebaker, Borg Warner, Hayes Body and Stewart-Warner also sold at new low levels for the year.

Radio, which advanced to within a fraction of its high record of 114 3-4 less than two weeks ago, sold down to 89 1-4 and then rebounded to 90 3-8, off 4 5-8. American and Foreign Power dropped 8 points and rallied one. Columbia Gas and Electric, North American, American Power and Light and Public Service of New Jersey also recorded substantial declines although the last named touched a new high in the early trading. General Gas & Electric issues bounded upward to new high levels on the announcement of a five for one stock splitup.

Establishment of new high levels for the year by Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies, Best & Co., Columbian Carbon, Fox Film, and Underwood Elliott Fisher was offset by the registering of new lows by Advance Rumely common and preferred, Armour of Delaware preferred, Celotex preferred, Cluett, Peabody, Debenhams Securities, Eastern Rolling Mills, B. F. Goodrich preferred, McLellan Stores, National Air Transport, Porto Rican Tobacco A, Standard Commercial Tobacco and White Sewing Machine preferred.

Railroad shares failed to make much response to the publication of additional favorable earnings statements, although "Soo" common was marked up more than five points to a new high at 60.

Spiegel May Stern rebounded to the announcement of the formation of a new subsidiary to handle household utilities by running up more than 3 points. Special buying also took place in Colorado Fuel, Eastman Kodak and Houston Oil.

Time money rates held firm at 9 per cent for all maturities. There were no changes in other monetary accommodations.

In the foreign exchange market, sterling cables advanced to $4.84 13-16 as against a ruling rate of around $4.84 5-8 last week, and Japanese yen moved up an additional five points to 47.53 cents.

The commodity markets showed few important changes. Wheat futures closed fractionally irregular. Cotton lost about 50 cents to $1 a bale and corn about 2 cents a bushel on forecasts of more favorable weather.

WESTERLY

LOOK FOR TIRES, FIND STILL—MAY HAVE SUPPLIED N. S. H.

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 23.— The office of Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown continued, Monday, to be sought by automobilists who have sustained mysterious thefts of automobile tires. A visitor late on Monday afternoon requested information as to the disappearance of a more varied assortment of articles when he furnished a lost list of an umbrella, raincoat and the inevitable tire. Still another man is on his way to headquarters to ask where two of his tail-lights have gone from a Ford car parked on Broad street. He has already purchased three tail-lights and is about ready to charge the other two off to profit and loss.

All day Sunday Connecticut state police officers were assisting in the round-up of lost, strayed or stolen tires. Officer Johnson of Groton barracks, who had arrested Clarence Brown in North Stonington early Sunday morning for larceny of automobile tires was out on another search with Chief Brown, Constable Clinton Brown and Trooper Johnson of Groton. They were looking for evidence against Alexander Taylor of Westerly, alleged to have been implicated with Brown in the wholesale tire thefts from the rear ends of automobiles parked about the highways of Westerly.

The officers left Westerly at about 10 o'clock Sunday morning and it was 11 o'clock at night before they finished their job. In searching the premises of a woman named Anna Grothe, alias Jane Doe, in Voluntown, the police claim they ran across a still filled with mash which was on a stove, but the oil had run out, with the result that it was not cooking. There was another empty still on the premises, the police claim, and a cooling system. After the discovery had been reported to the Danielson barracks, Trooper Mayor was out soon, armed with a search warrant and seized the stills and some moonshine whisky in a bottle. The woman's son, Fred, aged 24 years, who claimed ownership of the still, was taken to Voluntown. He was given a hearing Monday night on a charge of manufacturing and keeping with intent to sell.

Liquor At Norwich State Hosp.

The searching officers stated that the presence of intoxicating liquors at the Norwich hospital for the insane, where Fred Groche is said to be employed, has been a condition the source of which officials have sought to learn. The location of the still may be part of the answer.

After visiting the farm on the Dennison Hill road in Voluntown, the officers made another trip to the boarding place of Brown in Clark's Falls, where they reported seizing six more automobile tires, which were brought to the Westerly police station.

Since the tires were reported stolen by R. W. Brown of Exeter and John Swokla of Stonington, six more automobile owners who had parked their cars on the highways of Westerly last Saturday night, reported tires missing. Mrs. Lewis Gavitt of Ashaway lost a tire from her machine on High street; Joseph LaPere of Westerly, a tire from his car parked at the railroad station; Salvidon De Francesca of 62 Mechanic street, a Racine tire taken from his car; a Fisk Premier tire taken from an Overland car; Carl Manfred of Hobart street, tire stolen on Oak street, and M. J. LeRoy of Pawcatuck reported a tire stolen from his machine at the North Stonington fair grounds on Sept. 19.

The ceremonies took place at Masonic hall, it being anticipated that members of the Rhode Island Grand chapter, Order of DeMolay, would come to Westerly for the purpose, but it was found that they were engaged elsewhere about the state.

The installing officer was Past Master Councilor Myles Coulbourn, assisted by Marshal Past Master Councilor Robert Drysdale, 3rd, Chaplain William Lawson, Standard Bearer Fred Wallace and Senior Councilor Raymond Payne, all of Westerly chapter, Order of DeMolay.

JEWETT CITY

EDWARD TETREAULT DIES FROM ACUTE INDIGESTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Sept. 23.—Edward Tetreault, 57, died suddenly Monday in his room at the home of Mr. Muscatine, on Mechanic street. After he had been found unconscious on the floor, the ambulance of Backus hospital, Norwich, was sent for, but the man was dead when it arrived. Medical Examiner Dr. G. H. Jennings pronounced death the result of acute indigestion. Relatives in New Bedford have been notified. It is believed that Mr. Tetreault owned some property in that city. He has rented a room at Mr. Muscatine's for five months, and was employed at the Ninigret Co. mill here, under N. B. Parkhurst.

G. H. Prior, a recent visitor in Buffalo, tells the interesting story of the change-over of the New York Central lines from the old depot to their grand new station. The night the transfer was made, he stated, the 11:50 p. m. Empire State limited left from the old depot. There was to be noted the usual hurry and bustle. Passengers scrambling to get aboard, with others crowding to get off. Mail trucks and baggage carts, with the general bustle that is always a part of the departure of the night western express. At 10 minutes past midnight the main light switches were thrown out, the great steel doors slammed shut. The years-old depot was dark and deserted, the New York Central trains were leaving on time from their grand new station, a couple of miles away.

Adelard Maynard is renting his farm in Lisbon, on the River road. This week he will remove to Moosup, where he is taking over the Colonial house management.

Autumnal Blossoms

Along the dry roadsides all through this section, those who enjoyed Sunday walks afield came upon several of the 120 species of wild asters. Some brought home great bouquets of the New England variety which is the beauty of them all. Occasionally was noted a patch of the white multiflora, which often bears 500 or even more blossoms, like tiny daisies on a single stem. Over the walls all about are great expanses of golden rod. Every autumn all about the local outlying districts these two kinds of flowers clothe the roadsides and meadows with such a brilliant show of color that one cannot but wonder if the flowers of any other region combine in such a radiant display.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmond St. John announce the marriage of their daughter, Anna, and Rene A. Fredette. The ceremony took place in Springfield, Mass., Sept. 21, and was attended by the parents, Mrs. Della Kennedy and son, Harvey. Mr. and Mrs. Fredette will live in Pulaski, N. Y., where Mr. Fredette is in the employ of F. T. Lye & Co.

The members of the Ladies' society of the Congregational church are to meet in the church parlor Thursday afternoon at 2:30.

Sympathy For Miss Muench

The many friends of Miss Gertrude Muench, who is a member of the Ninigret Co. office force, sympathize with her in the sudden death of her father, who was killed by an automobile on West Thames street, Norwich, Saturday night.

HIGHER GRADE PUPILS BROUGHT FROM DIST. SCHOOLS

Since the opening of the public schools, Superintendent Howe has arranged that the sixth, seventh and eighth grade children in Pachaug school, the eighth grade in the Woodward school, and the seventh and eighth grades in Brewster school, be transported to the Jewett City school, where they may have the advantage of being instructed in the rooms assigned to these grades. There are 18 children who will come to Jewett City. The lower grades in these three schools will also be much benefited by the change, the teachers being able to give more time to these grades.

GRAPHIC DESCRIPTION OF OF COOLIDGE-TRUMBULL

The same decorative scheme was used in the Trumbull home, which was the scene of the reception. Masses of chrysanthemums in the burnt orange, yellow and pale orchid tones lined the stairway, book cases and mantel pieces in the house, while palms and ferns completed the decoration.

Reception on Grounds

The sunshine which marked the day, in contrast to the weather man's prediction of showers, made it possible to hold the reception on the extensive grounds of the estate as had been planned. A great marquee was erected on the lawn, where the guests were served with Hors D'Oeuvres, pastries and sugar coated roses filled with nousse prepared by a New England caterer.

The son of the former president and his bride received their guests in the sunken garden near the house.

The bridal table from which the wedding party was served, was decorated with a circle of lilies of the valley and bravardia in the center of which stood the 36 inch square, white frosted wedding cake. Six silvered airplanes, poised on top, were its only decoration. Placed there in token of the interest of the bride and her father in aviation. With a large silver knife the bride cut the cake, which was distributed among the guests.

Policemen and Troopers

Everywhere were lines of blue-coated policemen, augumented by fifty state troopers—half the Connecticut force—called out to direct traffic and insure the privacy of the wedding party against the crowds.

Traffic past the Trumbull residence was re-routed for the twenty minutes before and after the ceremony to enable the wedding party to reach and leave the church with the least possible difficulty.

Newspaper and camera men, assembled in numbers for the wedding were excluded from the church and only two reporters from Hartford newspapers were admitted to the reception. This was in keeping with the desire of the bridal pair to make the wedding "a quiet family affair."

Immediately after the reception festivities, Former President and Mrs. Coolidge departed by automobile for their home in Northampton.

Among the guests at the wedding ceremony and the reception were Mrs. Richard Usher, of Plainville, 86-year old grandmother of the bride, who wore the same lavender gown in which she was married in the same church in 1870; Andy C. Stevens, 55, a Maine woodsman who has camped with Governor Trumbull and his family for 20 years. Mr. Stevens came part of the way by air to be present. It was his first flight.

Distinguished Guests

Guests at the wedding included Senator and Mrs. Hiram Bingham and Senator and Mrs. Frederic C. Walcott of Connecticut; Former Senator George P. McLean; Adjutant General George H. Cole; Col. James Gilson, assistant adjutant general; Brigadier General and Mrs. James A. Haggerty; Col. and Mrs. Charles H. Allen; Col. and Mrs. Lewis L. Field and Col. Rex Delacouf. The military officers all are members of Governor Trumbull's staff, on which the bridegroom is a honorary major.

Additional guests at the reception included four former Connecticut governors, Frank Weeks, Marcus H. Holcomb, Everett J. Lake, Charles A. Templeton; Former Governor and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster of Maine; Gerard Swope, president of General Electric and Mrs. Swope; Ralph Hemenway, the former president's law partner, and Mrs. Hemenway, Alfred J. Brousseau, and Mrs. Brousseau, former president general of the D. A. F.

Others were President James L. McConaughy of Wesleyan university, and Mrs. McConaughy; Professor Harry Graves of Yale and Mrs. Graves and a number of Connecticut state officials and political leaders.

Wedding Presents

Wedding presents for the bridal pair filled an upper floor of the Trumbull mansion. A mahogany bedroom suite was a gift from the groom's parents, and a dining room suite of similar material and a set of ivory finished furniture for a dining alcove were presents from the father and mother of the bride.

Mrs. Coolidge also gave her son a check for $250 paid to her by a magazine for a piem "The Open Door" inspired by the fifth anniversary of the death of her other boy, Calvin, Jr., and asked John to use it "for something in the new home in some way that his brother might have chosen if he were here."

Many pieces of china, in wedgewood and lenox patterns selected to harmonize with the mahogany furniture were among the presents. There was also a blue and yellow Chinese rug, several oriental rugs, six silver goblets, many vases, pieces of pewter and articles of antique table silver.

Honeymoon plans of the bride and groom have not been revealed. It is known that they contemplate a tour of New England, apparently by motor car, which will embrace a visit at Plymouth, Vt., former President Coolidge's boyhood home, and perhaps a sojourn at the camp in Maine where the Trumbull family frequently has summered.

Posed For Photographs

Members of the wedding party posed for photographs at the Trumbull home after the ceremony. Former President Coolidge, asked to stand near a small oriental rug while cameramen took his photograph, caught sight of a microphone concealed beneath the rug by one of the news-reel men.

"What's that thing?" asked the former president. "Take it away." And the microphone was removed by the embarrassed photographer.

As the new Mrs. Coolidge posed in front of the camera battery, her mother-in-law stepped into the picture, arranging her train until it lay in folds that met her approval.

Her gifts to her attendants were pictures of the bridal party in silver frames. John Coolidge gave his best man and ushers leather tie cases.

The Ground Gripper Shoe Company, Inc., has acquired a long term lease of the Carlisle Shoe company plant at Carlisle, Pa., which has a daily production capacity of between 1,200 and 1,500 pairs of shoes.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP)— The shadow of nine per cent time money hung gloomily over the bond market today as prices worked irregularly lower in a full trading session. Interest was confined almost exclusively to three or four convertibles, one of which made a new high.

Commercial Investment Trust 5 1-2s drew a large following in response to the prospective splitup in the shares for which the debentures can be exchanged and the close found them a point higher after a large turnover. Public Service of New Jersey 4 1-2s touched the record price of 300 but later slipped back to 298 7-8, the final quotation, a net advance of 4 3-4. American Telephone 1-2s and International Telephone 1-2s had a narrow market, showing only small fractional net changes. Allegheny corporation 5s, of 1949, gained a point. American Mg. Chemical 5 1-2s again showed easiness dipping to 112 and closing at 112 3-4 for a net loss of 1 1-4. American International 5 1-2s were also weaker.

A number of new lows came out in the list of more seasoned obligations. Goodyear Tire & Rubber 6s, Hudson Coal 5s, International Cement 5s, Armour Real Estate 4 1-2s and Ohio River Edison first 5s all touched new minimums on liquidation of minor proportions.

Both the first and second grade rails eased slightly in the absence of favorable sentiment. The feature of the carrier division was the strength of the Ulster & Delaware issue, which moved up sharply in response to word that the arbitrators appointed to evaluate the road which operates a short line through the Catskill mountains in New York state, had finished their work, preparatory to inclusion of the company in the New York Central system, and had set the figure at $4,100,000. The Consolidated 5s of 1928, principal of which is in default, rose 6 points while the refunding 4s of 1952 shot up 17 points to 60.

Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio, Erie and Pennsylvania railroad issues were mostly lower, although trading was light. St. Louis & Southwestern bonds ruled steady.

COTTON

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Cotton futures closed barely steady, 9 to 16 points lower. Spot quiet; middling 18.40.

Treasury Balance.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—(AP)—Treasury receipts for Sept. 20 were $66,425,998.67; expenditures $38,033,211.33; balance $393,422,829.57.

Whatever car you own or hope to own, ride in these new models. In every major and minor factor they entirely supersede the highest standards and ideals that previously prevailed.

Nowhere else in the world can you find what these new cars offer

THE new Cadillacs, La Salles and Fleetwoods presented last week are new models from end to end, inside and out. They offer, however, something far more than mere newness. In sum total they represent an actual far-reaching achievement in engineering, body designing and value-giving.

To say that Cadillac has surpassed itself is to say that there is literally nothing in the highest field of motoring with which to compare them.

Offered at a lower and wider price range for every one of the 50 new body styles they vastly extend the Cadillac-La Salle-Fleetwood market.

If you have not already inspected these new cars, be prepared for the most beautiful examples of body designing that have ever left the Fisher-Fleetwood studios. Be prepared for larger, roomier, and still more comfortable interiors, lavishly and luxuriously finished and appointed.

Test in traffic and on the open road the new harmonized steering mechanism—Try it in narrow parking spaces—Test, also, the exclusive and newly perfected Synchro-Mesh Silent-Shift Transmission and Safety-Mechanical Brakes, among the most important Cadillac contributions to greater ease and safety—Drive at all speeds the more powerful and flexible V-type, 8-cylinder engine—Observe the fresh beauty of the body-designing—Enjoy the comfort of the roomier interiors—Check up all the numerous features that can be found only in these highly perfected cars.

Be prepared, when you take the wheel, for a more flexible V-type, 8-cylinder engine delivering still greater power.

And above all, be prepared for new driving and handling-ease that will prove nothing less than a revelation.

A wealth of features, improvements and refinements, clamor for inspection and a driving test. Take advantage of the opportunity that is gladly given you to drive these cars in traffic and on the road. Then draw your own conclusions.

C. D. TWOMEY, DEMOCRAT, MAYOR WITH 2,368 VOTES

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 23. — The voters of this city got out today and elected three members of the city council, putting Alton T. Miner, a democrat, back into the council, where he was chairman of the finance committee during the time the late Bryan F. Mahan was mayor of the city. E. Frank Morgan, who was mayor of this city under the old form of government, failed of election, although he was close to Mr. Miner. It was a foregone conclusion that Cornelius Twomey would be re-elected to the council, for his record has been one generally endorsed. He had not missed a meeting while he has been in the council and he has been the sort of member who wanted to know all that was done and why it was done. His vote gives him the place of mayor during the ensuing year. He had some 700 more votes than were cast for Lucius E. Whiton, who sought re-election, but who was defeated, being next to the lowest vote-getter on the ticket.

James A. May, who served one term as mayor and another term as member of the council, was next to Mr. Twomey in the number of votes received. Mr. Miner was third. Mr. Whiton worked vigorously for election and published at least two circulars, in both of which he attacked Mr. Morgan as unfit to represent the city because identified with the old order of things.

Mr. Morgan's vote was very much larger than that accorded Mr. Whiton. Mrs. Grace Prentis Bitgood was chosen a member of the board of school visitors, defeating E. Victor Goldsmith, present member of the board. Mrs. Bitgood is the second woman member of the board, as Mrs. Nellie Kelly is a member at present. David Seamon was a candidate for the council, but he did nothing to secure election, taking the attitude that if wanted in the council he would be chosen.

The vote today was several hundred larger than that cast at the balloting a fortnight ago. The newly elected members will take their places the 7th of October. It can be taken for granted that Mr. Twomey will acquaint himself with every department of the city's business and that he will be familiar with all that is transacted in the way of his duties. He is an approachable gentleman, a thorough practical man, patient and courteous in all his dealings with people having business with him.

	1st Ward	2nd Ward	3rd Ward	4th Ward	5th Ward	Total
For Member Of Council
James A. May	324	402	379	404	454	1963

CHINN AND MULATTOES FOUND IN NEWPORT MACHINE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 23—The state police tonight requested the New London police to be on the lookout for a Hudson sedan carrying Rhode Island registration and driven by Ralph T. Chinn, 7 Edwards street, Newport, R. I., for it was believed that the car had been stolen. Shortly after the reception of the information, Sergeant John Courtney and Motorcycle Officer George Cockell found the automobile on Main street and in it was Chinn and two mulattoes. Chinn was arrested, but when he produced the license and registration of the auto, it was proved that Chinn was the rightful owner of the car. Chinn was not released, however, for he was held pending investigation. Chinn claims that a woman acquaintance in Newport caused his arrest because he came to New London in the company of the two women found with him when arrested.

Coupe Stolen In Danielson

The state police tonight requested the New London police to be on the lookout for a Ford coupe carrying Rhode Island registration 106007, stolen from Danielson earlier in the day. It is believed that Ernest Robillard and Harold Morse are the occupants of the auto.

ENGINEER J. M. DRAY DEAD— WITH C. V. R. R. 51 YEARS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 23—John M. Dray, 70, died Sunday at his residence, 28 Adelaide street, after an illness of about three months. He is survived by his wife and three daughters, Mrs. John Mansfield, Mrs. Joseph Kenes and Miss Eleanor Dray, and by a son, John H. Dray. Mr. Dray was for many years an engineer on the Central Vermont railroad. He was in the employ of the railroad 51 years and of that long period of service, was for 46 years locomotive engineer. He was retired about two years ago and at that time he was presented a badge of honor by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. Besides holding membership in the brotherhood, he was a member of St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, the Holy Name society and a charter member of the Knights of Columbus. Mr. Dray was born in Winchendon, Mass., and after obtaining his education in the public schools of that place, moved to New London. He married Ellen M. Nellan in New London 38 years ago.

Another mechanics' lien was levied today against property on Shaw street owned by Nicolo and Angeola Sammatara. The latest lien was instigated by Joseph Foster, plumber and is one of several levied against property of the Sammataras within a fortnight.

More financial trouble loomed today for the Commodore Realty company, of which Joseph Siegel, Ocean beach, is proprietor, for attachments were levied against four properties owned by either the realty company or Siegal. The properties are located at 115-119-121-123 Bentley avenue.

Another business establishment was discovered unguarded Sunday night, when Patrolman Lewis Tooker discovered the entrance to the Montauk Beverage company, Bank street, unlocked. An investigation also revealed that the safe door was open, but there was no cash in it. The officer was able to secure the building for the balance of the night.

A Buick automobile, owned by N. R. DiBiasi, Mystic, was stolen from Division street Sunday night when the owner parked it there for several hours. Early today the car was found abandoned on Hamilton street.

Waiting for Coroner's Finding

The continued case of Walter Tucker, 492 Vauxhall street, charged with manslaughter, was again continued, when called in the police court today. The latest continuance is to Oct. 23 and Tucker furnished a surety on his bond of $1,000. The automobile Tucker was driving several weeks ago on Bank street struck Mrs. Isabelle Douglass, of Mountain avenue when the woman was crossing at Pearl street. Mrs. Douglass was knocked down and died from her injuries a day or two later at LawrenceMemorial hospital. The continuance today was ordered because Coroner Edward G. McKay of Norwich, had not rendered a report of his finding.

Herbert Wilson, of Fishers Island, was charged with failing to stop at an automobile danger signal and was fined $5 and costs. He was arrested today.

Harry Watchinsky charged with failing to have his driver's license indorsed, was fined the costs of the court. He was arrested this forenoon by Patrolman Edward Skoczylas.

Patrolman George McCaskey was unable to perform duty today, being confined to his home, Maple avenue on account of illness.

Francis Roach, 23 Chappell street, reported to the police last night that his Iver Johnson bicycle had been stolen from the rear of a Bank street store, where he had placed it while he attended a motion picture performance.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre.

Chasing rainbows may be great sport, but it's a million to one chance that you find the pot of gold after all. Half the time it's been right under your nose—and Buddy Rogers finds that out in "Illusion," the all-talking musicomedy-drama now showing at the Broadway. Buddy, who is a small time vaudeville magician, is adopted by society for his good looks and personality, and deliberately sidetracks his partner-sweetheart, Nancy Carroll, for the "illusion" and glitter of high-life. A queer twist of fate, after many humorous and thrilling adventures, sets his feet on the right path to happiness, which he finds in Nancy's arms, after all. A dainty picture of youthful love and ambition, with many strong dramatic scenes, including a battle over marked cards in a "gentlemen's game," and the nearly fatal accident to Nancy during the last performance of her act with the new partner, a society circus with all "the fixin's", and many other scenes of society and theatre life, make up one of the most popular all-talking pictures which has been locally shown this season. The surrounding bill is also interesting with Louise Fazenda, Walter Hiers and Johnny Arthur in "Hot Lemonade," a story of a wife eloping with two husbands, James Barton, clever vaudeville star, familiar in Norwich personal appearances, in "It Happened to Him," and the latest Paramount Sound News. Children are lining up for the Broadway's scooter contest to be held tomorrow afternoon after school, with prizes offered by William Haines, in connection with his latest picture "Speedway," which is to be the Broadway attraction Thursday.

Palace Theatre.

If you would like to get a close view of the whirl and swirl and madness of modern life as lived by the younger set, come and see "Our Modern Maidens," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sound synchronized saga of the jazz age which opens at the Palace theatre tomorrow and will be presented there for the next three days.

Parents of Norwich, do you know what your sons and daughters are doing? Have you any idea of the lives they lead while pleasure bent? Do you know where they spend their evenings or how they spend them? If not, come to the Palace and see for yourselves a cross-section of modern life as depicted by Joan Crawford and other bright stars of the younger generation of motion picture stars.

Gayey, song, dance and sadness are inextricably mingled in this hot and passionate drama of youth. Youth bargains with the devil. Youth seeks to cheat the devil, but youth finds again and again that the only thing that is being cheated is itself. Young men and young women play with fire. Indiscretions fascinate them. They come again and expose their bright and tender moth wings to the blaze.

And they are singed! Tragically the old pendulum of fate swings with an inexorable stroke across the warp and woof of their lives. Sadly the bright patterns are blotted, and youth goes on more sorrowful but more wise in the great business of living.

It is a cross-section of the life and love and desire of youth that is presented in this sparkling drama, "Our Modern Maidens". No one should miss it, for it lays bare the deep and terrible secrets of this jazz-crazed era.

You can talk about ritzy palaces and gorgeous open air pavilions as places to hold whoopee jubilees, but Joan Crawford sets a new mark in her latest picture by holding a party in a specially built parlor car.

Although the novel "ballroom" was constructed merely for a sequence in "Our Modern Maidens" presenting Miss Crawford for the first time as a full-fledged star, it will undoubtedly create a sensation among the younger generation who desire the latest in party surroundings. It is designed and patterned after a regular private parlor car, with the exception of the interior, which is an exact duplicate of that owned by W. K. Kellogg, famous breakfast-food king.

For the last time today the Palace is presenting Al Jolson and Davy Lee in their latest all-talking, singing drama, "Say It With Songs".

Breed Theatre.

Patrons of the Breed theatre who view the current showing of "Weary River," the new First National feature starring Richard Barthelmess, will hear the music and words of what is freely predicted a national song hit, the title of which is the same as the title of the film, "Weary River".

The song, "Weary River", was composed by Grant Clarke and Louis Silvers, the former on the lyrics and the latter on the music. It is a crooning, ballad type, specially designed for the feature film of the same name and with a view to popular appeal. The hero, a convict, sings and plays the song in the unfolding of the story.

Frank Lloyd directed "Weary River," and Betty Compson plays the feminine lead opposite Barthelmess. It is a First National Vitaphone feature, the first in which Barthelmess is heard in dialogue and song. The story is based on an original by Courtney Ryley Cooper.

The last game held the close attention of all. About twenty different people tried to solve the problem before it was done by Mr. Aldrich. In the relay race the two sides were captained by Margaret Ross and Muriel Rose. Miss Margaret's side won. Alice Brown and Doris Rose assisted the refreshment committee in serving the collation. Mrs. Aldrich prepared the punch. The refreshments consisted of assorted sandwiches, loaf and layer cake, and orange punch.

The social was in charge of the scoutmaster, Rev. George Warren Potter and took the place of the regular weekly meeting.

The refreshment committee, complimented for the collation, was Donald Olsen, Clayton Rose and Albert Eyberse. The several games were explained and conducted by the game committee which consisted of Wallace Wagner, Frederick Ross, Edward Gallagher and Edward Eccleston. HAS $100,000 RAISED FOR EAST PROVIDENCE CHURCH

Assets, including insurance, amounting to $100,000, are in hand for the building of the new $150,000 Haven Methodist Episcopal church, Taunton avenue, East Providence, according to announcement made by the pastor, Rev. William Harvey Bath, D. D., who was formerly pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church in this city.

Details in the plans are practically complete and work upon the new church will be begun soon. An examination of the plans shows that the Haven church will be one of the most advanced types of ecclesiastical structure in Rhode Island, with special emphasis placed upon the beauty of the auditorium and the efficiency of the various church school departments.

The new church will provide ample facilities for meeting the spiritual needs of the community, and the structure itself will be a marked adornment to that section of East Providence.

Dr. Bath, the finance and building committees, as well as the entire membership of the church have been doggedly at work since the old church was destroyed by fire on the night of March 12, this year, and it is felt that a signal victory has been won in raising two-thirds of the cost of the new structure within six months.

Calm forethought and vision in the face of many hardships have enabled the society to face a new day in its history with confident hope. The response from the community, and from loyal members and friends, points to the wisdom of those who set the goal first and then went about calmly to achieve it.

Meanwhile the society is at work in all its departments. Services are being held in the Masonic Temple, near the property.

HOOVER URGES RETENTION OF FLEXIBLE TARIFF BILL

Chief Executive Issued a Formal Statement Declaring That He Regarded the Flexible Tariff "as of the Utmost Importance in Justice to the Public and as a Protection For the Sound Progress in Our Economic System"—A Majority of Democrats in the Senate and a Dozen or More Independent Republicans Are Working For the Repeal of the Provision.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24 —(AP)—President Hoover's statement for retention of the flexible provisions of the tariff law follows:

"In my message to congress of April 16th at the opening of the special session I gave my views as to broad principles which I felt were of importance in tariff legislation. One of the subjects I then presented was the importance of maintaining the flexible tariff. That principle was advocated over a long term of years by members of all political parties, and it was enacted in the 1928 tariff law. I advocated it at that time and since as a necessity in protection of public interest.

"The essential of the flexible tariff is that with respect to a particular commodity, after exhaustive determination of the facts as to differences of cost of production at home and abroad by a tariff commission, comprised of one-half of its members from each political party, whose selection is approved by the senate, then the president should, upon recommendation of the commission, promulgate changes in the tariff on that commodity not to exceed 50 per cent of the rates fixed by congress. Under these provisions the president has no authority to initiate any changes in the tariff. No power rests on the executive until after recommendations by the commission. Any change must arise from application directly to the commission, and his authority in the matter becomes a simple act of proclamation of the recommendation of the commission or, on the other hand, a refussal to issue such a proclamation, amounting to a veto of the conclusions of the commission. In no sense, therefore, can it be claimed that the president can alter the tariff at will, or that despotic power is conferred upon the executive. It has been declared a constitutional procedure by the supreme court.

"The reasons for the continued incorporation of such provisions are even more cogent today than ever before. No tariff bill ever enacted has been or ever will be perfect. It will contain injustices. It is beyond human mind to deal with all of the facts surrounding several thousand commodities under the necessary conditions of legislation and not to make some mistakes and create some injustices. It could not be otherwise. Furthermore, if a perfect tariff bill were enacted the rapidity of our changing economic conditions and the constant shifting of our relations with economic life abroad would render some items in such an act imperfect in some particular within a year.

"It is proved by a half century of experience that the tariff cannot be reviewed by congress more than once in seven or eight years. It is only a destruction of the principle of the flexible tariff to provide that the tariff commission recommendations should be made to congress for action instead of the executive. Any person of experience in tariff legislation in the last half century knows perfectly well that congress cannot reopen single items of the tariff without inviting discussion all along the line, without the constant unsettlement of business and the importation of contentions and factious questions to the destruction of other important duties by congress. Congress has literally hundreds of times in the past refused to entertain any amendment to a tariff except in periods of general revision.

"Although the provisions of the 1922 tariff act, as I have stated in the message, proved to be cumbersome in the method of determining costs of production and can be imported, yet despite this the agricultural industry especially received great benefits through this provision, a notable instance of which was the protection of the dairy industry. That industry would be in a sad plight today if it had not been for the increased duties given under the flexible tariff.

"The flexible provision is one of the most progressive steps taken in tariff making in all our history. It is entirely wrong that there shall be no remedy to isolated cases of injustice that may arise through the failure to adequately protect certain industries, or to destroy the opportunity to revise duties which may prove higher than necessary to protect some industries and, therefore, become onerous upon the public. To force such a situation upon the public for such long periods is, in my view, economically wrong and is prejudicial to public interest.

"I am informed the principle is supported by the most important of the farm organizations. It is supported by our leading manufacturing organizations. It has never hitherto been made a political issue. In the last campaign some important democratic leaders even advocated the increase of powers to the tariff commission so as to practically extinguish congressional action. I do not support such a plan.

"I have no hesitation in saying that I regard it as of the utmost importance in justice to the public; as a protection for the sound progress in our economic system, and for the future protection of our farmers and our industries and consumers, that the flexible tariff, through recommendation of the tariff commission to the executive, should be maintained."

INVESTIGATION OF THE ACTIVITIES OF SHEARER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24—(AP)—A letter in which William B. Shearer, said he had given the navy a secret British document at a critical stage in the senate debate last winter over the 15-cruiser bill was placed today in the record of the senate committee investigating his connection.

The communication was addressed to Homer L. Ferguson, president of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock corporation, who denied to the senate committee that he had any agreement with Shearer stipulating that he should work at Washington in behalf of the cruiser measure. Senator Allen, republican, Kansas, read part of the letter at the committee inquiry into activities of Shearer for the shipbuilders at the unsuccessful Geneva naval conference of 1927. Allen revealed later that he had the so-called secret British document, but that he was not ready to use it.

Frederick P. Palen, vice president of the Newport News Ship concern, told the committee that he was "more responsible than anyone else" for sending Shearer to Geneva at a price of $25,000. He also related how Shearer upon his return received $7,000 more from him in payments not recorded in the company's books.

Small of stature, slightly bald and holding a handkerchief Palen laughed with the crowded committee room as he recalled how Shearer had come to him time and again after returning from Geneva for personal loans and had received them. He insisted he had a right to send Shearer to Geneva to report on the "trend" of the conference and to interest other shipbuilders in sharing the $25,000 cost. He excused Shearer for not reporting to him because he said there was nothing to report that was not in the newspapers.

FAILED TO NOTIFY GUARD FREIGHTER WAS OVERDUE

GRAND HAVEN, Mich., Sept. 24—(AP)—W. M. Wolff, commander of the Tenth District U. S. Coast Guard, late today testified before the board of inquiry into the sinking of the lake freighter Andaste that the Construction Materials company of Chicago, under whose charter the vessel sailed, failed to notify the coast guard that the Andaste was overdue at Chicago.

Mr. Wolff said that some members of the crew of 25 might have been saved if the coast guard had been notified promptly.

The Andaste sank in Lake Michigan Monday September 9. Captain A. L. Anderson, of Sturgeon Bay, Wis., and all the other 25 men on board were lost. Fourteen bodies have been recovered.

PEACOX DEMONSTRATES SLAYING OF HIS WIFE

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., September 24—(AP)—Using the very gun with which he killed her, Earl Peacox demonstrated in court today how he struck his wife on the head with the pistol butt in the encounter that cost her her life.

After hours of questioning by his own counsel, during which Peacox denied that he meant to kill his wife, he was placed under cross examination in late afternoon.

The district attorney at once handed him the pistol and told him to show how he struck his wife down after he said she called his home a "dump."

Standing down from the witness stand the defendant placed the gun in his hip pocket, then pulled it out, whirled it in the air, caught it after a half turn by the barrel and brought the butt on an imaginative head.

"Is that how hard you did it?" the judge asked.

"Oh harder than that." Peacox replied, and twice more demonstrated just how he had struck his wife.

LIGHTER BURDEN FOR NEW HAVEN RAILROAD

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 24.—The following statement was issued by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co. today:

"For the first time since the New Haven railroad started 17 years ago to pay the bond interest on the 4½ percent First Mortgage bonds of the New York, Westchester & Boston Railway Co. under its guarantee, amounting to $864,000 a year, the Westchester company has itself assumed part of this obligation. It recently paid $300,000 to the New Haven to apply on the current year's interest, and expects to pay an additional $200,000 before the end of this year.

"This means that the New Haven's guarantee of the Westchester bonds will cost it only $364,000 this year as compared with $864,000 annually for the last 16 years.

"The improved prospects for the New York, Westchester & Boston are such that it is anticipated that next year it will assume an even larger proportion of this bond interest, and it is quite probable that by 1931 the Westchester will be able to assume the entire fixed charge.

"This guaranteed interest has heretofore been taken into consideration by the New Haven in declaring dividends on its common stock. The proportion assumed by the Westchester this year is equivalent to 32 cents per share on the New Haven common."

PLEAS OF NOT GUILTY BY PARKER AND SMITH

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Pleas of not guilty were made today in criminal superior court, Judge Isaac Wolfe sitting, by John E. Parker, president; Clarence V. Smith, secretary, and Paul Smith, treasurer, of the defunct Parker-Smith company. The pleas were made individually by the defendants; who selected a trial by jury and the date was set for October 15.

The three officials were originally arrested on bench warrants alleging nine counts of embezzlement by agent and one count of conspiracy. Today they were charged with double that number of counts of embezzlement by trustee and agent and three counts of conspiracy to embezzle funds belonging to stockholders of the Parker-Smith company.

Investors in the defunct Parker-Smith company today crowded the superior courts and overflowed into the corridors. The Parker-Smith concern crashed last May after State Banking Commissioner Lester E. Shippee instituted a receivership action against the company. The liabilities of the company amount to nearly a million dollars with but few assets.

ASSEMBLY OF L. OF N. WILL ADJOURN TODAY

GENEVA, Sept. 24—(AP)—With all eyes set on adjournment tomorrow, the tenth assembly of the league of nations today eliminated an ominous question connected with China's proposal regarding outworn treaties and put its stamp of approval on a number of measures aimed against warfare.

The resolution of C. C. W. Chinese minister to Washington, which asked that the assembly make a study of article of the covenant with a view to advising revision of "inapplicable treaties," has been looming up as a possible cause of trouble for several days.

The committee on constitutional questions, however, today successfully steered past dangerous shoals by adopting a subcommittee resolution which appeared to satisfy all parties. The compromise declaration recognized the right of any nation which thinks itself suffering from an unequal international agreement, to ask the league's advice about seeking revision.

Another "Bear Raid" In The Stock Market

Late Trading Washed Away About a Billion Dollars Quoted Values.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(AP)—A sudden wave of selling, which had all the appearance of a "bear raid," swept across the floor of the New York stock exchange in the last hour of trading today and washed away about a billion dollars in quoted values. The reaction checked a promising "bull" movement during which scores of issues had been marked up $1 to $10 a share, more than a dozen of them to new high records. Most of these gains were wiped out and final quotations disclosed a long list of stocks down $2 to $15 a share, with one down $39, another $29, a third $22 and a fourth $20 a share.

Wall street brokers found plenty of excuses to explain the decline, but some of the bankers privately expressed the opinion it was due to causes within, rather than without the market.

They returned at 7:30 p. m., and resumed deliberation.

EFFORTS TO OVERCOME FOG PERILS FOR PLANES

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Completion of the first airplane flight with a cockpit entirely shut off from light was announced today by Harry F. Guggenheim, president of the Daniel F. Guggenheim foundation for the promotion of aeronautics, as the final successful test of a group of instruments designed to overcome the perils of flying through fog.

Lieutenant James H. Doolittle, seated in the darkened cockpit, took off from Mitchell field today and flew along the path of a direction radio beacon to a safe landing.

"The demonstration eliminates the last great hazard to the reliability of airplane travel and means that a principle has been developed which, when eventually perfected for commercial use, will make the airplane more independent of weather conditions than any other form of transportation," Mr. Guggenheim said.

CUT IN FEDERAL TAXES NEXT YEAR PROBABLE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24—(AP)—The nation's tax bill, which in the fiscal year 1929 totaled $2,938,019,000, will be cut next year because business prosperity is rolling up an unequalled amount of income taxes.

The income taxes received by the government since January 1, had totaled $1,900,578,000 at the close of business on September 21, or $232,000,000 more than had been received on September 30 of last year, and only $265,000,000 less than was collected in the entire 1928 calendar year.

In addition to the collections already made, the December payments and those due before that time are expected to add another $600,000,000 and bring the total of income tax payments for the 12 months of 1929 to $2,500,000,000.

LIQUOR WAS UNDER TABLE AT A SENATORIAL DINNER

Disclosure Made in the Senate by Senator Brookhart—Said Dinner Was at the Willard Hotel in Honor of Reelected and Newly Elected Senators—Said Liquor Was Under Curtained Table and That Anyone Who Cared For a Drink Could Help Himself.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.— (AP) — Another lively prohibition debate swept over the senate today as a sequel to the demand of President Hoover for proof that the prohibition law was being flouted in Washington.

Senator Howell of Nebraska, a republican, who supported the president's prohibition views during the campaign, retorted it was "unfair" to expect a senator to furnish "names and dates" of liquor law violations as the president had asked. He read from prohibition agents' reports which he said illustrated that prohibition was disregarded in some of the capital's exclusive hotels.

Senator Brookhart of Iowa, another republican dry, regaled the senate with a story of "a prominent Wall street gentleman" who served liquor at a dinner he gave for senators here in the Willard hotel.

The revelation by the Iowa senator was caused by a remark of Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, who protested at this interruption of the discussions on the tariff bill and said he believed little bootlegging took place in the capital.

"I should like to ask the senator from Utah," Brookhart said, "if he ever saw any signs of bootleggers around any Wall street conventions at any of the hotels in Washington?"

"Wall street conventions?" the astonished Senator Smoot interrogated. "What does the senator mean? I know nothing of such conventions; I never attended one, and would not know a bootlegger if I saw one."

"I ask if the senator has ever seen any signs of bootleggers around the dinners given by a prominent Wall street gentleman for the purpose of greeting newly-elected senators?" Brookhart, pursued.

"I will say to the senator I have not, but I ask the senator if he has?"

"Yes, I have and the senator did, too, on the same night."

"I did not know what night it was. I will say to the senator that I have never been to any place where I have seen any drinking—any club or anything else, Wall street or otherwise. I will ask the senator to what place he refers."

"It was at the Willard hotel," Brookhart replied, "when a gentleman named Fahey from New York invited newly-elected and re-elected senators to a dinner there just to get acquainted with them."

"I was not there," Smoot flung back. "Oh, yes, the senator was there."

"I do not recall it."

"I saw the senator there."

"I cannot recall it. If I was there I did not see any liquor."

"No, the senator did not get any liquor."

"I did not say get it; I said see it."

"The flasks, as I remember," Brookhart went on, "were under the table with a curtain around it and all one had to do was to reach down and get his flask and put it in his hip pocket."

"The senator did not do that, I know," he told me he did not," the Iowan added as the senate and gallery resounded with laughter. Smoot ended the debate by again saying he did not recall the incident.

Senator Howell gave the senate reports of alleged prohibition violations at the Carlton Hotel club and of drinking at other prominent hostelries and said, "If you close one of those great hostelries you will see real enforcement."

He suggested that Major General Smedley D. Butler had demonstrated at Philadelphia that he had the courage and resource to dry up a large city if given co-operation, and advised that the marine officer be brought here to dry up the capital.

HOWELL WILL GIVE NO FACTS OF BOOTLEGGING

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—(AP) — Senator Howell, republican, Nebraska, said in the senate today that he was unable to give specific facts of bootlegging in Washington and that he thought it "unfair" of President Hoover "to demand them of a senator."

Addressing the senate Saturday, the Nebraskan charged that bootlegging was rampant in the capital and said the president should see that proper authorities curb such traffic. This led to a White House statement the next day suggesting a citation by Howell of instances of law violation for investigation by the department of justice.

"I spoke from what is common knowledge," he said today, "and what is believed outside of Washington to be the conditions inside Washington, the depository of our constitution and the seat of our government.

"I believe conditions here are vastly better than in other cities, but the fact remains that bootlegging thrives in Washington."

NAT'L CONVENTION AMERICAN WAR MOTHERS

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 24.— (AP)— Mothers of America are "the sources of effective defense of our nation as well as of its material and spiritual development in time of peace," General Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff, U. S. A., said in an address tonight before the seventh national convention of American War Mothers.

"Victory in the Meuse-Argonne," General Summerall told the mothers of men who helped win that famous battle, "was assured in the homes and by the firesides of America twenty years before the event."

Discipline, "that shatters the bonds of fear" and enables men to carry on in war, is a complex and organic entity, the speaker continued, and its development is a process of growth. The discipline learned in the homes made possible the American army, he declared, in paying tribute to the mothers of soldiers.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 24.—(AP) — Press dispatches today from the state of Vera Cruz, where the first serious fighting of the rebellion last spring broke out, told of serious clashes in connection with the municipal elections of last Sunday.

The correspondent of La Prensa at Jalapa, the capital, placed the casualties at 130 dead and several hundred wounded. Other newspapers told of violent encounters in Orizaba, Cordoba and the city of Vera Cruz but made no attempt to estimate the casualties.

Pitched battles were said to have developed around election booths in Vera Cruz and some of them changed hands several times at the point of revolvers. Cordoba dispatches said rival political groups used stones, clubs, pistols and knives to settle their disputes. Several fights of minor proportions occurred in other cities and towns.

THE W. C. T. U. PRESIDENT CRITICIZES N. Y. TIMES

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 24—(AP)—Mrs. Ella Alexander Boole, president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, today criticized several newspapers throughout the country because, she said, they had misinterpreted President Hoover's message to the 55th annual convention here.

The national president, who was reelected at today's session, read a telegram she sent to the New York Times commenting upon an editorial which she described as typical. She specified no other newspaper.

The Times editorial, Mrs. Boole said, interpreted the president's letter as a rebuke to the W. C. T. U. when he wrote:

"Too many people have come to rely wholly upon the strong arm of the law to enforce abstinence, forgetting that the cause of the individual of the personal value to himself of temperance in all things."

Mrs. Boole's telegram to the Times stated that Mr. Hoover "knows that the W. C. T. U. stands for law observance" and its members "are total abstainers from all intoxicating liquors."

The cablegram added that the W. C. T. U. did not presume to speak for the president but that the organization was confident Mr. Hoover's reference that "too many people have come to rely upon the strong arm of the law" was in recognition of "our contribution to total abstinence and that he was calling the attention to those other people who failed to recognize personal law observance as a contribution to law enforcement."

SQUIRRELS BECOMING VICIOUS IN MERIDEN

MERIDEN, Sept. 24—(AP)—Fearing the squirrel which attacked and bit his young son, James, in the dooryard of his home here this morning, might have been affected with rabies, Dr. I. S. Otis sent the carcass of the animal to the laboratory of the state department of health for examination.

The preliminary examination indicated the animal was not afflicted with rabies, but the complete analysis requires about two weeks, and the definite result will not be known until the expiration of that time. In the meantime, Dr. Otis has sent for some antirabies serum, in order to inoculate the boy against any possibility of contracting the disease.

The child was bitten of the back of the left leg, about half-way between the ankle and knee, the wound being in the nature of a puncture. The flesh was not torn, but a small area around the wound was badly discolored.

A woman living in the same neighborhood was attacked by a squirrel Sunday morning, suffering numerous bites and scratches.

THE QUINEBAUG QUIET AS DRILLING GOES ON

Many were interested Tuesday in the mid-river drilling being carried on by the state in the bed of the Quinebaug. The underlying ledge has been located on either bank. Now it is the plan to determine the depth of bed rock where the three river piers will stand. With the river at its present low water stage, it is the expectation that three V-shaped coffer dams, will alllow the piers to be anchored to the ledge 20 feet below the river bed, without the use of caissons. It seems to be the opinion of the strangers that the Quinebaug is hardly capable of causing much trouble, low or high. Some of the older members of the self-appointed advisory board, that know the river, recalled the time when the tunnel dam was constructed. At that time, along in late winter, some native oldtimer, acquainted with the occasional freaks of the Quinebaug, offered a bit of free advice. There was then in place a great, high, wood coffer dam, which the informant allowed might be washed out some fine night.

The boss engineers of the construction gang, offered the high hat information that "he had worked on trout streams before." Within a week, melting snow with a two days' warm rain, for 30 miles up the great watershed, raised the river 10 feet. Great battering rams of ice, carried along at race horse speed through the narrow tunnel gorge, on the raging flood torrent, carried out the coffer dam, buildings, masonry and the whole works clean, leaving the tunnel cut, as the Indians found it. It is told that the old-timer asked the engineer, as he viewed the ruin, if "he had seen any trout around lately?"

THE FIRST DEPOSITOR IN BOROUGH'S NEW BANK

With the underpinning wall of the new Jewett City Savings bank being rushed to completion there has been some speculation as to whom would fall the distinction of being the first depositor. This morning, when work began, G. H. Prior went all prospective competitors for that honor, a clean, one better. When the masons began work, Mr. Prior climbed down among the workmen, and producing a perfectly good nickel, told one of the stone layers that he wished to make a deposit. It was accordingly done. Raising a great stone the coin was deposited in a little depression, there to remain until future ages shall find out the legal tender of 1929. While he declares that he expects no interest and was given no bank book, yet he sure is the first depositor.

BROOKLYN FAIR OPENS TODAY WITH SPLENDID VARIETY OF EXHIBITS

DANIELSON, Sept. 24—Scenes of many another entry day were re-enacted at the fair grounds of the Windham County Agricultural society in Brooklyn today as exhibitors brought what they will have to show to the crowds attending the fair on Wednesday and Thursday.

The exhibition halls and the secretary's office were places of hustle and bustle this afternoon as many hands set themselves to arranging all that will be of interest to the throng of people expected to be present on Wednesday, the first day. Poultry entries are unusually numerous this year, and there is also a fine display of vegetables. Likewise, in the ladies' department the entries give promises of being up to the fine standard of the years that have gone before.

Brooklyn and Canterbury granges will vie with each other this year for the best general exhibit of home and farm products, and this means in the showing of other years, two excellent displays. The Canterbury Juvenile grange also will have an exhibit. Another outstanding display will be that of the Vegetable Growers' association, the members being specialists in their line.

Secretary Marshall J. Frink, rushed this afternoon with the detail of getting the fair busy, took time to say that 28 horses are at the fairgrounds to take part in the races scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday. In addition to these horses, 10 other entries had to be refused because of lack of quarters for them. Never before in all its history of 80 years has the fair had so many entries for races as this fall, so some snappily fought out events are to be anticipated.

A peculiar circumstance that will somewhat reduce the number of cattle entries this year is that the water supply there is not up to normal due to the many weeks of drought. However, many fine animals will be entered. The majority of these animals will not be brought to the grounds until early Wednesday morning in order that the supply of water at the fair may not be unnecessarily reduced.

The midway was being built up today, promising many interesting diversions for the fair-goers. Out on the grounds sections have been set aside for farm machinery displays, exhibits of farm lighting and heating equipment and various other things along this line. Areas also have been set aside for showings of new automobiles.

This year is the 80th that a fair has been held at Brooklyn, and there was curiosity today as to whether anyone attending the first fair four score years ago will be on hand for the present exhibition.

OBITUARY

Mrs. T. Dwight Pond

Mrs. Ardelia M. Pond, widow of T. Dwight Pond of Brooklyn, where the family was resident for many years, died this morning at the home of her son, Wallace Pond, in Providence, at 76 President avenue. Mrs. Pond was 87 years of age. She was born in Brooklyn a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Brown, and lived practically all of her life there. Her husband died about four years ago. She leaves three sons, Wallace and Theodore of Providence and William of New Britain. She also is survived by a brother, William Brown of Brooklyn. Funeral services are to be held in Providence, with burial in Brooklyn.

Mrs. Harding W. Gaylord, Mrs. Burdette C. Hopkins. Miss Marion D. Cholar and Mrs. Helen Dowe are members of the local committee of arrangements for the fall meeting of the eastern district of the Council of Congregational Women of Connecticut to be held at the Westfield Congregational church here on Thursday of next week. There are to be morning and afternoon sessions. The Ladies' Benevolent society of the local church is to serve a luncheon.

Supt. W. E. Parker of Killingly's schools said this afternoon that an opportunity will be given those who wish to attend an evening school this fall to register at his office in the high school building Friday evening of this week between 7:30 and 9 o'clock. The response to the notices that Supt Parker will send out tomorrow relative to a proposed evening school and the number that come to register will determine whether it will be possible to have such a school here this winter. It is necessary that a sufficient number register to make having the school a worth while project. A number who have attended the school the past two or three years will be absent from classes this year, having completed the courses and having received certificates to that effect. The town is willing to hold sessions of an evening school again this year, being cognizant of the great good that has been accomplished for numbers of persons at similar schools conducted here in recent years. Supt. Parker hopes that the response to the opportunity to register on Friday evening will be widespread.

Three cases, all having to do with violations of the motor vehicle laws, were disposed of by Judge W. Fenner Woodward at this morning's session of the Killingly town court. Walter R. Lindeman of Putnam was fined $10 and costs for speeding, $5 of the fine being remitted and the accused paying a total of $15.74. Robert Morrison of this town, charged with failure to grant the right of way, was fined $5 and costs, a total of $10.50. Wilfred Aubin, also resident in Killingly, was fined $5 and costs, a total of $10.50, for failure to give proper signal. In each case the financial considerations were adjusted with the court.

It is announced that the Danielson Rotary club again will sponsor a boys' swimming class during the fall and winter season. Last winter local Rotarians regularly provided transportation to the Plainfield Community house and also arranged for the use of the pool there by local boys. The arrangement was such a success that it is to be renewed. As yet no instructor has been engaged to succeed William Schofield, who no longer is a resident of Danielson.

A night force is to be put to work at the Connecticut Village plant of Powdrell and Alexander, where several hundred operatives are now engaged during the day with the manufacture of curtains.

The Danielson Building and Loan association continues to receive applications for loans, these applications representing desires frequently in excess of the funds on hand to care for them, but all are filed and the majority usually filled.

Following a rule that has been in force for several years, schools of Killingly will not be closed a day for the Brooklyn fair, but will remain in session Wednesday and Thursday. However school authorities offer no objection if those pupils who wish to attend the fair arrange to do so. In Brooklyn the Center and East Brooklyn schools will be closed all day Wednesday and other schools of the town will have only one session Thursday.

Flying comparatively low one of the huge passenger planes of the Colonial airways on the New York to Boston run passed over Danielson about 12:20 this afternoon, a bit southerly of the course usually followed.

It was said today that there is no immediate prospect of the resumption of operations at the Whitestone plant, closed for several years, of the American Woolen company at Elmvilla.

Another sign of fall in this territory is that the cider mills have gone into action, and that sweet cider is being offered, usually at 50 cents a gallon, at scores of roadside stands. Prior to prohibition sweet cider sold at around 10 cents a gallon, but the higher price does not appear to have made it unpopular.

Raymond A. Milton of Lowell is visiting with friends in Danielson for a few days.

J. Carl Witter, Danielson, and known to horsemen all through southern New England, is to be the starter of the races at the Brooklyn fair Wednesday and Thursday.

Assistant Postmaster Earle F. Winslow accompanied his daughter, Miss Ruth Winslow, to LaSalle academy in Massachusetts today. Miss Winslow is to pursue a course in music.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Twombly of Providence have been recent visitors with Mrs. Twombly's mother, Mrs. Hattie Bailey of School street.

State Officers James Carmody, Elton Nolan, John Murphy and Theodore Strand returned here last evening after doing special patrol duty at the Trumbull-Coolidge wedding in Plainville.

Leo Gleckman, injured last Friday morning when the bread truck he was driving for a Providence concern was in a crash with a Shriners' special train at the Franklin street crossing, is steadily recovering from the injuries he received. He has returned to his home in Providence.

A series of frosty nights has brought the first glorious tints of fall to foliage in the countryside hereabouts, and some of the scenery is now very beautiful.

A week from next Monday brings the annual town meeting in Killingly. The chief prospective contest will be for places on the board of selectmen. Both republicans and democrats have named two candidates, but of the four only three can be elected.

One of Danielson's newest and finest homes, being constructed for Mr. and Mrs. Richard D. Banigan of Broad street, is nearing completion on Peckham's Heights, east of North Main street and a little north of Westfield avenue. The home will be ready for occupancy this fall.

PUTNAM

ELMER BURDICK RECEIVES SUSPENDED JAIL SENTENCE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 24.—Judge Edward M. Yeomans of Danbury opened the September term of the criminal docket of superior court in this city today. The session commenced promptly at 9 o'clock upon an order from Judge Yeomans, executed by County Sheriff Charles A. Gates of Willimantic. Rev. James F. English, pastor of the Congregational church of Putnam, offered prayer. The refinished chambers were filled to capacity several minutes before the formal opening of court by many attendants who had anticipated an interesting day, as indications of such were given when Jailer Walter Tripp of the county jail at Brooklyn arrived with several prisoners, shackled together with chains.

Elmer Burdick of Elmville, who was arrested in Danielson by state officers early in the summer, following a series of sensational breaks committed in Danielson, Providence, and a theft of automobile accessories from the Putnam Buick garage in this city, was arraigned on a charge of burglary and theft. He entered a plea of guilty and received a sentence of one year in jail, the execution of which was suspnded for a period of a year, during which time he will be in charge of the county probation officer, L. Edwin Hill, of Danielson. Following the imposition of sentence, Judge Yeomans offered Burdick a bit of advice as to clean living, which, the judge intimated, would, if followed by the prisoner, result in his becoming a good citizen.

Oliver Dorous of Hampton, a Negro, barely 21 years of age, was before the court to answer to a charge of perjury. Dorous changed his plea from not guilty to guilty and upon recommendation from State's Attorney Howard C. Bradford, Judge Yeomans imposed a sentence of six months in the county jail at Brooklyn, and suspended the execution of the sentence for a period of one-half year, placing the prisoner in care of L. Edwin Hill, superior court probation officer. Dorous, the state alleged, induced a white woman, who is mentally unsound, to violate terms of her parole from the state farm for women at Niantic and enter into a marriage agreement with him. The prospective nuptials failed to obtain the consent of the would-be bride's foster parents, whom she claimed mistreated her, and made application for a marriage license in the town of Hampton. The officials of that town refused to grant legal permission because of the groom's youth. Accordingly, they went to the town of Woodstock where Dorous, in a sworn statement, said he was of age. Police officials were assigned to the case and before the ceremony had taken place Dorous was arrested and a charge of perjury made against him.

Pasquale (Patsey) Perilli, Putnam man and holder of the longest police record in this city, was put to bed this morning on a charge of abuse of a female child. Perilli entered a plea of not guilty through Public Defender Harry E. Back of Danielson and elected to be tried by a jury. His case was assigned for trial Thursday morning, Sept. 26. Arthur Peters of Willimantic was another prisoner who elected trial by a jury. He is charged with failure to send his daughters to school. In the case of the state vs. Philippe Geaudreault of Plainfield, charged with abuse of a female child, a jury will hear evidence on Thursday morning.

Ora L. Smart, warden of the Woodstock town farm, who is charged with rape, entered a plea of not guilty and elected to be tried by the court. He is represented by Attorney Irving H. Miron of this city. Smart will be tried on Thursday, Oct. 3, along with several other minor cases, which will go to trial on that date.

MAZZOLA CASE TO BE TRIED IN WILLIMANTIC, OCT. 8

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 24.—At the request of Attorney William E. King of Willimantic, who, with Samuel B. Harvey, also of Willimantic, is counsel for Thomas Mazzola, Willimantic man charged with murder in the first degree of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Rosia Lorrella, Judge Edward M. Yeomans, at the conclusion of today's session of superior criminal court, assigned the case of Mazzola for trial in Willimantic on Oct. 8. In his plea before the court, Attorney King intimated that the case should rightfully be tried in that city since all witnesses for the state and defense are residents there.

Mr. King added that by trying the alleged murderer in his home town considerable expense, that would be incurred by the state in the transporting of witnesses to Putnam, would be saved, not to mention the traveling time of lawyers and the judge that would likewise be saved if the case went to trial there. State's Attorney Howard C. Bradford in a statement to the court was of the same opinion as Mr. King and Judge Yeomans spoke highly in favor of the proposed action. Following a few seconds of deliberation he ordered the case assigned for trial in the Willimantic court room.

Thomas L. Paine

A death in Wilsonville last evening was that of Thomas L. Paine, one of the oldest residents of Windham county, who died at the age of 91 years. Mr. Paine died from a heart attack. He was born in Rhode Island in June, 1838, but has lived in Wilsonville for many years, where he became widely known. In late years Mr. Paine has been active despite his advanced years.

Comdr. G. Stanley Shaw of the Anslemn Mayotte post, No. 13, American Legion, stated today that invitations have been sent to representatives of various fraternal, civic and patriotic organizations in the city to meet in the chamber of commerce rooms on Oct. 7, at 7:30 p. m., to formulate a general committee, which will direct the programme of events relative to the city's observance of Armistice day. Commander Shaw said that an appropriation of $500 has been made for this occasion, adding that only through the high calibre of spirit of the various members of local organizations will the 12th anniversary of the ending of the World war be marked with any degree of success.

The commercial plant of the Southern New England Telephone Co., together with the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., has recently issued a business telephone directory of commercial New England. The book is a large volume and contains listings of every business house in New England. Incidentally the fall issue, which is land equipped with telephone service along the same lines as the regular local telephone directory, contains for the first time a complete listing of all business houses in Connecticut.

A light brown fawn, which apparently had been chased by dogs and sought out by hunters, made its way out of the Oak Hill section early last evening onto Brown street and ran into the yard of Eben Holden on Grove street, where it fell exhausted and died a few minutes later. Examination of the animal's body revealed that it had been the target of a hunter. A bullet had entered the deer's hip. Mr. Holden reported the incident to Game Warden Thomas Daniels of Plainfield and this morning the carcass was removed in custody of the county game officials. Investigation is to be made in an effort to determine the identity of the rifleman who violated state game laws relative to hunting deer, on which there is no open season.

Two Providence youths successfully stowed away on a Springfield-bound bus and made their way, last evening, from Chepatchet, R. I., to Putnam, riding on two rear bumpers of the public service vehicle. They were discovered in their act by Capt. of Police William J. Jarvis, when they alighted at the terminal on Union square. The boys were making their way to Willimantic.

Enrollments are being received by Supt. of Schools Leon N. Farrin, who urges that all those planning to take advantage of the evening educational courses offered by the town school department, report at the Putnam High school building on Wednesday evening, Oct. 2. This year courses in bookkeeping and typewriting and shorthand are to be given. School will be in operation on three evenings of each week.

The civil session and short calendar of Windham county superior court will open in this city on Friday, Sept. 27, with Judge Edward M. Yeomans presiding.

Andrew F. Donovan of Worcester is visiting with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew P. Donovan, of Lyons street.

Judge Percy P. Tourtellotte of town court of Thompson, in session in North Grosvenordale last evening, imposed a fine of $2 and costs upon August Pluta of Webster, who was arrested on a charge of violation of the hunting and fishing laws of the state. John Konkel of Webster, who wandered into Connecticut and fired a round of shots, one of which took effect and killed a wild duck, was arraigned before Judge Tourtellotte, but charges against him were withdrawn upon payment of costs.

The program of the Elizabeth Porter Putnam chapter of D. A. R., for the forthcoming three months of October, November and December, has been arranged. All meetings are to be held in Odd Fellows hall on Pomfret street on the second Monday of each month, with sessions to open promptly at 3 o'clock. "And did you throw old shoes at the couple, Lisa?"

HIGHWAY DEMANDS

In connection with the demands, or suggestions, that are made for the betterment of conditions on the highways it is to be noted that there is an insistent appeal for the widening of the existing improved roads and the placing of restrictions on the size of vehicles that are permitted to use them.

One cannot have ridden over a four-way highway without appreciating the fact that it would be an excellent thing if all the main highways of the state were so improved. That would provide plenty of room for handling a large volume of traffic every day or on special occasions. It is apparent that road widening is getting considerable attention, but whenever it is suggested it brings forth a wail from those who are contributing to such outlays every year that it is about time that attention should be turned away from the fine hard-surfaced roads and more of it given to the side roads which have to be used even though they are in frightful condition. In other words, that small army of backroad residents have gotten the idea that instead of continuing to give indefinitely to those who have it is time to devote a little time and attention to those who are still without. And when you stop to think of it they have a legitimate talking point. There are, in fact, many in the traffic lines on the main arteries who would be glad any day to use a crossroad to get to their destination if such were available.

In the construction of new roads it has been found that it diverts traffic from other much used highways. Such is inevitable and lends emphasis to the appeal for the giving of more attention to the back roads, the roads which if developed would furnish the short cuts and traffic relief.

Even in the early days of long distance trucking there was opposition to the use of the huge vehicles on the highways. This opposition has grown because the vehicles have grown, in width and length and height. One might as well be back of a barn as to get in the rear of some of the big vans. They not only insist upon and get the big part of the highway but they are not what might be called a help to traffic or a joy to other highway users.

HELP THE PREVENTION

It will not be long now before there will be an opportunity to participate in that cooperation which President Hoover urges upon the people in this country for the prevention of fires during Fire Prevention week.

It is a grand good thing that we should have pointed out the great waste that exists because of the needless fires every year and every day. It gives us an opportunity to think a bit about what is, but what ought not to be. And it is as the result of a bit of cogitation that the thoughtful person will recognize the opportunities before him to accomplish some of this prevention.

We cannot imagine the day when there will be no fire losses. That is too much to expect for it is not an easy matter to prevent all the causes of fires, but there is a chance to prevent a large proportion of them. To compare the fire losses of one year with those of another may be unjust because carelessness never runs evenly and there is no way of estimating the price of carelessness one year more than another, but it is quite evident that if there is the exercise of ordinary care on the part of the people throughout the year the result will be reflected in decreased fire losses. And yet a little carelessness on the part of a few may be the cause of sending the fire loss figures to new limits. Carelessness may result in small or tremendous losses, depending upon conditions.

While it is only for the observation of Fire Prevention week that the president makes his direct appeal, it must be appreciated that fire prevention is an effort that should be kept constantly to the front. It amounts to nothing to be careful and to actually have a week when there are no fires if the following week and the weeks after it is all forgotten. Recognizing the merits of fire prevention there should be a constant endeavor on the part of organizations and individuals to really accomplish something, to reduce carelessness and through such a measuring up to responsibilities keep the annual fire record going down instead of up.

LATIN AMERICA TRADE

It is a most interesting statement which is made by the department of commerce when it is shown that since the beginning of this century our trade with Latin America has increased over six times.

This gain has not been a steady one. The 1900 trade total of $300,000,000 has not been jumped that amount every five years as might be figured for an average, but we have reached the $2,000,000,000 in the past year because of the aggressiveness displayed in going after the Latin American business and because of the favorable conditions which resulted from the war. It furnished the opening of which we have made the most.

There were the years when Great Britain, Germany and France were carrying on a big business with the Latin American republics, but we have reached the point now where our trade with Latin America is more than all three of those countries combined. This change is no more than conditions warranted for there was no good reason why, geographically, we should not have been doing a bigger business with those countries in the last century.

The war provided an opening that was promptly capitalized. Those countries, shut off from their European markets, turned to the United States. They found that their wants could be economically and efficiently supplied and that there was a chance for doing more business with the United States. Americans put forth their best efforts for trade development since those emergency days and the answer to them is the high figure reathed during 1928. We have been brought closer together by knowing each other better tradewise. We have been brought closer together because of the opening of the Panama canal and because of the improvement in transportation facilities both on land and sea. We have been convinced that Latin America furnished a field for American business and Latin America has found it advantageous to encourage the improved trade relations.

Even though it had been claimed for a long time that the opportunity existed for this development there had been tardy efforts in going after it. Thirty years ago it might have been considered impossible and yet no one knows what the next 30 years may bring forth.

FLYING SOUTH

When Colonel Lindbergh completed his circle of the Caribbean he demonstrated the possibilities of the airplane in that region for the speedier handling of the mail. He set in motion a train of thought that has since been making progress, for having proved the claim and paved the way by actually flying over such a route he hastened the time when actual mail service would be established.

With his arrival in Dutch Guiana for the establishment of a new mail route he has once more given a demonstration of how distance is eliminated by the flying machine and the advantages that are going to be gained by the handling of mail matter in such a manner. Bringing the United States and northern South America nearer by 14 days is no small accomplishment. It means going through the air over a line of islands, where landings could be made if necessary, instead of employing steamships to cover that distance.

Colonel Lindbergh isn't going to be the mail carrier over that route but he has shown that it is practical and there will be plenty of other capable fliers to maintain the service. The auspicious opening of that route will mean much to every point that is involved, but the return of the colonel around the Caribbean, backward over the course that he originally charted, will further stimulate the cause of aviation and air mail service in those countries.

It has long been desired that North and South America be connected by a railroad and by a highway system. From the accomplishments of Colonel Lindbergh it is evident that if they come it will be after air service has been established.

SINCLAIR'S ACT

It is a well known fact that two wrongs do not make a right. Yet it is the plea of Harry Sinclair from the District of Columbia jail that he ought to be set free at this time because what he did was no more than others had done.

He doesn't seem to think that it amounts to anything that he was tried and convicted. He doesn't seem to complain because he was sent to jail, but he harbors the idea that he ought to be released now because he ought not to have been punished.

We do not know what the reason for the report was but it was claimed at the time he made his plea for clemency that he was in poor health. That is quite a common cause for such appeals and it may have been employed in his case in the belief that it would serve to placate the public. It didn't, but it is to the credit of Sinclair that he now declares that he never sought release on the ground of poor health, that his health is not poor and he does not claim that it will be broken if he remains through the full sentence.

When Mr. Sinclair claims that the authorities have been engaged in jury shadowing as well as himself, and intimates that there is where he got his idea, it can be appreciated that the motive is not likely to be the same if the government, federal or state, undertakes to see that a jury is not being tampered with as it would be for a wealthy individual to become engaged in having jurymen followed. He doesn't point to any other individuals who have been engaged in such activity either before or since his experience, and it cannot be said that encouragement has been lent to his conduct by the commutation of his sentence. He started something, and the example that is being made of him should be a discouragement to others.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: Cheer up; perhaps summer can come back, also.

How many of the bothersome corn borers have you located and killed this season?

In August 33 rum-running autos with 11,556 bottles of liquor were seized in Vermont. How many escaped detection?

"Life Prisoner Dies." That is what happens to all of them, but not often behind bars.

"Wild Life in Action." Such a headline might have reference to conditions in North Carolina.

If you are contemplating observing Fire Prevention week, why not start doing it now and keep it up indefinitely? If it is good for a week it is good for all time.

THE WORLD AT FIFTEEN

"I have just exactly five minutes," Ernestine stated impressively as she shed her coat and settled herself comfortably.

"I think it is perfectly grand to be rushed to death the way I've been during this holiday vacation time. I haven't had a chance to breathe up to now, and it's just gorgeous. When I look back and remember the days when I went to the children's party at the club at 3 in the afternoon with blue ribbons in my hair, ate ice cream molded in little Santa Clauses and thought I was having a perfect whirl, it positively makes me laugh!

"Only, now that I'm going to formals, I'm terribly hampered by mother's queer, old-fashioned ideas. It must be dreadfully dull to be hindered in everything you want to do by having to debate the question of whether or not it will wear!

"There was such a darling pair of silver gossamer chiffon stockings I wanted to wear with my peach-colored taffeta formal gown, and the salesgirl and I agreed perfectly that when things matched that way what difference did it make if they could be worn only once?

"Do you think mother could see it? She made me take a heavier pair and said when I began buying hosiery at $5 to be worn only once before they vanished in thin air she'd know it. At my age, she said. She can't realize that I'm practically grown up.

"If she'd see the clothes that Isabel and Grace wear to the parties she'd understand. They make me feel like an utter Cinderella. It's queer, too, or I was crazy about my peach taffeta with its regular hem when it was first made. Grace has a black tulle with rhinestone buckles on her shoes that is beyond words. It makes her look so mysterious and alluring.

"I had an awful quarrel with Bud at the Christmas party because he followed Grace around as though he were a Pomeranian. And her eyebrows are so perfect! I tried to fix mine the same way with the tweezers, but mother caught me and took them away from me. She said she had no earthly intention of allowing a 15-year-old child to make a Ziegfeld-Follies girl out of her face if life were left in her to prevent the deed. That's the sort of thing I'm up against all the time.

"It was terribly confusing having the formal the night before that informal party the girls gave; I had to change my frame of mind so fast. And I had to decide on slippers that would be correct with the peach taffeta for one and the long-sleeved black velvet dress I wear to informals, you know. It's my first black velvet and I just love it. Made like this with a drape on one side and a flower pinned up here.

"The slippers I finally got are dreams. They are of black crepe de chine, of all things, with silver and gold straps and the vamps are so tiny you have to look twice to see 'em. I adore slippers. My dream of luxury is to own one of those enameled sets of shelves with six pairs of slippers to a shelf, all different!

"Do you like my hair done this way—down over one ear and up off the other? I think it is rather alluring. The first time I did it like this Bud stared for five minutes and walked around me in a circle saying, 'Gee!' It is a good thing to give them something to study about one, don't you think? A man likes a girl to look distinguished, sort of.

"I'm actually rushed to death tomorrow—8 o'clock train downtown to go shopping for a fresh flower for my formal and to get a wave and then I meet the girls for lunch. Then it's the north side for Cathie's party, then back home out here for the 6 o'clock supper George's mother is giving and after that the last informal at the club. I don't care if it is an informal—I shall wear my peach taffeta and gold-strapped slippers because—do you know who I'm going with?"

Ernestine's voice dropped into tones of awe.

"His mother arranged it because he wasn't home then—Reynolds White—and he's a freshman at college—at college! Imagine! I'm thrilled to pieces and Bud is so mad he won't speak to me. I never had anything like that happen to me before and I think it's gorgeous!"—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24—A session of the senate makes very entertaining reading sometimes.

It is fascinating in its unexpectedness. You read down one page of a debate on a particular subject, then turn over to the next wondering in just what wholly irrelevant direction you may be heading with the next sentence.

Take, for instance, the session wherein the case of Near-senator Vare of Pennsylvania was pushed over into the regular meeting of congress next December.

That had the floor under the Norris resolution, and mighty peppery exchange marked its progress. Very blunt things were being said on both sides.

Finally arises Walsh of Massachusetts and the interested reader hopes for more of the same. But instead he gets a considerable amount of information about the extent to which American tourists returning from abroad have been forced to pay duties on what they brought home on the basis of the foreign retail rather than the foreign wholesale cost of the articles.

Finally, you are back on the Vare case.

Disconcerting.

Even the experienced and skillful editors of the Congressional Record find this senate practice of leaping from flower to flower of debate rather disconcerting.

So the Record editors have devised a system of their own.

When the Walsh interlude was over and the senate got back to Vare, for instance they found it necessary to insert something that did not actually take place on the floor. They put in a subhead, "Senator from Pennsylvania," and added parenthetically: "The senate resumed consideration," etc., etc., of the Norris-Vare ouster resolution. And these editorial liberties are very helpful to every constant reader of the Record.

A Row on the Side.

During the Vare debate, Couzens of Michigan, a very blunt man, got into a side altercation with Waterman of Colorado, chairman of the subcommittee on elections, which still has to say its say on one aspect of the double barrelled assault on Vare's right to his seat.

Reed of Pennsylvania, leading the old guard effort to shelve the Vare row until the regular sessions, made a good deal of the fact that this report on the Wilson contest of Vare's election was still to come. Mr. Couzens didn't seem to think much of that argument.

"I think that the effort to delay consideration of this (Vare) matter until the so-called Waterman report shall be made is a smoke screen," he said. "Everybody knows what that report is going to contain."

Naturally that brought Waterman to his feet in protest. He repudiated the "smoke screen" suggestion and denied that his committee had "prejudged" its report on Vare.

"I did not say the committee had prejudged the report," said Couzens. "I said that senators now know what the conclusions of the report are going to be. I reiterate that. I know what the conclusions of the report will be."

"If the senator's information on other subjects is no better than—" Waterman began, but Couzens cut him off, bulldog jaw outthrust.

"I repeat that I know what the conclusions of the report are going to be," he said.

The Vare postponement vote went through 41 to 34. There were a score of senators "not voting." And when you look over their names, you are forced to conclude that Mr. Vare might have been within an ace of ejection from the senate that day had all hands been on deck.

YOUR HEALTH

Physical Exercise and Its Relationship To Health

(By Ivar Sivertsen, M. D., Minneapolis, Minnesota)

Although the span of life has been increased to ten years longer than the normal expectancy was ten years ago, much of this increase must be attributed to the decline in infant mortality. We are too frequently surprised to learn that some one of our friends, supposedly in the prime of life and vigorous manhood, has passed on into the great Unknown. As a rule his death has been caused by some one of the degenerative diseases, such as cancer, diabetes, ulcers, or kindred cause, and very seldom is it from one of the group of contagious diseases, for it is very true that science has the last mentioned evils pretty well under control.

Science has not been able, however, to make men realize that they will save themselves all of the pain and suffering entailed by the diseases of the degenerative group if they will only pause awhile, take stock, and come to the realization that physically they are underveloped. I need only ask you, Mr. Reader, to look at the men around you, at work and play. You cannot help but realize that most of them past forty and many of them even younger, are in poor physical condition. They suffer mainly from short wind, poor appetite, sallow complexion, or some other trifle which makes life less comfortable for them, but if we were to examine them more closely as the physician is able to do, we would find that these are merely manifestations of some deep-seated organic trouble. As a result many of them die at an age when they should be in their prime. Just think what it would mean to this country of ours if its leaders instead of dropping by the wayside at 55 were able to retain all of their vim, vigor and vitality (to use a hackneyed expression) until well into the late sixties. How often do we hear the cry, "Oh, if he had only lived to finish his life work"—and yet if this man had only spent one per cent of his time, or fifteen minutes a day taking care of his physical body, it is almost certain—for in this day of motor cars nothing concerning life is certain—that he would have increased his span of years by ten or fifteen. There can exist in any thinking person's mind very little doubt that physical exercise, systematically done and steadily followed will create a new zest for life and a much richer enjoyment of it. An article appearing in a dental journal some years ago said in regard to teeth: Food and function equals force and form. This formula may be applied to the entire body—for we have recognized long since that disuse leads to degeneration.

Now let us see what physical exercise does for the body. First of all, it stimulates the circulation of the blood, bringing fresh blood with its life giving oxygen to the various organs and removing the used blood which is full of waste materials and poisons. Secondly—it increases respiration with all that implies. In an article printed a few months ago in the Journal of the American Medical Association, an investigator found that deep breathing was extremely beneficial to sufferers from high blood pressure. Thirdly—on the digestive organs fifteen minutes of exercise a day will enable us to dispense in the main with all tonics, cathartics and the like, which do not cure but relieve. And last and most important of all, physical exercise is of extreme value to the nervous system. And let us not underestimate this little understood highly organized dynamo and the part it plays in human life. We must keep it at par and doubly so when we realize that 50 per cent of the bed patients in America are those suffering from nervous diseases; that is, nervous disorders run as high as all other diseases put together. And may we take the advice of John Dryden who wrote back in the sixteenth century:

"The first physicians by debauch were made:
Excess began and sloth sustains the trade.
By chase our long lived fathers earned their food:
Toil strung the nerves and purified the blood:
But we their sons, a pamper'd race of men,
Are dwindled down to three score years and ten.
Better to hunt in fields for health unbought,
Than fee the doctor for a nauseous draught.
The wise for cure on exercise depend,
God never made his work for man to mend."

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

An Unwelcome Visitor.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Impulsiveness in speech or deed
To trouble is quite sure to lead.
—Peter Rabbit.

Peter Rabbit had been away from the dear Old Briar Patch a night and a day. Little Mrs. Peter demanded to know where he had been. Peter told her how he had been chased into a hole in the old stone wall on the edge of the Old Orchard by a dog he had never seen before.

"I don't know where that fellow came from. We must watch out for him. Perhaps he is only a visitor. But Farmer Brown's Boy came and got

"You are safe in the dear Old Briar Patch, and what you want to leave it for I don't know".

him and that's what I do not understand," said Peter. "I hope he has not come to Farmer Brown's to live. If he has I hope he'll stay up there and not come around the dear Old Briar Patch. He runs too fast. Yes, sir, he runs too fast. I had one of the narrowest escapes of my life."

"You wouldn't have had if you had stayed at home in the dear Old Briar Patch," as you should have," retorted little Mrs. Peter rather sharply. "You are safe in the dear Old Briar Patch and what you want to leave for I don't know."

Peter made no reply to this. He was used to it. Whenever he left the dear Old Briar Patch he knew for a certainty that on his return little Mrs. Peter would have something to say about it. He just didn't listen to her now. He was thinking of that strange dog. "He can run circles around Bowser," said Peter. "If you ever see a black and white dog over this way, just keep out of sight, Fuzzy." You know Peter calls little Mrs. Peter "Fuzzy", for her name used to be Miss Fuzzytail.

Little Mrs. Peter happened to be sitting where she could look out across the Green Meadows toward Farmer Brown's. "There's a white spot moving out there on the Green Meadows," said she. "It seems to be coming this way."

Peter looked. "I do believe it is that dog," said he. "We must keep out of sight, my dear."

So Peter and Mrs. Peter retired to the middle of the dear Old Briar Patch. Meanwhile, Flip—for it was Flip—was running about on the Green Meadows looking for excitement. Gradually he drew nearer to the dear Old Briar Patch. At last he reached it. It was the first time he had ever been there. He trotted along the edge of it, sniffing here and sniffing there. He poked his head in at the entrance of one of Peter's private little paths. In fact, he poked his head in at the entrance of every private little path that Peter had made leading into the dear Old Briar Patch.

"I wonder what is inside there?" said Flip. "That looks like a good place for some one to be hiding. I wonder if I can crawl in there? Ouch! I scratched my nose. I don't like these sharp things." Of course, Flip meant the brambles.

All this time Peter and Mrs. Peter had been sitting side by side watching. "That's the fellow!" whispered Peter to Mrs. Peter. "Did you hear his yelp? I guess he got his nose scratched. I wish these brambles would scratch him up so that he never would come here again. I tell you what it is, my dear; I'm going to see if I cannot get him in here. He can't catch me in these little paths of mine and he certainly will get himself scratched."

"Are you crazy, Peter Rabbit?" whispered little Mrs. Peter. "You keep still right where you are.

But little Mrs. Peter was too late. Peter had suddenly thumped on the ground with his stout hindfeet and it was a loud thump.

The next story: "Peter Teases Flip."

Six years ago, Stanley and Gordon Hunt, now 18 and 15 respectively, retailed bouquets of flowers in Manchester, Ia., for five cents a bunch. So great was the demand for the flowers that the two boys, together with their mother, Mrs. M. R. Hunt, gradually worked into the bulb and hardy plant business and this year they planted more than 1,000,000 gladioli bulbs and 25 bushels of bulblets for next year. Their flower garden, less than an acre six years ago, now covers 15 acres while the annual net profit from the business runs into the thousands of dollars.

POETRY

"Only A Newspaper Guy"

I see a man strut through a jam in a hall,
Take a seat 'mid the speakers and chat with them all.
"Is this Murphy?" I ask, "that a crowd he defies?"
"No," says someone, "he's one of the newspaper guys."

I see a man pushing his way through the lines,
Of the cops, where a fire brightly glistens and shines,
"Chief Kenlon?" I ask, but a fireman replies:
"Oh, no, why that's one of those newspaper guys."

I see a man start on the trail of a crook,
And he scorns all assistance but brings him to book,
"Mr. Burns?" I inquire; someone scornfully cries:
"Burns? Naw, he's just one of them newspaper guys."

I see a man walk through the doors of a show
Where great throngs are blocked by the sign S. R. O.
"Is this Goodwin himself that no ticket he buys?"
"Well, hardly, he's one of the newspaper guys."

I see a man knock on a President's door,
And the sign, No Admittance, completely ignore:
"Is this Morgan, that privacy's right he denies?"
"Morgan? Shucks! It's just one of those newspaper guys."

And some day I'll walk by the great streets of gold
And see a man enter, unquestioned and bold,
"A saint?" I'll inquire, and old Peter'll reply:
"Well, I should say not; he's a newspaper guy."

Arabia

Far are the shades of Arabia,
Where the Princes ride at noon,
'Mid the verdurous vales and thickets,
Under the ghost of the moon:
And so dark is that vaulted purple
Flowers in the forest rise
And toss into blossom 'gainst the phantom stars
Pale in the noonday skies.

Sweet is the music of Arabia
In my heart, when out of dreams
I still in the thin clear mirk of dawn
Descry her gliding streams;
Hear her strange lutes on the green banks
Ring loud with the grief and delight
Of the dim-silked, dark-haired Musicians
In the brooding silence of night.

They haunt me—her lutes and her forests;
No beauty on earth I see
But shadowed with that dream recalls
Her loveliness to me.
Still eyes look coldly upon me,
Cold voices whisper and say—
"He is crazed with the spell of far Arabia,
They have stolen his wits away."

—Walter de la Mare.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

When a man says he is cut out to be a bachelor, he doesn't always add who did the cutting Montreal Star.

Contractor—Today we start building that roundhouse in Tanktown.

Assistant—Great! Who's to lay the cornerstone?—Life.

"And why, my man," asked the visiting curate, "are you here?"

"Well," replied the prisoner, "just run through the Ten Commandments and I'll tell you if I've missed anything."—Toronto Star.

Ella—"Oh, he's so romantic. When he addresses me he always calls me 'My Lady.'"

Ethel—"Force of habit, my dear. He must be a bus conductor."—Chicago Tribune.

"I thought you said he was a musician."

"I did. He plays the saxophone."

"Heck, man, playing the sax makes a fellow a pest, not a musician!"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Jean—Have you heard that Donald's lost his memory altogether?

Sandy—Well, well, how unfortunate! And to think I just gave him back the $5 I borrowed from him last week.—London Humorist.

"Well, boys," said Uncle Dick, "how are you getting on at school?"

"I'm first in arithmetic," Jackie replied.

Works emphasized the responsibilities and obligations incurred by the students as part of an institution maintained by the state. STATE'S WELFARE WAS MR. PARK'S FIRST THOUGHT

Senator Angus Park, of Sprague, who represented the Twentieth district in the senate at the session of 1911, and who died last week, will be remembered for his close attention to his duties as senator and for the common sense views which he took in the bills and other matters of public interest. He took his work seriously and it was his practice to consult the chairman of the committee which reported a measure when its purpose was not clear, says a Hartford paper. He observed senatorial courtesy but not to the extent of curtailing information. He was a woolen manufacturer. He learned his business in his native town of Galashiels, Scotland. It is recalled that he made a remark in the senate on a bill to afford better protection to sheep. He took the position that there was a good market for Connecticut wool and that it had a value which was peculiarly its own. He ridiculed the notion that wool grown in this state would have even a difficulty in securing a market. He added that he was prepared to buy all the Connecticut wool he could secure. He had faith in the state of his adoption as a great manufacturing state and he did not exempt woolen manufacturing from his list of industries. The purpose of his speech was to encourage the farmers of the state to engage more extensively in the production of wool on the hillsides of the state. He ridiculed the notion that the conditions in this state were unfavorable to the production of wool. At the recess which followed his speech a number of senators discussed Senator Park's statement. One of them, who was personally interested in everything pertaining to agriculture, remarked:

"I wish Connecticut had more men of the type of Senator Park, with faith in the possibilities of the state."

Senator Park first entered the legislative service of the state as the representative of the town of Sprague. It has been often regretted that he did not give more attention to legislative work for Connecticut. Senator Park had the good of the state at heart and particularly that of his own town. He made considerable money at his business but he did not hoard it. He assisted his town in its development and his employes to secure homes for themselves and their families. In addition to his manufacturing interests he was connected with important banking affairs. Senator Park was a citizen that the state could not afford to lose and he will long be remembered for benefactions. A New London county paper in its obituary notice of him says:

"Mr. Park realized his dream of crowning his success in business by creating a model community where all the comforts of life could be enjoyed by its residents. Mr. Park provided the village with a water system, fire protection and paved streets. He practically rebuilt the village of Hanover by erecting between fifty and sixty model homes for his employes. He was a large benefactor of the Hanover Congregational church of which he was a member; and he presented a lot for the erection of the Catholic church.

EDWARD J. BURKE, JR., KILLED AS AUTOMOBILE UPSETS

Edward J. Burke, Jr., 21, formerly of this city, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Burke of No. 140 West street, Milford, Mass., was killed late Monday afternoon when the machine he was driving towards Framingham, Mass., skidded on the shoulder of the new Milford-Holliston road and overturned. George Mullins, 35, also of Milford, who was riding with Burke, received several broken ribs and possible internal injuries.

Burke's neck was broken and he had a deep laceration on the right side of the head behind the ear. Both were thrown from the car and were unconscious when a passing autoist found them. They were taken to the Milford hospital but Burke was dead when the ambulance reached the hospital. According to motorists, Burke tried to pass a machine operated by Louis C. Rosenberg, of Fairfield, Conn. He swung to the left, hit the shoulder and the machine overturned.

Burke, about a year ago, was employed in the furniture department at the Plaut-Cadden store in this city. He left here last winter. He is survived by his parents, a brother, James, and two sisters, Mrs. James Slattery, of Milford, and Mrs. Charles Cronin, of Framingham.

BRADFORD NOT BLAMED FOR SHIPMATE'S DEATH

The automobile in which he and Bradford were riding was struck by an automobile bus on the Post road after crashing into a stone abutment, and Triebelcox died a short time later at the Westerly hospital.

MISS CRUTCHER SPEAKS TO CHILD STUDY GROUP

"Fit your child for living" was the topic of an interesting talk given by Miss Hester B. Crutcher, of New Haven, executive secretary of the Connecticut society for mental hygiene, at the first of a series of round tables for the child study group of the Woman's City club, at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the club room in the Wauregan hotel.

Mrs. Edwin V. Ross, chairman, presided at the meeting which had an unusually large attendance. After reviewing many topics of last year's meetings, Miss Crutcher brought the group to the topic of this meeting with the question, "Are you fitted to live for and with your child?"

She advised that a parent must have emotional stability, an unbiased point of view, must love the child wisely, that is with controlled affection, so that adjustments later in life may be made easily. Most of all does a parent need a sense of humor and infinite patience.

As to the needs of the child Miss Cruther spoke of security in parental affection, in the routine of life and social contacts. All these are brought about by wise guidance of not too indulgent parents who do not continue to dominate the child, but recognize its right of self expression in socially acceptable ways.

An interesting and most helpful discussion followed Miss Crutcher's talk.

Next meeting will be held last Tuesday in October for an open discussion of questions by the group and will be conducted by Dr. James L. McCartney, chief of division of mental hygiene of Connecticut.

WESTERLY HARDWARE STORE DAMAGED BY FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Sept. 24—A fire starting among varnishes and shellacs in the basement of the Dunning Hardware store, Potter-Langworthy block, was discovered by two young women passing shortly after midnight. One of them went down High street and informed Officer Leroy Norman and the other crossed the street to inform Night Watchman Joseph Dowd at the South County Public Service building, who pulled in Box No. 57, which brought all the fire apparatus with Fire Chief George Ezzer and Engineers Bonner, McKenzie and Pasetti.

Four lines of hose were laid and the front of the Dunning Hardware store was broken in. A stream of water was directed into the front of the building under the show window from which clouds of smoke were rising. A second line was taken to the rear of the building and a stream directed through the rear basement door, where the firemen fought their way to the front end of the basement. The fire was put out after a fight of a half hour.

The adjoining store of Du-Lowry, shoe dealers, was filled with smoke as was the grocery store of the William Segar company. On the second floor the office of Dr. R. C. Dove and the offices of Chiropractor A. Howard Gold were also filled with smoke.

Extensive damage was lessened by the mill construction of the business block. The damage by smoke and water will amount to several hundred dollars. The recall was sounded about 1 o'clock.

CONDITION OF MILLER HUGGINS GROWS WORSE DESPITE BLOOD TRANSFUSION

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—(AP)—Miller Huggins' condition took another turn for the worse late tonight and death apparently was near for the little pilot of the New York Yankees.

Huggins failed to rally after a third blood transfusion today and subsequently a spread in the infection that laid him low was noted by Dr. Edward H. King. Still later bulletins from St. Vincent's hospital said that "the patient's temperature had arisen to 104.8 degrees and that Huggins seemed to be much weaker. The Yankee chieftain had been in a comatose or semi-comatose condition throughout the day.

Huggins was taken to St. Vincent's hospital last Friday when his condition first became serious following an illness of several weeks. His condition was aggravated by the pilot's refusal to quit his team until the race between the Yankees and Cleveland for second place had been decided. After consultations with specialists, Dr. King decided that transfusions were necessary and the first was performed Sunday.

Word of the gravity of Huggins' condition brought a flood of tokens of sympathy to the hospital and Yankee headquarters today. Members of the team, now playing in Boston, sent flowers and telegrams to the hospital and officials of the ball club kept in constant touch with Dr. King. Myrtle and Arthur Huggins, sister and brother of the manager, were constantly at his bedside.

Little change was noted in the Yankee pilot's condition in a bulletin issued by Dr. King at 10:25 p. m.

"He is resting as well as a man can in a semi-comatose condition," the bulletin said. "His temperature is 104 degrees."

Myrtle Huggins, sister of the stricken baseball leader kept her vigil at the hospital all night.

KOZELUH REACHES THIRD ROUND IN PRO TENNIS

FOREST HILL, N. Y., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Karl Kozeluh, that amazing little tennis magician from Czechoslovakia, clowned his way into the third round of the National Professional Tennis championship tournament at the West Side stadium today. A gallery of less than 200 watched the play. With uncanny control over ball and racquet the European expert who has coached the Davis cup teams of several nations downed Hans Hummel of Germany by scores of 6-1, 6-0, 6-0, in a second round match. The invader now has lost but a single game in two three-sets contests.

Having drawn byes in the first round, Kozeluh's principal American rivals for the title—Vincent Richards, the present champion, Wallace Johnson of Philadelphia, and Howard Kinsey of San Francisco—reached the quarter-final bracket, a step ahead of the rest of the field. All three won in straight sets but not with quite the impressive ease that marked the advance of Kozeluh.

Richards, who scored one of his rare victories over the Czechoslovakian, in the final of last year's tournament, trimmed Joseph A. Farrell of Garden City, N. Y., 6-1, 6-1, 6-1. Johnson, tennis coach at the University of Pennsylvania and one of the most recent converts to professional ranks, downed George Agutter, the veteran English pro of the West Side Tennis club here, 6-2, 6-2, 6-3.

It remained for Kinsey, who, like Richards and Johnson, once ranked well up among America's first ten amateurs, to go the others one better by winning two singles matches, after subduing William G. Standing of Locust Valley, N. Y., 6-1, 6-2, 7-5. The inventor of famous "look drive" toppled Walter S. Gray of Seabright, N. J., 6-1, 6-1, 8-3, to join Richards and Johnson in the quarter-finals.

SHARKEY WILL WEIGH CLOSE TO 200 POUNDS

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Now that Phil Scott, Britain's fighting fireman, has disposed for the time being of Victorio Campolo, the large Argentine, the fistic field is cleared for the belligerent gestures of a pair of homebreds, Tommy Loughran and Jack Sharkey, in the Yankee stadium Thursday night.

Under the patronage of Madison Square Garden, the former light-heavyweight champion and Boston's talkative tar meet in a 15-round match, the winner of which is certain of a feature role in the second annual heavyweight spectacle on the Florida sands.

At Harvey's Lake, Pa., Loughran already has hung up his training gloves after boosting his poundage to 185, the highest of his long career. Tommy has sought to retain all his speed and boxing prowess while developing punching power.

Due to the chilly weather, Sharkey gave up the task of pulling his weight down to 192 pounds and expects to come into the ring several notches above that figure. He seems to have grown larger about the arms and shoulders since his match with Young Stribling last winter.

The match, final heavyweight fling of the outdoor season and the second major show of the week, is expected to draw a gate approaching $200,000, with the crowd totalling about 20,000.

TIGERS COLLECT 13 HITS IN TROUNCING BROWNS

DETROIT, Sept. 24.—(AP)—The Tigers landed on Alvin Crowder for 13 hits, totaling 20 bases, to defeat the St. Louis Browns, 9 to 4 here today.

Art Herring, rookie pitcher from Oklahoma City, allowed the Browns seven hits, only one of which went for an extra base. The St. Louis scoring resulted from his wildness, nine walks causing most of his trouble.

Bill Akers, recruit Tiger shortstop, continued his brilliant work in the field and at bat. He got a double and home run in three times up. Charlie Gehringer collected two triples and a home run, and Herring hit a triple and double.

COBB WILL SEE SERIES FROM SEAT IN PRESS BOX

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Tyrus Raymond Cobb will be only a reporter at the World's series of 1929, but from his press box seat he may see his baseball spirit marching on.

A roundabout compliment was paid the Georgia Peach when Cub pitchers were given their riding orders in two words: "Stop Simmons."

Al Simmons, the number one hitter of the Athletics and of the American league as well, is a right-handed Ty Cobb. There is no physical resemblance between the great batsman of yesterday and his current successor, and their batting styles are vastly dissimilar, but in many ways the Simmons of today reminds spectators of the Cobb of yesterday.

Simmons and Cobb were "roomies" with the Athletics and the young man sat at the feet of a baseball Gamaliel as words of wisdom dropped. Baseball is one game where imitation is worth while.

Al now has practically all the famous mannerisms of Ty. He swings the three bats as did the greatest of them all, has that tense alert position in the batter's box and more important to the house of Mack, gets base hits as did his mentor. Not quite so many, perhaps, but for even greater distance.

When Simmons came to the majors he was tagged as a player who "puts his foot in the water bucket." Meaning that he stepped away from the plate. However, there was a catch in it. Simmons' batting style was unorthodox but he stepped into the ball.

Some close observers have suggested that the Cubs' fast ball pitchers will annoy the great Simmons no end. Al, himself, was asked for an opinion.

"Yeah?" he replied, "Well, maybe not. There are some fast ball pitchers in our league, too. Sometimes you can hit the best of 'em and sometimes you can't hit any of 'em. One thing I know, I'll be up there swinging."

CHICAGO FLOODED WITH FAKE SERIES TICKETS

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Counterfeit tickets for world series games to be played at Wrigley field, home of the Cubs, were reported selling at scalpers' prices in Chicago today.

President William Veeck of the Cubs had his attention called to a pair of the spurious ducats and immediately warned against purchasing any tickets except through regular channels.

"No official world series tickets will be sold until October 1 or 2," Veeck said. "Anyone possessing so-called tickets now should turn them over to us and inform us as to the seller. The official tickets now are being printed."

Veeck said drastic action would be taken against any persons selling fake pasteboards.

He also announced all box seats for games at Wrigley field have been sold and virtually all reserved grandstand seats have been filled. However, there will be standing room for about 9,000 persons, tickets for which will be placed on sale at the park at daybreak, October 8, the day of the first game. Those who buy bleacher tickets must go into the park immediately and police will be stationed at the ticket offices to see that nobody buys a bleacher ticket and then strolls down the street and attempts to sell it.

INDIANS BUNCH HITS TO TRIM WHITE SOX, 7 TO 4

CLEVELAND, Sept. 24.—(AP)—The Indians bunched hits off Ted Lyons in several innings today to win 7 to 4 in the series' opener with the Chicago White Sox. Hudlin also was hit hard in the late rounds but tightened in the pinches.

Dick Porter collected four hits off the White Sox hurlers and was robbed of a fifth by Shortstop Johnny Kerr.

Well, I saw a champion crowned the other night.

Not much thrill to it at that. It was simply just another boxing match. In fact, I was disappointed in the whole show.

The only highlight of the entire card was provided by a Norwich boy, Johnny Kop. Johnny looked more like a champion than anyone that stepped into the ring that evening, except Mayor Batterson.

That Routis-Battalino shindig was far from what I expected in a championship bout. Too much mauling and hauling and too much referee when Routis was scoring heavily in the infighting.

Routis was given one of the breaks in the battling at close range and as soon as he started to get in close to work on Battalino's body the referee was very prompt in breaking the boys apart.

Had Routis been permitted to fight longer at close quarters he might not have been outpointed by such an overwhelming margin as 75 to 53. Referee Conway's official score.

At long range Battalino was decidedly the better man and scored more frequently. And as for gameness nobody can deny that Battalino wasn't game, fighting eight rounds with a broken hand.

Well anyway Connecticut has another world's champion which should please the fight fraternity of the Nutmeg state. And it was a pleasure to see a Connecticut referee in the ring. Remember, the Kaplan-Herman championship bout?

And now it remains to be seen how long Battalino will hold the title. A boy with two brittle hands is going to have a time against some of the featherweight challengers.

We hope Battalino goes gray with the title but judging from his showing the other night we have our honest doubts. Both Routis and Battalino failed to impress as champions.

Little Johnny Kop really stole the show up there Monday night and certainly showed the big town boys something worth seeing. It cost Mayor Walt Batterson a five spot to pick Zotters to beat Kop.

If this boy Kop keeps on the way he has started and keeps both feet on the ground he will go a long way. But just as soon as he gets over-confident and careless somebody will set him back. We've seen that happen before.

And now comes the Loughran-Sharkey bout tomorrow night. Loughran to outpoint Sharkey, is our bet.

"UNCLE SAM" HILDRETH, 68, FAMOUS TRAINER OF RACE HORSES, IS DEAD

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Samuel Clay Hildreth—"Uncle Sam" to the turf world—is dead, and with the passing of the 68-year old trainer of Harry F. Sinclair's Rancocas stable, thoroughbred racing lost its second famous conditioner of horses within a month.

Hildreth's death, which came today at the Fifth Avenue hospital following a delicate abdominal operation yesterday, came close on that of James Rowe, Sr., of Harry Payne Whitney's stable at Saratoga Springs last month. Hildreth and Rowe ranked as America's greatest trainers of race horses for years.

Funeral services for Hildreth will be held at St. Patrick's cathedral Thursday morning. Burial will be at Saratoga Springs, where the veteran trainer purchased a magnificent estate several years ago. His other residence was near Jostown, N. J., on his Stromboli farm, which got its name from the famous horse by that name which once sported the Hildreth colors.

Sam Hildreth was a unique character on the turf. At five years of age he owned and trained a horse and never once during the remainder of his life was he separated from the "sport of kings." Unlike Rowe, Hildreth was a gambler. He often bet a small fortune on a horse, going broke no less than a half-dozen times. Yet each time he battled back again to accumulate another fortune until a few years ago he gave up wagering large sums. He died a wealthy man. His salary and commissions from the Rancocas stable was often placed as high as $100,000 a year.

Famed for this phenomenal success during the last decade, during which he won over $1,000,000 from 1920 to 1923 for Harry F. Sinclair, Hildreth also was known for his success as a trainer of jockeys. It was under his tutelage that Earl Sande and Laverne Fator became known as America's ranking riders.

Hildreth brought Sinclair into racing and finally into ownership of the Rancocas farm once owned by Pierre Lorillard. The farm is now one of the largest breeding plants in the world with more than 100 brood mares, an enclosed training track and never less than 1,000 acres in grass for the horses to graze upon.

Following years of success with E. E. Smathers, W. C. Whitney and August Belmont, Hildreth took over the Rancocas string of runners in 1920. For three years in succession—1909-10 and 11—he owned his stable and each year topped the list of winning owners.

Managements of the major tracks operating announced that all flags would be at half-mast Thursday in tribute to the dead horseman. Trainer J. Lowe in charge of the Rancocas horses racing at Havre de Grace received instructions to scratch all Sinclair horses entered in any race until after the burial.

ZACHARY'S RECORD STILL UNBLEMISHED, BEATS SOX

BOSTON, Sept. 24.—(AP)— Old Tom Zachary pitched the Yankees to a 5 to 3 victory over the Red Sox here this afternoon. It was Boston's annual Babe Ruth day and ex-Mayor James M. Curley presented the Bam with a loving cup. Babe tried to respond with a homer, but his best was a terrific double against the fence in left. He also singled, was hit and walked. The Boston customers, 8,500 of whom turned out, yeiled loudly for him to hit a homer in the ninth and even exhorted Pat Simmons to "let him hit one!"

Zachary added his twelfth victory to a record which yet shows no defeats.

FREDERICK SETS RECORD FOR DOUBLES IN PHILS WIN

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24.—(AP) — The Phillies won a wild hitting game from Brooklyn here today by 8 to 6. Brooklyn rallied to forge ahead with four runs in the eighth but the Shottenmen came back to win out by scoring five times against Johnny Morrison in the home half.

Babe Herman cut down Lefty O'Doul's lead for the National league batting crown by getting two out of five as the Phillies veteran got just one in four.

Johnny Frederick set a new modern National league record for doubles by hitting his 51st in the fourth inning. The former mark was 50 made by Paul Waner last season.

The Phillies used five pitchers. Phil Collins who threw to only one batter in the 8th inning was the official winner.

COAST GUARD PLAYERS IN SCRIMMAGE AT CALKINS FIELD

Lieut. Irving E. Baker, coach of the Coast Guard football team, gave his squad their first scrimmage on a New London field Tuesday afternoon. The squad was taken over to Calkins field late in the afternoon and given a very severe workout. The Coast Guard coach has three good offense teams and they looked very good during the scrimmage. The Coast Guard's first team as designated by Lieut. Baker yesterday, will be the heaviest team the Coast Guard service has ever put on the field, averaging well over 185 pounds.

They will leave New London for Buffalo Friday morning, where they are scheduled to play Canisius college at that city Sunday.

MARTIN'S ARRANGE SERIES WITH NEW LONDON TEAM

A large crowd should be on hand Sunday when the J. B. Martin club and the Socony nine of New London will battle to see who shall garry the title of New London county champions for the season of 1929.

The Oilmen base their claim by defeating the Smoke Shop nine of Norwich in two consecutive meets and on Sunday the dispute will begin to get into full swing when these two clubs start their first game of the series. The Socony club has played some of the best clubs in the state and has shown the Whaling City that it still has the baseball fight that it had in previous years.

The Oilmen have the honor of being the only nine last season to give the locals real opposition and will come here on Sunday with plenty of strength. Manager Foote has three good twirlers to pick from, namely, Taylor, Chappell and Daniels. The latter in the past month has been twirling remarkable ball, and no doubt will be Manager Foote's choice to start against the Velvetmen.

Manager Erlbeck of the Velvetmen is sitting tight in regards to who will represent the J. B. Martin nine on Sunday and claims that no matter who will represent the Whaling City nine the first game will be sewed up in a velvet bag and the Oilmen will see their title as New London county champs slipping fast.

ACADEMY SQUAD HOLDS PRACTICE SESSION TUESDAY

In preparation for the opening game of the season Saturday afternoon at the campus with Chapman Tech, the Academy football squad was put through another stiff practice session Tuesday afternoon. Ideal weather favored the athletes and allowed Coach Courtland C. Whitney to bring his charges just a little closer to top form for Saturday's stiff tussle.

As yet no starting lineup has been announced for Saturday. The local mentor is searching for a kicker and Les Crowell has been getting much work in punting. Capt. Chet Berghinzo has been showing his old-time form at end while Gordon Cruickshank at center, Hertz at tackle and the diminutive Sherry in the backfield, only lettermen on the squad, promise to perform in their most brilliant style during the 1929 campaign. The fight for positions is still a hot one and out of his squad of 35 willing workers, Whitney expects to mold a team that will have a lot to say in the eastern Connecticut-western Rhode Island conference race.

Chapman Tech, which has about two weeks additional training on the Academy and almost a solid list of veterans to boot, is drilling hard for Saturday's game, the opener of the season for both elevens. A stiff scrimmage was held Monday. From present indications Captain Cupello and Gregory will do the place and drop-kicking for Tech this season. On Monday, Head Coach Jack Conway spent much time in polishing up the aerial game, which may be one of Tech's chief weapons this year. The general feeling around New London is that its eleven is in for one of the best seasons in some time.

WESTERLY

BROWN AND TAYLOR CASES CONTINUED TO FRIDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I. Sept. 24—Charged with the theft of automobile tires, Clarence Brown, 26, of North Stonington and Alexander Taylor, 22, of High street, Westerly, were before Judge Oliver H. Williams, at 11 a. m. Tuesday, in a special session of the Third District court.

Brown was charged on Sept. 21st with stealing and carrying away a tire, the property of Salvator DeFrancisca, of the value of $5.00. He pleaded guilty. At the request of Chief Brown his case was held for further investigation and will be called at the regular Third District court session Friday, Sept. 27th.

Taylor was charged on Sept. 25th with the theft from parties unnamed of three tires to the value of $10 each. He pleaded not guilty and his case was continued to Friday, Sept. 27th. He informed the court that he had retained Attorney Clarence E. Roche to defend him. His mother, Mrs. Esther Elizabeth Taylor, became surety for his court appearance in the sum of $500. The arraignment of the two young men resulted from the discovery of a number of spare tires in North Stonington and Voluntown by officers of the Groton and Danielson barracks of the Connecticut state police and Westerly police officers. Westerly Police Commissioner Rogers E. Trainer was present in court, with Westerly Police Officers Robert M. Kessell and Charles E. Button. At the Westerly police station are some dozen or fifteen tires, mostly spares mounted on rims, many of which have already been identified by owners who have reported them as stolen from their parked cars.

In Hard Luck—Judge Lenient

Frederick E. Bliven of Bowling Lane, Bradford, was charged with being drunk and reveling, at the Westerly station of the New Haven railroad about 9 o'clock Tuesday morning. He pleaded guilty and later admitted that he had served six months at the Soconnosset School for Boys, Cranston, for the theft of an auto. He told the court that he was out of work and had sought employment in mills in Voluntown, Bethel, Norwich, New London, and at the last named place had worked for a short time for an iceman. He was given a deferred sentence by Judge Williams and told to report to him at least once a week.

Living Away From Parents

James Dodd, 18, of Wickford, where his parents reside, but now living with his uncle, Joseph Holland, in Bowling Lane, Bradford, was before the court charged with intoxication at the Westerly railroad station. He was given a deferred sentence until Judge Williams could look up his parents, who, the young man said, he did not want in court.

Accidental Fire Alarm

At about 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon whistle fire alarm signal No. 7, the printing press works of the C. B. Cottrell and Sons Co., was sounded from the Liberty street station of Pawcatuck Fire district. The motor fire truck of Pawcatuck Fire Co. No. 1, was soon on its way to the Cottrell plant where it was found that there was no fire. In some unaccountable manner the alarm signal box at the press works was struck and two rounds of alarm were blown from the whistle. An attempt was made to reach the fire station to inform the members of the department that the alarm was a false one. It was found that the telephone line was busy and the needless trip was started before the firemen could be stopped.

BEARS SWEPT THE BULL PARTY OFF ITS FEET IN CLOSING HOUR OF TRADING

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Aided by a series of unsettling news developments, bears launched an attack in the last hour of trading in today's stock market which completely swept the bull party off its feet and broke the market wide open.

Operations for the advance had been revived in a wide assortment of leading industrials and rails earlier in the session on the theory the intermittent decline of the past three weeks had reached bottom, but earlier gains were for the most part more than cancelled and scores of issues closed 5 to more than 20 points lower. Trading was only moderately active, however, 4,408,930 shares changing hands.

Although call money renewed at 8 per cent, and held at that figure all day, as compared to yesterday's closing rate of 10, time money was quoted as high at 9 1-4 per cent, with a strong demand for funds at that figure to carry over the year end. This was regarded as a better barometer of the credit situation, and as auguring tight money for the rest of the year. Time money has not been quoted as high as 9 1-4 per cent since last May.

Also, reports that London had lost $14,000,000 in gold in the past two days, made the increase in the Bank of England's discount rate seem more inevitable than ever, although it is understood the move will be postponed as long as possible to give the public psychological preparation for it. If the rate is not increased this Thursday, Wall street feels that it almost certainly will be next week. Its probable effect upon the New York money market is variously predicted, but it is generally granted that it would tend to draw funds to this center, which, with the present tight money conditions, may have a marked effect.

Reports that steel production had fallen off to around 32 per cent of capacity, as compared to 86 per cent two week ago and 85 per cent a year ago, were also disturbing to market sentiment, although this was not unexpected, and the steel trade does not look for any fall upturn until October, in view of the extraordinarily active summer. The statement of Arthur Legge, former head of the International Harvester Co., before the senate committee on agriculture, that International stock, of which he is a large holder, is selling too high, was another unsettling influence.

Other items in the days news were the cutting of a $30,000,000 melon by North American, and another assortment of August railway earnings reports, which were generally favorable, although Union Pacific showed a moderate decline. The announcement that President Hoover would recommend a substantial reduction in taxes at the regular session of congress steadied the market for a short time around mid-day, but apparently was soon forgotten.

Another break in U. S. Steel, after yesterday's sharp rally, was particularly disappointing. After selling up nearly 6 points in the morning to 241 3-4, it dropped to 231, off 6 points net, and closed at 231 3-4. Independent steels were generally heavy, Youngstown Sheet reaching a new 1929 low at 131.

The motors were conspicuously weak, with uncertainty as to fall sales prospects an important factor. General Motors dropped about 3 points to 79, which is less than 4 points from its low for the year, while Studebaker, Marmon, Nash, Graham Paige and Willys-Overland sagged moderately to new 1929 minimum levels. Auburn dropped 15 points.

High priced stocks fluctuated widely, Adams Express jumping 29 points to 649 on rumors of an impending splitup, while Case Threshing dropped 39 points to 385, Commercial Solvents and Detroit Edison about 20 points. Air stocks were heavy on rumors of over-production. The old Curtiss stock, of which the floating supply is small, tumbled 29 points to 136, and Curtiss Wright sagged to a new low below 20.

In the utilities, American and Foreign Power converted an early gain of about 5 points into a loss of 6 and American Telephone, after selling up about 6, closed 4 lower. Columbia Gas and Electric jumped about 7 points to a new peak, then lost most of its gain. Pacific Lighting mounted 8 points to a new top, and lost half its gain. Consolidated Gas tumbled 8 points, and closed off 5.

Radio was again heavy, reaching a new low for the movement at 86, off about 4 points, and such shares as American Can, Atchison, International Harvester, Montgomery Ward, Chesapeake and Ohio, New York Central, and Westinghouse Electric lost from about 2 to 5 points.

Among the few strong points was Simmons, which jumped 10 points to a new peak and closed 3 points higher. Eastman Kodak sold up 9 points on expectations of better market action on the maturity of the rights this week, but lost almost all of its gain. Beatrice Creamery, Murray Corp., Walworth and Myers & Bro. reached new peaks and closed firm.

In the commodity markets, grains were again under pressure. Wheat lost nearly two cents a bushel on weakness at Winnipeg, and corn lost about a cent. An advance in cotton was mostly lost in profit taking before the close. Raw sugar was firmer with prices advancing 1-32 of a cent in the spot market.

Foreign exchanges were a little firmer, save for the Canadian dollar which tumbled to a new low for the last couple of years below 99 cents. Sterling cables moved a shade higher to $4.84 7-8.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Bond prices showed few important changes in dull trading today, although the trend of the market was on the side of easiness. Another advance in the time money rate, which was quoted at 9 to 9 1-4 per cent for all maturities against the recent charge of 9 was an unfavorable influence on sentiment toward credit conditions and dealings in fixed charge securities were small.

The increase in the money rate brought the highest figure in four months. Late in May time accommodation charges went to the extreme of 9 1-2 per cent, but soon thereafter a decline set in which carried the quotation down to 7 1-2, the prevailing rate about the middle of July. Since that time, however, the rate has been gradually increasing, and last week went to 9 per cent after holding between 8 3-4 and 9 for a month. The bond market can hardly be expected to show improvement until time money eases.

Convertibles dipped sharply in the last hour today in sympathy with the slump in stocks. American Telephone 4 1-2s, which in the forenoon sold as high as 223 1-2, broke to 212 3-4, their closing price, or 3 1-4 below the previous final. This was the only stock feature debenture showing any volume. American International 5 1-2s, Atchison 4 1-2s, International Telephone 4 1-2s, and Commercial Investment Trust 5 1-2s lost 1 to 2 1-2 points, while Public Service of New Jersey 4 1-2s sagged 3-4 on the transfer of a few bonds. Reading Coal & Iron 6s held in higher ground most of the day, but the late weakness erased their gain.

There was little of interest in the rail, utility and industrial groups. Baltimore & Ohio first 5s equalled their year's low at 101, while the Road's Gold 4s broke a point. New York Central 4s and 3 1-2s were also at about their low levels, but the low coupon Northern Pacific issues strengthened. Columbia Gas & Electric 5s yielded fractionally. Two amusement company bonds, the Loew's Inc. 6s with warrants and the Shubert Theatre 6s improved 1 1-2 and 3 points, respectively. Pennsylvania Dixie Cement 6s were at their low of 72.

Foreign obligations lagged all day. Argentina government bonds firmed slightly, but Chilean issues and the Colombian Agricultural Bank securities sold off. German Central Bank for agriculture bonds also sagged.

Securities of the United States were stagnant. There was some activity in Liberty Fourth 4 1-4s at lower levels. Turnovers elsewhere in the group were small and prices irregularly easier.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Notwithstanding Canadian reports of blizzard conditions that appeared likely to interfere with threshing, wheat today dropped to a new low-price record for the season. World's available supplies of wheat showed 21,531,000 bu., increase for the week. Furthermore, Buenos Aires sent word of good rains that would greatly improve the crop prospect for wheat in Argentina.

Closing quotations on wheat were shaky, 1 1-4c to 1 7-8c a bushel below yesterday's finish. Corn closed 3-8c to 1 3-4c down, oats unchanged to 3-8c off, and provisions varying from 10c decline to an equal advance.

Lowest prices of the day in the wheat pit here were reached during the late transactions. The final skinking-spell came after a rally based on advices that two feet of snow had fallen in the Peace river district of Alberta province, Canada, and that the blizzard was still on. Heavy selling to realize profits developed after the price bulge, however, and the consequent downward swing of the market was given much additional impetus by Winnipeg dispatches saying 50 per cent of Canada's suplus from this year's crop had already been removed from the farms, and that the bulk of Canadian wheat would be delivered within fifteen days.

Contributing to weakness which throughout most of the day was evident in the wheat market here was word of soaking rains in drought regions of Argentina, together with news of more or less moisture relief from spring wheat districts in the American and Canadian northwest where long-continued sobamsoil dryness has been a menace.

Big arrivals of wheat at Liverpool, and predictions of large deliveries on Liverpool October contracts, were also a depressing factor. Export buying of North American wheat today totaled a little more than of late, 500,000 bu., including some hard winter wheat from the United States, but it was pointed out as significant that numerous vessels are regularly leaving Montreal in ballast, and taking no wheat.

Corn gave way with wheat. Favorable weather prevailing over the corn belt tended also to send corn values down, despite rather pessimistic field reports from various Indiana and Illinois points. Oats displayed relative firmness, receipts of oats being scanty.

Near-by deliveries of lard reached a new low-price record for the season. Tired holders of lard were sellers, influenced by downturns in the value of hogs.

NOBODY BUYS JUST "A CAR" or JUST "A RADIO"

WHY BUY JUST "COAL"

Discriminating and prudent buyers in practically every field ask for a make, or call for a brand.

It is a simple and easy way of specifying the kind and quality that you want.

Through the force of long established habit, people still order "coal." It is just as easy to order "Old Company's Lehigh Anthracite."

And the latter way brings you the superior coal known as "The Best Since 1820." A coal that actually gives you more heat per dollar than does any other household fuel that you can buy.

Moreover, the purity, density and uniformly high quality of Old Company's Lehigh Anthracite makes a fire of this coal exceptionally easy to control. Old Company's Lehigh Anthracite holds fire for extended periods under reduced draft, and responds quickly when the draft is increased.

Nothing Newer than Today's Hudson

The greatness of Hudson value is expressed with unparalleled power in the way its NEWNESS stands out among the Newest and Latest models the industry offers.

Here we find feature after feature of Hudson's origination, now offered in the new models of the more expensive cars.

Here we find, featured as new, such advantages as radiator shutters—first introduced and for years standard with Hudson.

Here we find Hudson type brakes, Hudson type shock absorbers. Counterbalanced crankshafts are much to the fore, which seek to approximate the efficiency and smoothness of the Super-Six principle.

Nothing has been produced to touch its value and price advantage. It is still the master car in performance and reliability.

And Hudson still is alone in offering the almost individual distinction of such wide color choices, at no extra cost. See and examine the new offerings of other makers by all means. Then come, compare and drive the Greater Hudson. You, too, must feel the spontaneous enthusiasm that has rolled up a landslide approval for its beauty, quality and value—expressed in sales that for the first seven months of 1929 exceed the total of the entire year preceding.

$1095 and up at factory

Your present car will probably cover the entire first payment. The H. M. C. Purchase Plan offers the lowest terms available on the balance.

Backed Into Automobile

An automobile truck driven by Leon H. Solomon, 11 Home street, backed against an automobile driven by Oscar Keis, of the Hotel Griswold, Eastern Point, on Thames street, Groton, near the approach of the Thames river highway bridge this forenoon. A truck rack on Keis' auto was damaged. Solomon agreeing to pay for the loss sustained by Keis, was not arrested by Capt. Andrew McCarthy, of Groton police, who investigated the accident.

Frances Cunneen, 53 Raymond street; Mrs. Louis Beckenstein and infant son, 20 Peninsula avenue, Ocean beach, and Anna Triona, 637 Bank street, patients at Home Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Policewoman Jane H. Cassidy, formerly of Norwich, is having her annual vacation of two weeks.

The police rounded up another gang of drunks this afternoon and tonight and they will be in court tomorrow. One of those arrested is an old offender, Catherupo Bruno, familiarly known as "Charlie O'Brien," who besides being charged with intoxication will have an additional charge of breach of the peace to defend. He was arrested by Patrolman Louis Fine on North Bank street.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the return of the driver's license of Edward L. Jones, submarine base. The license was suspended several weeks ago.

Howard Easlick was arrested this afternoon charged with driving without a license or registration. He is stationed at the submarine base and will be in court tomorrow.

RALPH CHINN GETS BONDS— BLAMES JEALOUS WOMAN

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 24.— Ralph Chinn, colored, of 7 Edwards street, Newport, R. I., who was arrested last night by Sergeant John Courtney and Automobile Patrol Officer George Cockell at the request of the state police charged with taking an automobile without permission of the owner, was not in court today, for the charge is being further investigated. This evening Chinn obtained a surety on his bond of $1000 and will be given a hearing tomorrow. It appears from Chinn's story that he has too many lady acquaintances. He is a piano player in an orchestra and drove to New London last night in a Hudson sedan, accompanied by two dusky females. Before Chinn arrived here, however, the state police received a message from one of Chinn's female friends in Newport requesting his arrest, for the woman declared that the car he was driving was her property. When arrested, Chinn displayed his registration showing that he was the owner of the auto. The Newport woman, however, claims to have given Chinn the money to make the initial payment on the car and that instead of registering in her name he did so in his own name. Chinn declared that it was because he brought the two women to New London that he was arrested, for he said, that the Newport woman was insanely jealous.

LAUNCHING TODAY AT 1:30— FERRYBOAT WARD'S ISLAND

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 24.—The first of the two ferryboats to be built at the yard of the Electric Boat company, Groton, for the city of New York, will be launched tomorrow afternoon at 1:30. The boat is named Ward's Island, and the launching will be witnessed by New York city officials.

A taxicab owned by Charles Parmalee, caught fire last night on Bank street. A still alarm was sent to fire headquarters and Deputy Chief Calvin Edmunds and Niagara Engine company responded. The fire was extinguished with chemicals and without damage of consequence.

Licenses Suspended

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the suspension of the drivers' licenses of Walter Tucker, 492 Vauxhall street, and Charles H. Royer, submarine base. Tucker was driving his car on Bank street three weeks ago and near Pearl street it struck and fatally injured Mrs. Isabelle Douglass, a resident of Mountain avenue, as the woman attempted to cross the street.

Patrolman Patrick Sheehan is confined to his home, 99 Crystal avenue, because of illness.

SAILORS HAVE HARD LUCK AFTER MAKING A CALL

The police received a report at 1 o'clock this morning that glass in the door of an automobile parked on Huntington street a long time had been smashed and that the breaking of the glass aroused neighbors from their slumber. Automobile Officer Harry Watterson discovered that the automobile, which was in charge of two sailors, had been there some time while the bluejackets were at a Huntington street residence. When the sailors attempted to enter the auto they were unsuccessful for the key of the door had been lost. As the door was locked the sailors smashed the glass and when the brake was released the car descended Stony Hill and up on the sidewalk before the driver could get control of it.

MERCHANTS' LIMITED TO CEASE STOPS AFTER SAT.

It became known today that the New Haven railroad's palatial express, the Merchants' Limited, one of the fastest trains on the system, will not stop in New London after Saturday next. The new time table, which will go into effect next Sunday shows that this train will no longer make a stop in this city. The discontinuance marks the first time since the train was inaugurated over 20 years ago that New London was not included in the three stops between New York and Boston. The only stops the train will now make are at New Haven and Providence. The train is one of the fastest on the New Haven system and it is claimed that only during the summer does the patronage from and to New London warrant the train stopping here. The train leaves New London for New York, daily, at 7:17 p. m. and leaves for Boston at 7:44. In order to permit the train to make the run between New Haven and Providence without stopping the engines that haul it are being equipped with the 600-gallon water tank of the same type as that used on the largest type of freight locomotives.

Body Sent to New Haven

BOYS AND A GIRL FOUND IN PARKED CAR AT 1:15 A. M.

Meyer H. Hollandersky, 88 Parkway, upon driving to his home at 1:15 this morning, observed the occupants of an automobile parked beside the curb near his home crouch to the bottom of the car, as though to hide themselves. Mr. Hollandersky informed the police of his observation and Acting Lieut. James Gaffney and Patrolman Dennis Murphy went to Parkway where the auto was observed. In it were found Thomas Glass and Victor Sturge, both 18 and residents of New York, and Virginia Ceruda, 18, of East Providence. The trio said that they had cuddled to the floor of the auto in an endeavor to get warm and sleep. The youths did not have the registration of the auto and, with the girl, were taken to police headquarters, where today it was revealed that the girl had run away from home. She is being detained, as are the youths, for the purpose of determining whether relatives of the trio will come here and take charge of them. The car is also being held until it has been learned whether it has been stolen.

Mrs. Philopena, 14 Shaw street, reported to the police today that during last night a dog obtained entrance to her chicken coop and killed 14 of a flock of hens and chickens. The complaint was turned over to Dog Warden P. Frank Martin.

HELD IN BRIG AT BASE UNTIL COURT TIME TODAY

William Elliott, submarine base, apparently does not realize when he is treated with more than ordinary fairness and leniency, especially when under arrest. Today, following his apprehension last night and when he was about to be given his liberty, Elliott escaped from police headquarters, only to be rearrested. He will be in court tomorrow. Elliott was arrested early this morning by Patrolman George McCaskey charged by Dewey Connors with evading payment of a taxicab bill. Elliott had hired the cab an hour before and upon the conclusion of the ride refused to pay. Connors made complaint against the sailor and the latter was arrested. After being locked up for the remainder of the night, Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer today decided to allow Elliott to return to the base, upon the latter paying the cost of his ride the night before. While the prosecutor was making this arrangement and while Elliott was seated in the squad room, the sailor went to a window leading to the garage roof and, opening it, left police headquarters and jumped to Potter street where he made his escape, returning to the base. An officer was sent to the base and Elliott was rearrested. He was returned to police headquarters and booked, after which he was returned to the base under guard and is being held in the brig until his case comes up in court tomorrow.

AUTO TRUCK TAKEN FROM THE RIVER BY LIGHTER

The auto truck driven by Harold N. Beebe, employed by the Chevrolet Sales station, Bank street, which crashed through the fence of the Thames river highway bridge at Groton, late last night, and with F. J. Rush and John Kelley, submarine base sailors as passengers, landed in the river 60 feet below, was taken from the river this afternoon by a lighter. Beebe will be given a hearing in the Groton town court Monday next, charged with driving while under the influence of liquor, driving without license and taking a car without permission of the owner. Rush and Kelley will be tried on a charge of intoxication. Beebe was the only occupant of the truck to sustain injury. He received a laceration on the nose and back of the head. The three men were arrested by State Police Officers James Dygert and C. F. Hill.

Fire Loss May Be $2,000

The damage by fire late last night to the shoe store of Louis DiBelin, 671 Bank street, is greater than estimated, for it is now claimed that the damage to store and stock will be at least $2,000. The store is owned by Isaac Hirsch. How the fire originated is not known. Fire Marshal Calvin Edmunds is making an investigation.

Traud, assisted by Cantor Delatizky. Sol Butkofsky, Hartford, brother of the groom, was best man and Mrs. Simon Balkansky attended the bride.

Miss Lorne Little, daughter of Mrs. Grace M. Little, 4 Pacific street, has gone to Brooklyn, N. Y., where she will pursue a course of studies at the School of Fine Arts, Pratt institute.

George Larsen, formerly of New London, now employed in Boston, is spending a few days in this city.

How a Family Doctor made Millions of Friends

FIFTEEN years after his graduation, Dr. Caldwell became one of the best-known members of his profession. A single prescription made him famous. And for forty years it has continued to make friends.

As fast as people could tell others about the marvelous way this prescription corrects constipation and relieves other troubles caused by sluggish bowels, demand for it spread until Dr. Caldwell was forced to have it filled in quantities; bottled and distributed through drug stores.

Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is the world's most popular laxative. Millions of people would never think of using anything else when they're headachy, bilious, feverish, or weak; when breath is bad, tongue is coated or they are suffering from nausea, from gas, or lack of appetite, etc.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin as you buy it from your drug store is made in accordance with the original formula from only herbs and other pure ingredients. It is pleasant tasting; its action is thorough in the most obstinate cases; gently effective for women and children. Above all, it represents a doctor's choice of what is safe for the bowels.

Broadway Theatre

Speed-speed-more speed is the slogan on the Indianapolis auto track — the fastest in the world—where records and bones are broken almost daily—and the annual opens of the greatest speed classic in the world. And that track is the background for William Haines' latest sound picture, "Speedway," which opens at the Broadway tomorrow. Haines is his usual fresh, arrogant, "lippy" self, and his development into a self-reliant man, making the greatest sacrifice possible for an ideal, forms the theme of the story. Actually filmed at the fast "Indie" track, the picture not only tells a dramatic story, but at the same time gives the audience all the thrills of the great castle. Ray Keech's sensational win is a feature, and there are several bad spills which were caught by the camera. Haines does not stick to the ground altogether, for some of his best scenes are caught during an exciting and almost fatal airplane ride with Anita Page, when their parachute was called into play and had to effect a double rescue. Ernest Torrence, John Miljan and Karl Dane furnish added color to the all-star cast, which also includes Polly Moran and Eugenie Besserer. The vitaphone specialties are a show in themselves with Hughes & Pam in "The Fall Guy," a comedy smash. Phil Baker, "A Bad Boy From a Good Family," and "The 99th Amendment," which proves to be even more thrilling (?) than the famous 18th. Fox Movietone news in its latest issue is also shown. In preparation for next Sunday's showing is the tremendous Universal million dollar production "Broadway," filmed with dialogue intact from the original sensational stage play, and direct from a $2 run on the New York White Way. Chicago tried unsuccessfully to ban "Alibi" because it "showed up" the city too faithfully—New York tried the same stunt with "Broadway"—and the picture went into a solid years run at top prices. The original New York production will delight Broadway theatre audiences.

Breed Theatre

Richard Barthelmess, who has been a star of the first rank for ten years, will be heard as well as seen for the last time today at the Breed theatre in "Weary River," his new First National starring feature.

In "Weary River" Barthelmess will talk in a dialogue sequence and play the piano. A Vitaphone test of the star's voice proved it of excellent quality for Vitaphone reproduction and much interest is being evinced by Barthelmess fans over the star's talkie debut.

"Weary River" is the tory of a singing convict and contains an abundance of action and sentimental dramatic interest. It was directed by Frank Lloyd from the short story by Courtney Ryley Cooper and introduces Betty Compson as the feminine lead opposite Barthelmess. Others in the cast include William Holden, Louis Natheaux, George Stone, Raymond Turner, Robert O'Connor and numerous others of cinematic note. Ernie Haller was chief cinematographer.

Palace Theatre

Youth—glittering, joyous, flinging itself against the grim and immutable walls that are the laws of life—that is the spectacle thrown on the screen in the great modern drama, "Our Modern Maidens," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sound synchronized feature which opens today at the Palace theatre.

Yet while the dance lasts it is beautiful. Nothing is more glorious to the eye and ear than the spectacle of youth—flaming out to pleasure. This is the setting for "Our Modern Maidens," the setting in which Joan Crawford and a host of others make merry on the Palace screen this week. Seeing their joyous abandon one forgets the inevitable sacrifice that they must whirling, swirling existence intoxicates the brain and sends the blood pay. One becomes young again by watching them: the sight of their leaping as in the springtime of life.

For this popular Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, famous for her dancing both on the stage and in pictures, danced practically every day for five weeks, having spent three weeks training for a specialty number seen in her latest picture.

One of the unique items of the dancing record is that Miss Crawford danced to several different sources of music and on various floor materials. During the picture she stepped it off on pavement, grass, in a private parlor car, and in a regular ballroom, the music being everything from whistling to an eighteen-piece orchestra. She also danced to the rumbling of thunder during an unusual California storm.

Saturday brings to the Palace that wistful queen of Hollywood, Dolores Costello, in one of the greatest pictures of her career, A Vitaphone special, "Hearts In Exile." This is a mad, passionate tale of love in the Siberian wastes.

Major Ralph H. Hutchins of North Stratford, N. H., got a real "birdie" while making a drive from the eighth tee on the Colebrook (N. H.) golf links. He was astonished to see his ball come in contact with a barn swallow which was flying through the air. The swallow ended its life journey when it fell to the fairway.

Work on the Pendleton Hill road of about six miles, mostly in the town of North Stonington, running southerly from Voluntown towards the Westerly highway has reached the point where the first macadam will be laid by the latter part of this week.

When completed this will be a fine state highway from Voluntown towards the southeasterly corner of Connecticut and the part on which work is now underway is the connecting link between the end of the tar road at Voluntown and the tar road at White Park casino on the Pendleton Hill end of the highway. This his been a rough, narrow and winding dirt road of the ordinary country road type, but the improvement which the state is making will fill many of the hollows, cut down the hills, and straighten out the curves so that when the job is finished there will be a macadam highway that will provide comfortable travel for this section.

The work is farthest advanced at the southerly end where the first stretch of macadam will be laid. From there towards Voluntown the work is in all stages and travel is rough. The contract cannot be finished before next spring. The total cost when completed will amount to more than $100,000.

Stone walls are to be built at many points along the highway. It is expected that this work can be continued through the winter months. Considerable blasting had to be done in many ledges. A stone crusher has been erected on the farm of Martin Wyler so that no new stone has to be hauled to the scene of construction. Two steam shovels have opened large gravel banks from which material is being secured for grading.

QTIS LIBRARY CIRCULATION WAS 124,706 BOOKS IN YEAR

The total circulation of the Otis library for the year was 124,706 books and the daily average of issues 408, according to the annual report of the librarian, Mrs. Rosina S. Hamilton. There were 138 new books added by gifts, 46 by state grant and 2,489 by purchase.

In her annual report the librarian says in part:

The report of this year shows the largest circulation in the history of the library. This is particularly gratifying to the members of the staff, as such increase has been accomplished despite many difficulties. Lack of book space has been for some time a serious handicap to our library work. Each year sees a steady increase to our already overcrowded shelves. Valuable old magazines and newspaper files must be relegated to the basement to make room for new ones which are more often called for.

Lack of wall space also prevents the use of bulletin boards, so necessary in acquainting the public with news of interesting books, references to current magazines, displaying posters and notices, etc.

Some interesting changes are planned for the coming year. The charging desk is to be enlarged, and a new set of filing cabinets will be installed.

We have been unusually fortunate this year in receiving gifts of many valuable books. Some fine sets have replaced old and altered ones on the shelves. We have also had a number of family histories given us which are particularly welcome. These books which are necessarily expensive are a heavy drain on our resources when purchased, and are always gratefully received.

Gifts of bound volumes of The Bulletin and Record have been received from the local press.

The annual report made by General William A. Aiken, president of the board of trustees is as follows:

The board of trustees of the Otis library would commend to your attention the reports of the treasurer and librarian. At the beginning of the year, it was our hope that changes effected in our administration and service-methods would enhance the value of the library to Norwich. Two facts make us believe that our hope is on the way to fulfilment; namely, the increase in number of patrons, an increase of 1,150 over last year; and an increase in book circulation, our records showing the year's circulation of books to be the largest in our history. When the town increased its allotment of money to the library, the board of trustees were able to do things which they had hitherto been unable to do. By reorganizing our administration-methods and expense, and on the basis of a 33 1-3 per cent. increase in the town's contribution, we have been able to increase our book purchases by 100 per cent., and to increase our subscription to regular standard periodicals by 33 1-3 per cent. At the present time we are able to spend $4,000 yearly for these two items. Such a sum is altogether too small, to care for the needs of the reading public of Norwich; but because the funds at our disposal limit us to that figure, we are eagerly looking forward to the time when we can concretely do what now is only a hope. Our shelves are crowded with books; the accommodations for children are woefully limited; space at our disposal is entirely used; but with all these physical limitations in the library, the librarian and staff are working diligently to keep our books up-to-date, to serve our patrons to the best of ability, and to make our library the best that our limited funds can afford. The many expressions of appreciation which have come to us, prompted us to welcome the constructive suggestions and the tangible gifts our friends may offer.

BOY SCOUTS PLAN INTENSIVE DEVELOPMENT

According to the local Boy Scout headquarters, the Boy Scouts of America plan a program for intensive development which will result in strengthening the movement in Norwich. Such a program necessitates, at the outset, says President Charles Coit, "a common understanding and acceptance as to just what is involved. The richness of the Scout program, its many ramifications, the variety and extent of its organization, and its numerous organization problems offer a broad field for discussion on many vital matters involved in a program for intensive development.

"Because of these many factors it seems desirable," continued Mr. Coit, "that we attempt to evolve a simple formula which will focus our thought in organizing our resources upon the things most vital and essential for the accomplishment of the aim and purpose of the Boy Scout movement. A clearer vision as to what a program for intensive development should be, would lead us to particularly emphasize the following: First, we must make sure that there is a clear understanding that Scouting is a 'game for boys.' Second, that our only interest in developing, training, and making available, through organization, leadership which capitalizes the boy's desire to be a Scout and makes it possible for him to carry out our program of activities, is that it should result in character building and citizenship training. Third, in the Boy Scout program the essential element is the Scout oath and Scout law, and the ideals of service resulting from the practice of the daily good turn. All Scout activities should be regarded as a means of making these Scout ideals effective.

"Therefore, the thing that we must look for in a program of intensive development is ways and means of making effective these fundamentals which are essential for the realization of our aim and purpose."

A great man is seldom taken at his true value, but lots of others sell out for far more than they are worth.

OLD MYSTIC HOUSE PICTURES FOR COLONIAL DAMES

Photographs of nine very old houses in Old Mystic were taken during the past week by a photographer from Westerly in connection with the history which is being written by Grace E. Wheeler in the interest of the Colonial Dames. The Old Mystic houses are a part of 150 throughout the state which are being photographed and catalogued for reference in the state library at Hartford.

The nine are:

Kenneth Bates' house at 15 Grove avenue in which dwelt the great grandfather of Roscoe K. Burrows and which has the year 1727 inscribed on the fireplace.

H. C. Cornwall's house at 24 Cliff street, known as the old Cliff place.

Mrs. Mary Packer Keeler's house in Water street, built by James Packer in 1777 which contains a duplicate of the old witch door with a cross at the top.

Mrs. Clark's house in Grand street.

Mrs. Julia Foote's house in Mistuxet street, known as the old Stanton house and built in 1777.

Miss Gates' house opposite Broadway school.

The Fish house, next to the post office, built by Asa Fish about 1700.

Dr. A. H. Meyers' house.

The photographer also took a picture of the north side of the Old Mystic Methodist parsonage which was owned by his grandfather several generations back. Last year he took 46 pictures of old houses and thus far this year he has taken about 30, of which 16 are in the town of Stonington.

W. L. ROBINSON DIES IN BOSTON HOSPITAL

William L. Robinson of 11 West street, Mansfield, Mass., a roque enthusiast who played in national tournaments in this city a number of years ago, died Sunday at Haymarket Square Relief hospital in Boston from a shock with which he was stricken Friday afternoon while in Boston on business. He was 73 years old.

In the roque tournaments in this city, Mr. Robinson played in the first division as did his son, Everett, who won the national championship one or two years. The father was elected president of the National Roque association for several years.

Mr. Robinson was for 12 years organist at the Middleboro Congregational church and for several years was organist at Berkeley temple in Boston. He was state representative in 1907 and 1908 and at one time was a selectman at Mansfield. He was a trustee of the library, a member of St. James lodge, A. F. & A. M., and a charter member of Mansfield lodge, I. O. O. F.

His father was representative at Mansfield in 1874 and his son, Everett W. Robinson, who survives him, was state representative in 1923-1924. His wife, who was Miss Mary L. Shaw of Middleboro, also survives.

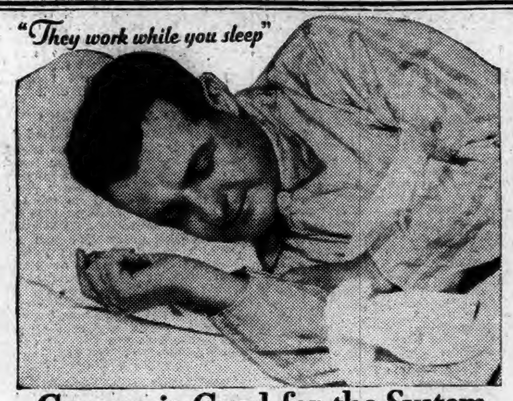
"They work while you sleep"



Cascara is Good for the System

What do you do when a sluggish system tells you the bowels need a little help?

The best thing yet discovered for the purpose is still the little candy Cascaret! Take one whenever the liver and bowels are not functioning as they should.

Cascarets are pleasing to the palate, and pleasant in their action. You eat them just like candy. They work while you sleep. Gentle, but thorough. Cascarets don't stir-up the stomach or upset the system. But they cleanse the entire thirty feet of bowels in one comfortable, thorough action that leaves the system clean and sweet; leaves you with an untainted breath, uncoated tongue, and clear head.

Cascarets are made of cascara—long regarded one of the most beneficial laxatives known to medical science. They are sweetened with pure cane sugar and flavored with real licorice. Children love them. So do most grown-ups! Why take anything harsh when constipation threatens? Whenever a dull headache, lassitude, or sick stomach with loss of appetite warns you of poor elimination, a Cascaret or two is the most harmless form of help you could give a lagging system.

Take a candy Cascaret tonight and see how fine you'll feel in the morning—and for days after.

NORWICH TOWN

M. F. MANNING TO TEACH AT WORCESTER TECH.

Norwich Town friends are pleased to learn of the advancement of Millard Fuller Manning, who left Sunday following a visit at his home. Mr. Manning begins his duties as instructor in physics at Worcester Polytechnic institute today (Wednesday). A graduate of the 1923 class, Norwich Free Academy, Mr. Manning in June, 1929, received his Master's degree from Trinity college, Hartford, having won his Bachelor of Science degree the preceding June, 1928. Due to his scholastic standing at Trinity college, he was enabled to attend Yale Graduate school for one year, 1928 to 1929, on the Mary A. Terry Fellowship. Mr. Manning spent two terms at summer school at Chicago university.

Motoring to Texas

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Gay and little son, Walter Edwin Gay, left by automobile Tuesday morning for their new home at Houston, Texas. For some time the family has resided on Julian terrace, with Mr. Gay's father and brother, respectively, Edwin G. Gay and L. Stanley Gay. For nearly eight years, Maurice Gay was an engineer in the steam department at the Eastern Connecticut Power Co., at Uncasville. He is leaving Norwich to take a position along the same line of business, with a Houston concern. The 2,000-mile journey is by way of New York, to Philadelphia, on to New Orleans and across the line into Texas, and it is expected will take about five days. Mr. Gay and family were to stop en route and call on his aunt, Mrs. James H. Albertson, of New York, formerly of Norwich, reaching Philadelphia by Tuesday night. They were to remain there over night.

Mrs. Gay (Jessie Hitchon) and other members of the family are to be located near a sister, the former Jennie Hitchon, who since her marriage with William Costello has been located in the west. The Gay family is carrying with them the best wishes of a large list of friends.

Miss Lucille Browning of New London road, left recently to take a course of study at Boston university. Her sister, Miss Doris Browning, who attended Brown university after being graduated from Norwich Free Academy, has a position at Brown university.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Carlson (Natalie Hamilton) with their little son, and Mrs. Carlson's mother, Mrs. Irving L. Hamilton, esteemed Norwich Town residents for nearly two years, moved Monday from Upper Washington street to 14 Nelson place.

Norwich Town friends received word Tuesday of the death of L. B. Brague, of the firm of L. B. Brague & Son, of Hinsdale, Mass.

In observance of the first birthday of Charles Elton Marsh, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Marsh, of 30 Town street, a family party was held Tuesday afternoon from 2:30 to 4:30. Those present included his grandmother, Mrs. Charles Marsh; his aunt, Mrs. Hugh MacDonald, and little son, Daniel; also another aunt, Mrs. Alfred Smith with little daughter, Alice Smith. During the afternoon ice cream and cake were served. The little boy received a number of gifts.

The sympathy of Norwich Town friends has been manifested since the death of Mrs. Charles Carvan (Alice Casey). Before her marriage she was the obliging and always most considerate attendant in the office of Dr. Witter K. Tingley, where she was beloved by his many patients.

After passing the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde M. Beebe, of East Town street, a part of the time being spent at their cottage at Pleasure Beach, Miss Ruth Beebe returned recently to Athens, Ala., to resume teaching at Trinity school.

TAFTVILLE

The five upper classes of the Taftville Congregational church school held a social in the church parlors on Monday evening. Those present were divided into two groups, the Goldenrods and Daisies. Stunts and games were played and the winners awarded points, the Daisies winning the most points for which they were awarded a prize. The judges were Miss Mary Greenhalge, Miss Elizabeth Houston and Miss Flossie M. Meyer. Rev. Mr. Penner had charge of the stunts and games and Mrs. William Penner, Miss Dorothy Hunt and Miss Jean Copeland were on the refreshment committee.

The standing committee of the Taftville Congregational church held a meeting in the church vestry on Tuesday evening with Allan Bogle presiding.

At a meeting of the American Legion bazaar committee it was decided to conduct their affair in the Ponemah hall late in October. Each night will be set aside for some particular event, the first night will be village night; second, legion night; third, auxiliary night; fourth, merchants night, and the last night will be the surprise night. The American Legion auxiliary will have a booth where fancy work, home-made candy and cooking will be sold.

Rev. Mr. Penner, of South Second avenue, returns today to the Hartford Theological seminary where he will resume his studies, in connection with obtaining his B. D. degree.

Byron Ainsworth, of Norwich avenue, is able to return to work after being out several weeks with a fractured thumb.

SENATOR BINGHAM RESENTS IMPUTATIONS OF HARRISON

Senator Harrison Assailed Mr. Bingham For Employing Charles L. Eyanson, of the Connecticut Manufacturers' Association, to Assist Him During Consideration of Tariff Bill in Committee—Senator Bingham's Reply: "If it is Treason to Look After the Interests of Your Own State on This Floor, the Senator From Mississippi Can Make the Most of It."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.— (AP) — Employment of an agent of the Connecticut Manufacturers' association by Senator Bingham of Connecticut to assist him in his work as one of the 11 republican framers of the pending tariff bill precipitated a political controversy today in the senate.

From the democratic side the contention was hurled that the bringing in of an agent of "special interests" to assist in tariff making was "brazen." From the republican side there were disclaimers that the agent had anything to do with rate making and assertions that there was no difference in employing such a person as an adviser than using experts of the tariff commission in a like capacity.

Both the republican leader, Watson of Indiana, and the marshal of the democratic forces, Robinson of Arkansas, were drawn into the discussion launched by Senator Harrison of Mississippi, who manifestly enjoys stirring up the old guard across the political dividing aisle.

The Mississippian said that in employing Charles L. Eyanson, temporarily as his secretary and placing him upon the government payroll, Bingham might as well have retained Joseph R. Grundy, president of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' association, and widely known as an advocate of high protection, because Eyanson had professed such familiarity with Grundy as to refer to him as "Ole Joe."

Harrison warned the republicans they were mistaken if they thought such actions would "help your bill in the opinion of the American people."

Chairman Smoot of the finance committee, which reported the bill, hotly denied that Eyanson had anything to do with writing rates and disclosed that on the second day of the agent's presence at the secret meeting of the republicans of the committee he had suggested to Bingham that Eyanson had better not attend further sessions. His suggestion was acted upon by the Connecticut senator.

Defending his action in employing Eyanson as his assistant in tariff matters, Bingham said he was without knowledge as to tariff matters when he was assigned as chairman of the sub-committee to hold hearings on the textile schedules of the bill, and that he deemed it his duty to obtain the services of one familiar with the subject and especially with the industries of his state.

He had found, he said, that Eyanson had attended all hearings before the house ways and means committee on the original tariff bill as an observer for the Connecticut Manufacturers' association, and that this influenced him in asking the association to grant the "observer" leave of absence to assist him.

"If it is treason to look after the interests of your state on this floor, the senator from Mississippi can make the most of it," Bingham said, adding that in no way did Eyanson suggest anything to the committee.

Bingham's reference to looking after the interests of his own state in tariff making, stirred Senator Norris of Nebraska, republican independent, who said he wondered if all senators took the same view in considering tariff legislation which affected the entire country. In this connection, he pointed out that 11 republicans who framed the bill represented only 11 states.

Bingham replied that he had aided in the formulation of the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill now before the senate, while in Washington as an assistant to U. S. senator Hiram Bingham, of this state. All statements on the matter must come from Senator Bingham, Mr. Eyanson said.

Senator Harrison then launched into a discussion of the flexible provisions of the tariff bill, declaring that the country was believed to be in danger, to wit, the flexible provision of the tariff."

"His silence in other respects," the Georgian asserted, "indicates his acquiescence in all other matters in this bill."

LaFollette argued for a bi-partisan tariff commission made responsible only to congress. He said congress could revise the tariff much quicker than the present tari commission could investigate complaints.

FLEXIBLE TRARIFF WAS ATTACKED IN THE SENATE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25—(AP)—Denunciation of the flexible provisions of the tariff bill resounded in the senate today as an aftermath of President Hoover's statement urging retention of the principle in the Hawley-Smoot measure.

Senators LaFollette of Wisconsin, a republican independent, and George of Georgia, a democratic member of the finance committee, attacked the president for "breaking his long silence" on the tariff question at a time when the most important flexible provisions were at issue and flayed the principle with vigor.

A majority of the democrats hoped to repeal the flexible provision with the aid of the republican senators from the farm states.

In a speech lasting nearly three hours, "Young Bob" LaFollette traced the history of the operation of the flexible clause since its enactment in 1922 and asserted "intrigue, political influence of Presidents Harding and Coolidge and Cabal had destroyed the usefulness of the tariff commission and resulted in failure of the flexible provisions."

The president, he said, had not spoken to indicate whether he approved the pending bill or that the measure complied with his "ambiguous" message to the special session, but had "violated the admonition" of Senator Watson of Indiana, the republican leader, "only to indicate he desires retention of the flexible provisions."

Senator George said Mr. Hoover had spoken only twice on important pending legislation, and both times against the interests of the farmer. He contended the president had taken a decided stand against agriculture when he opposed incorporation of the debenture plan in the farm bill.

"President Hoover threw himself into the tariff breach," George continued, "not when farm products were at stake, but when the chief demand of the highest protected interests of this country was heard."

EVANSON DECLINED TO COMMENT ON REPORTS

HARTFORD, Sept. 25—(AP)—Charles L. Evanson, of the Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut, today declined to comment on reports from Washington that he had aided in the formulation of the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill now before the senate, while in Washington as an assistant to U. S. senator Hiram Bingham, of this state. All statements on the matter must come from Senator Bingham, Mr. Evanson said.

"RED" CRANE, BALL PLAYER, FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 25.—(AP)—Samuel "Red" Crane, former major and minor league infielder, was convicted of second degree murder in connection with the slaying of his erstwhile sweetheart, Della Lyter, whom he shot and killed on the night of Aug. 3. The verdict was returned by a jury of four women and eight men after slightly more than two hours of deliberation.

The verdict automatically carries a penitentiary sentence of from 10 to 20 years.

The case was the first of two separate trials resulting from the slaying of Miss Lyter and Crane's rival, Jacob Oren, in a local hotel. Oren was fatally wounded when he attacked Crane after the latter had found the girl and Oren in the hotel and had shot the girl. Crane's trial on the charge of killing his rival was expected to be started tomorrow.

As the foreman announced the verdict, Crane, who had known the cheers of baseball fans from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, maintained his unemotional attitude. He stood with his eyes downcast before being returned to his cell.

By its verdict the jury revealed that they believed the defense contention that Crane was so intoxicated at the time of the double shooting that he did not know what he was doing. The defendant's counsel had admitted from the outset that Crane had shot Miss Lyter, with whom he had lived for several months, and then fired at Oren when the latter struck him with a ukulele.

SHEARER "RICH" MAN, IN HIS OWN ESTIMATION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.— (AP) — New claims of William B. Shearer as to his influence on the fruitless Geneva naval conference of 1927 were laid before a senate committee today, as it continued tracing payments to him by the battleship builders other than the $25,000 he received for the work done in the Swiss town.

A letter written to his employers by Shearer a year after the Geneva fiasco was referred to by Senator Allen, republican, Kansas, who observed that Shearer stated:

"This advance campaign and the accuracy and authentic data released by me, automatically made me leader of the unofficial fight to the extent that the American officials referred the press to me, as they were bound to secrecy, with the result that the attempt to deliver the United States was defeated by a complete expose, which is now acknowledged."

Henry C. Hunter, counsel for the National Council of American Shipbuilders, who paid off Shearer for the three cruiser manufacturers, was before the committee today detailing those unrecorded payments. He said he knew nothing about this particular claim of Shearer's, and he did not attach "any significance whatever" to Shearer's other claims.

Tonight the committee determined to call Shearer for the first time on next Monday.

STOLE FIRE CHIEF'S AUTO AND FLED, SOUNDING SIREN

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 25—(AP)—Defying police and fire officials, young speed maniacs, who have made the Charlestown district a race course for the past several months, tonight staged their most sensational act when they stole the machine of Deputy Fire Chief Thomas Downey and sped through the city with gongs clanging and sirens screeching.

The big red touring car, outfitted with all the appurtances of fire apparatus, was stolen in the Fenway by two youths while the deputy chief was in a firehouse. The car raced through the heart of the city and was given right of way at every intersection as it sped through heavy traffic.

The machine was later seen in Charlestown where it made the loop over Bunker Hill, which has been the race track of youthful speeders for months. The daring episode was regarded by police as a defy to Police Captain William Livingston, who had said he would stop the racing.

Fire Chief Daniel Sennott declared tonight that it was an outrage and that the embryonic racers would be punished when they were apprehended. The last seen of the car was when it sped in the direction of Somerville.

PLANS FOR INAUGURATION OF DR. GEORGE A. WORKS

STORRS, Sept. 25—(AP)—Plans for the formal inauguration of Dr. George A. Works, as president of Connecticut Agricultural college on November 8, were announced today by the inauguration committee.

The program will include a reception by the trustees of the college on November 7 to Dr. and Mrs. Works, a military drill the following morning by the R. O. T. C. of the college, a luncheon and a banquet in the evening. The inauguration ceremonies will be held at Hawley armory in the afternoon.

Representatives of land grant colleges of the country, state officials, members of the state board of education, and former members of the college faculty have been invited.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

HAVANA, Sept. 25—(AP)—Tong war outbreaks here tonight resulted in the mortal wounding of three and injuries to eight. Squads of policemen patrolled the six block Oriental district tonight.

ROME, Sept. 25—(AP)—John W. Garrett, of Baltimore, arrived yesterday and took up his duties as U. S. ambassador. He succeeds Henry P. Fletcher as ambassador.

GENEVA, Sept. 25—(AP)—Arthur Sweetser of Boston, assistant director of the information section of the league of nations secretariat, was reappointed for three years by the council in a private session tonight.

LONDON, Sept. 26—(Thursday)—(AP)—The Prince of Wales, according to a biography published today, "regards the sanctity of marriage so seriously that he will not be thrust into a marriage of convenience," and he is not yet in love.

WIESBADEN, Ger., Sept. 25—(AP)—A huge crowd of townfolk cheered members of the second battalion of the Dorsetshire regiment, who had been stationed at Bad Schwalbach, on their departure for England yesterday. Sir William Thwaites, commander in chief of the British occupation forces, personally saw the troops off.

RESIDENTS RESCUED BY BOAT FROM FLOOD-STRICKEN TOWN

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Sept. 25—(AP)—Fifty four persons, the last remnants of the population of San Marcial, N. M., were rescued by boat from the flood-stricken town this afternoon.

A motor boat dispatched from Elephant Butte lake removed the refugees from the Harvey eating house and the Santa Fe railroad station where they had been marooned since yesterday by flood waters of the Rio Grande.

Six at a time, the refugees were taken to a train waiting two miles below the town to convey them to El Paso, Texas.

No loss of life was reported, ample warning having been given of the flood danger. Many persons left San Marcial before the bursting of a dyke along the rain-swollen Rio Grande yesterday sent a torrent 7 to 10 feet deep pouring through the town.

A destructive flood last month carried away adobe structures but left several scores of frame buildings to be claimed by the present high water.

Water stood five feet deep on the first floor of the Harvey house this morning, but the flood was receding gradually tonight. The Santa Fe railroad yards were under water and a locomotive and several cars could be seen overturned.

W. F. Resch, government hydrographer, reported a 200 foot break in the levee a mile and a quarter north of San Marcial, a 20 foot break opposite the Santa Fe station and a 100 foot break below the town.

CABINETS OF AUSTRIA AND CZECHOSLOVAKIA RESIGN

VIENNA, Austria, Sept. 25 —(AP)—Resignations of the Austrian and Czechoslovakian cabinets today brought to three the number of governments in central European states reformed after the World war which have fallen within a week. Individual internal difficulties were responsible for the changes rather than any single outside force.

In Austria, Dr. Ernst Steeruwitz, who on April 30 succeeded with difficulty in forming a coalition cabinet, was forced out of office by withdrawals of support by the Styrian Farmers' league. His cabinet had been formed after Austria for twenty-seven days had been without a government, a period said to have been exceeded only once before in European countries. Although Dr. Streeruwitz is a member of the Christian Socialist party some socialists looked upon him with disfavor because of his active participation in the Austrian fascist organization known as the Heimwehr. He was known to be an ardent advocate of union with Germany as the only solution of economic difficulties.

The Czechoslovakian cabinet which left office today was formed last February to succeed a government which had been in office about two years and a half. It was a coalition affair and apparently party leaders decided to make an attempt to gain a clear majority by fresh elections. Parliament was therefore dissolved and the new election date fixed for October 27.

COL. LINDBERGH NOW RETRACING HIS FLIGHT

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, Sept. 25—(AP)—(By Radio)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh out-maneuvered intermittent squalls out of Jungles and treebound river deltas of coastal South America today to make another trail for the air mail, this time retracing his aerial progress from Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, to Port of Spain.

The colonel set his plane down here at 1:10 p. m., today, concluding the first leg of the homeward journey in his 7,000 mile aerial tour of the West Indies, South America, Central America and Mexico.

Reversing his trip of Monday, Colonel Lindbergh pushed his mail and passenger bearing monoplane over the 586 mile hop, marking aerial miles through fair and inclement weather. With him were his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Juan T. Trippe, besides the ship's crew. Mr. Trippe is president of Pan-American Airways, sponsors of the new mail and passenger route over the circle tour.

The Lindbergh party planned to stay here tonight before embarking late tomorrow upon the comparatively short flight of 415 miles to Maracay, Venesuela, and his subsequent inspection of an air mail line through Venezuela.

ALIENISTS' TESTIMONY FAVORABLE TO PEACOX

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 25—(AP)—Earl Peacox was pictured by two alienists today as a man helpless before the buffetings of an emotional storm at the time he admittedly killed his wife, helpless to stay his own hand from squeezing out the life of the woman he loved, even as he slew her.

The doctors were C. Floyd Haviland, superintendent of the state hospital for the insane on Ward's Island, and George H. Hutchins, superintendent at the State institution for the insane at Utica, N. Y.

Shortly after the doctors testified the defense rested. Tomorrow the state will call in rebuttal Dr. Menas Gregory, chief of the psychopathic ward at Bellevue hospital in New York, to base an opinion on the same hypothetical question.

Police And Negroes In Gunfight In Chicago

A Detective and a Negro Were Killed — Two Policemen Wounded.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—(AP)—The spark of factional dissension in a mystic Negro cult flared into a furious gunfight in Chicago's Negro quarter today and for a moment the city feared an outburst of racial strife. A detective and a Negro were slain. Two policemen were wounded probably mortally and three Negro cultists were less seriously wounded.

Squads of detectives patrolled the populous Negro section throughout the afternoon and 350 uniformed police were dispatched to keep order. Beyond the apparent suppressed excitement, however, no violence was reported.

The fight started shortly before noon when a squad of police marched into a large apartment house on South Parkway near 42nd street in quest of the kidnapers of Charles Kirkman, who styles himself grand vizier bey of the Moorist National Science Temple of America. Kirkman, perhaps because he aspired to the throne made vacant in June by the death of the "Chief Protector of Islam," was torn from his breakfast table this morning by four cultists and carried away.

The detectives were sent to the South Parkway address on a tip. They battered at the door and a burst of gunfire answered. Detectives Jesse Hultz and Stewart McCutcheon slumped to the floor, both with bullets in the abdomen. The police retreated and called for reinforcements and a hook and ladder company.

Ladders were thrown up to the second-story window and tear bombs were tossed in. There was a rush for the stairs, a fusillade of bullets and Sergeant William Gallagher fell mortally wounded. The police sent volleys of revolver bullets back into the building and when its occupants were finally subdued one cultist lay dead and three wounded. Ten women and four men were arrested, and two others escaped in the mad dash from the gas-filled flat. Kirkman, the kidnaped leader, was found in the flat.

Hultz and McCutcheon were not expected to live. The dead Negro was not identified, and only one of the trio wounded was known at first. He was Eugene Bey. "Bey" being the title affected by members of the cult.

Most of the queries of police into the nature of the occult order met only sullen silence on the part of the frightened Negroes. They learned, however, that it was founded several years ago by Drew Ali, who called himself a Moor. The cultists met regularly in their "temple," situated on South Parkway, the former Grand boulevard, whose great stone houses were the homes of wealthy white residents until recent years. Their worship was always conducted in the Moorish tongue, and their leaders preached always that they were not Negroes, but lineal descendants of the Moorish nobles.

Following the arrest and questioning of several suspects late today police announced that Ira Johnson, "sheik" of the cult, confessed he shot Sergeant Gallagher, but claimed he shot in defense of the cult and of his own person. Two other Negroes, D. Francis Jackson and his son, D. F. Jackson, Jr., were being questioned. The elder Jackson is "Guardian of the Garden of Allah."

Announcement that several hundred members of the cult planned a protest meeting tonight resulted in Deputy Police Commissioner Stege ordering police to disperse that, or any other meeting attempted tonight, as a precautionary measure.

MRS. PANTAGES FOUND GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 25—(AP)—Mrs. Lois Pantages, wife of the theatrical magnate was convicted of manslaughter tonight by a jury which heard her trial on a charge of second degree murder.

The jury of five women and seven men made no recommendation for leniency. The sentence for manslaughter is fixed by California law at from one to ten years in the penitentiary. Three women jurors wept as the verdict was read.

Mrs. Pantages had been charged with the death of Juro Rokumoto, a Japanese gardener, as the result of an automobile accident. The wealthy woman was alleged to have been driving while intoxicated when her automobile collided with the machine driven by the Japanese.

Although Mrs. Pantages was charged with second degree murder, the jury, under instructions given by Superior Judge Carlos Hardy, returned the manslaughter verdict.

WILL OPPOSE HAPHAZARD FORM OF FARM RELIEF

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.— (AP) — Alexander Legge, who gave up a $100,000 annual salary as head of the International Harvester Co. to become chairman of the federal farm board, told the senate agriculture committee today he would not want that position under the "misapprehension" that he would favor a hurried or haphazard plan of farm relief.

He pledged himself to do all in his power to make the farmer prosperous by working out the agricultural problem constructively.

"I do not believe the farmer is seeking a handout or any charity," Legge said. "If we put this money out haphazardly no one would be benefited and it would soon be gone.

"I believe our job should be done with consideration for measures of reasonable safety. That is what I intend to do."

With this statement, Legge completed more than four hours of testimony during which some committee members expressed dissatisfaction because the farm board has not undertaken the stabilization of wheat and cotton.

MEX. AVIATOR FOUND IN DAZED CONDITION

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Sept. 25—(AP)—Lieutenant Colonel Fernando Proal, Mexico City-Kansas City air derbyist, was found in a dazed condition on the Mexican beach ninety miles south of Brownsville today by J. P. Squire, Mexican Aviation company pilot. Proal, had been missing since he took off from Tampico yesterday.

Proal was brought to Brownsville but was unable to explain what had happened to him. Squire said he searched the vicinity where he found the Mexican army officer but was unable to locate his plane.

Russian Govt. Sends Warning To China

Red Army Will Decisively Act Against Any Further Chinese Attacks.

MOSCOW, Sept. 25—(AP)—The Russian government tonight sent a firm warning to China through the German foreign office that the Red army would immediately and decisively act against any further Chinese attacks and raids on the Russian population along the Manchurian frontier.

Placing the responsibility for "further complications" on Nanking and Mukden, the soviet note said: "Soviet military authorities will be compelled henceforth to take all necessary steps to combat the attacks in question and prevent their recurrence."

NATIONALISTS CLAIM CHINESE REVOLT BROKEN

SHANGHAI, China, Sept. 25—(AP)—The Nationalist government tonight claimed that the insurrection in Hupeh province had been broken with the revolting Cantonese "Ironsides" division surrounded at Lichow.

At the same time censorship was relaxed to permit a flood of press despatches from Hankow which confirmed the reports of yesterday that General Change Fak-Wei, commander of the "Ironsides," had dealt Nationalist forces a severe blow before evacuating Ichang.

The government statement tonight said a serious defeat with heavy casualties had been inflicted on the soldiers of Chang when they were caught up with near the border of Hunan province.

Yesterday Chang was reported to have captured three transports on the Yangtse river below Ichang, capturing 5,000 Nationalist troops and huge quantities of ammunition and rifles. Fortified with these supplies, the "Ironsides" crossed the Yangtse and began a march to the south, apparently for the purpose of joining other reactionaries in a campaign against Canton.

The Nationalist troops took over Ichang in the wake of the evacuating rebels and established martial law. The city was described as quiet today.

Despite reassuring reports that Feng Yu-Hsiang's forces in Honan, were not planning to descend on Hankow, the Nationalist government continued to concentrate forces in northern Hupeh. Troop trains continued to leave Hankow for the north.

Canton dispatches stated that the Kwantung government had been greatly alarmed when the "Ironsides" began their southward march. As a result the Canton government hurried forces to the Kwangsi border.

SILLY RUMORS CAUSE OF BREAK IN STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 25—(AP)—Wall street had a bad case of nerves today when high priced stocks broke $5 to $25 a share, and it looked as though the bottom had fallen out of the market, but speculative confidence was quickly restored and prices mounted upward at the close, wiping out or cutting down most of the declines, and leaving the general level of prices only moderately lower.

So great was the rush to sell and buy at times that the ticker fell 20 minutes behind the market, but the day's sales fell just short of 5,000,000 shares.

Widespread circulation of all sorts of silly rumors, involving not only the financial stability of some of Wall street's large operators but of some of the large brokerage houses as well contribukted to the panicky conditions. The selling movement also received considerable impetus from the advance in call money from 8 to 10 per cent., the report of a higher Bank of England discount rate tomorrow and the reported falling off in steel and automobile production. Such ordinarily favorable factors as the sharp increase in car lodgings and the drop in crude oil production were temporarily ignored.

SPEAKEASY INFORMANT GUILTY OF BLACKMAIL

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 25—(AP)—Ernest DePue, dry investigator who, testimony showed, occasionally furnished speakeasy information to the Connecticut Anti-Saloon league, was sentenced to one year in New Haven county jail today on two counts of blackmail. Sentence was pronounced by Judge Isaac Wolfe in criminal superior court.

DePue was charged with using a letter from Roscoe P. Vining, head of the state anti-saloon organization, to extort money from alleged speakeasy proprietors. Mrs. Joseph Castellano told Judge Wolfe he had "borrowed" $250 on the pledge that he would not give out information about her place. Mrs. Joseph Leoni "lent" $20 for DePue's silence.

NEGRO DIED OF FRACTURED SKULL IN MIDDLETOWN

LOWER FLORIDA MENACED BY A TROPICAL CYCLONE

Weather Bureau Warns That a Storm of Hurricane Intensity Would Likely Strike the Southeast Florida Coast Near Miami—Merchants and Householders Have Boarded Up Windows and Doors in Anticipation of the Blow—British Steamer is Aground at the Bahamas, With Lives of Crew of Thirty Endangered.

(By the Associated Press)

Amply warned residents of the lower Florida east coast last night awaited the advent of a tropical cyclone roaring in from the Bahamas.

Weather bureau warnings, broadcast by radio, telephone, courier and newspapers went to the remotest communities with word that the disturbance apparently of hurricane intensity would likely strike the southeast Florida coast near Miami.

The population hastened to take all necessary precautions to avert disaster if the storm should prove severe. With that done, there was nothing to do but wait, and watch the descending barometers that presaged the coming of the phenomenon.

Preparations for the winds were on the largest scale ever. Merchants and householders boarded up windows and doors and set their properties in shape for a blow. Ships and boats sought the safest anchorage. Emergency relief bodies were organized in Palm Beach county and facilities gathered for caring for refugees. Medical units were organized, and details of men were sent out to bring in reports from the probable area following the storm.

Meanwhile, the upper Bahamas felt the lash of the winds, with the British steamer Domira helplessly aground on Great Abaco Island, the lives of her crew of thirty hanging in the balance. Outside ports were unable to come to their assistance with a breeches buoy and the men faced death although only a stone's throw from shore. Raging seas and the character of the shore prevented use of the life boats.

Fearful that the storm might strike with force in the Lake Okeechobee region where a hurricane last September took more than 1,800 lives, many residents of the lake shore communities fled to higher ground. Officials of the Everglades Drainage association, however, saw little danger since the lake level is said to be four feet lower than last year.

The weather bureau was unable determine the exact intensity of the disturbance or predict probable wind velocities, other than that it apparently was attended by hurricane winds. The bureaus in the various cities and all newspaper offices in the area were besieged by telephone calls from the residents, seeking information.

From Havana, Father Lanza of Belen observatory, said that the Bahamas storm had developed into a true cyclone. He said precautions should be taken in Palm Beach, where last year's hurricane struck with such fury.

Both the Washington and Havana weather reports declared the storm probably would move inland late last night or early today.

OBSERVERS EXCLUDE CUBA FROM MENACED TERRITORY

HAVANA, Sept. 25—(AP)—The Cuban National Observatory and Belen Jesuit college station tonight closely watched storm developments which, according to late afternoon reports, excluded Cuba from danger but menaced territory between Miami and Palm Beach with terrific gales and drench downpours before tomorrow morning.

Little or no hope of escaping the ever-increasing cyclone was offered territory north of Miami to Palm Beach in afternoon reports issued by Belen observatory. According to observations at that station by Dr. Gutierrez Lanza, a storm of hurricane proportions will strike with its greatest intensity over West Palm Beach late tonight or during the early morning hours tomorrow. Miami will be within the swirling wind whirls, he predicted.

The following storm warning was issued by Belen observatory at 8 p. m.:

The cyclonic perturbation in the Bahamas is now approximately 120 miles east of Miami, Florida, moving in a westerly direction and with increasing intensity. It will probably strike Miami and north shortly before midnight tonight.

The present storm presents a phenomena never before presented in Cuban cyclone annals for the eastern Atlantic, according to a National observatory statement. The plumed clouds customarily forming on the horizon several hours previous to cyclonic visitations have been wholly absent in the present disturbance.

The timely advice of a well known woman resident of Windham Road was instrumental Tuesday evening in saving the life of an unknown boy who fell from the ledges on the south bank of the Willimantic river, just below the Jillson hill bridge into the water. The woman was crossing the bridge when she was attracted by cries for help. She found one boy standing excitedly on the river bank while the other was floundering about in the water. Noting that the child in the river could swim a little the woman, commanding the situation remarkably well, called to the boy to keep calm and swim to shore. There she told him to just hold to the ledge and she would get someone to lift him up. A young man was called to the scene and he helped the child up the steep embankment. The names of none of the participants were secured except that of the woman which is omitted by request.

Why wait another year to own an Eight...?

You'll be out of date within a year without an EIGHT!

It's evident on every hand—America wants to stay in high gear!

The public knows that extra gear shifting and other engineering devices applied to a six-cylinder motor will not give the smoothness and flexibility of an eight.

The fine cars started it. Today every fine American motor car is an Eight. Now we find the same sweeping trend among cars of more moderate cost. In eight key states for the first six months of 1929, new car registrations above $1000 showed a 90 per cent increase in Eights while sixes above $1000 showed a decrease of 16 per cent.

Spurred on by an Eight-minded public, Studebaker set out two years ago to build a high-quality Eight that could be sold at moderate six-cylinder cost.

Studebaker today leads the world in the manufacture of Eights—Eights that are champions—holders of 11 world records for speed and endurance and more American stock car records than all other makes combined—Eights which are remarkably economical—smooth, flexible, brilliant.

Before investing in your new car, drive a smart new Studebaker Eight—President, Commander or Dictator. Measure it point for point and feature for feature against the best six that you know. Then remember—your new car will be worth more a year from now—if it's an Eight!—for Eights will then be at a premium in a used car market glutted with sixes.

DANIELSON

DRIVE ON FOR NEW UNIFORMS FOR FIRE DEPT.

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 26—Chief A. Putnam Woodward of the fire department announced this morning, following a conference last evening with company heads and other firemen, that an effort is to be made to raise a fund to supply department members with new uniforms. It has been many a year since the local fire department appeared in new uniforms, so long, in fact, that only a few of the men now in the department possess one that is really presentable. The department has arranged to be in this year's big observance of Armistice day in Danielson. They wish to make a good appearance. The borough pays them so little for the splendid service they perform that it is hardly possible for them to buy uniforms out of their own money without making rather too great a sacrifice. Hence the decision to come to the public with a request to contribute to "The Firemen's Fund." The Firemen's association has some money that it will devote to the cost of uniforms, about 40 of which will be required. The total cost of the uniforms will be about $1,200. Boxes are to be placed about town into which those who appreciate the splendid service the department has rendered Danielson for many years may deposit money. Giving to this fund will be a pleasure to many people, who do not forget the fact that Danielson has probably the smallest fire loss per capita of any town of its size in southern New England, and this is in large measure due to the fact that it has an exceptionally efficient volunteer fire department.

First copies of the annual town reports, to be distributed generally at the annual town meeting a week from next Monday, were made available today. These reports set forth in detail many matters pertaining to the administration of Killingly's affairs during the twelve months ending July 31, last.

The statement of condition shows that on July 31 the town debt was $342,148.13, or a reduction of $26,-198.28. The report does not mention the fact, but this reduction is the largest made in any fiscal year in Killingly in more than a generation.

Against this debt Killingly has assets in excess of the amount owed. Included in the assets is the town hall building, carried in the town reports at the modest figure of $25,000, which any dealer in realty in this town will agree is less than half its actual value. The almshouse and farm plant lists at $31,945. The tool house, tools and motors at $1,500; record vaults and fixtures, $700; office furniture and facilities, $2,500; elementary school buildings, $100,000 (they cannot be replaced for this figure); high school building $250,000; three stone arch bridges, $15,-000, or a grand total of assets of $429,-945, a comforting thing to contemplate as against the town debt.

The town of Killingly was incorporated in 1708, and therefore rates one of the older towns of the state of Connecticut.

That the turkey-growing business is progressing in Windham county after a great many years when it was almost entirely abandoned as a source of farm revenue was recalled to mind this afternoon by the fact that state officers were called from the Danielson barracks to Canterbury to investigate the theft of a small flock of grown birds. There are many flocks of turkeys in eastern Windham county this fall, in territory where they ran wild and in abundance in early Colonial days.

The outstanding church event of this week in Danielson is the 50th anniversary observance of the dedication of the Baptist church building at the corner of Broad and Academy streets Thursday evening. The detail of the program of the evening previously has been set forth in this column. Members of other churches in Danielson have been invited to join with members of the Baptist church in the observance. In addition to the address to be delivered by Rev. J. Walter Houck of New York, a former pastor of the church, there will be a special musical program, an historical sketch, a prophecy of the good that awaits the church, and a social hour. The church has been extensively renovated interiorly during the past summer.

Do you wish to attend evening school, three evenings a week, this fall and winter? That is the question propounded today by Supt. W. E. Parker of the schools in Killingly and Brooklyn. Mr. Parker goes on to say: "We plan classes for those who wish to learn to read, write and speak English. We also plan one or more classes for those who for any reason were not able to complete the work of the schools through the eighth grade. If you desire to attend evening school, please register at the office of the superintendent of schools at the high school building on Friday evening of this week between the hours of 7:00 and 9:00 o'clock.

The Wakitatina Campfire Girls have resumed their activities after the summer recess period. The following officers have been elected for the season: President, Ruth King; vice president, Elsie Myers; secretary, Beatrice Myers; treasurer, Mildred Keech; song leader, Jacqueline Gardner. Hiking at week ends during the fall season is to be one of the club activities.

If your auto is driven by a minor, 16 to 18, you must file proof of financial responsibility at state motor vehicle dept. See Reeves, insurance, Danielson, Conn.—Adv.

A warning is issued from officials having to do with enforcement of the game laws that anyone caught afield with dog and gun, or with a gun and without a dog ahead of the open season will be subject to arrest and court appearance, and the fact may not be overlooked that the patrol of the countryside will be more complete than ever this fall.

Incident to the Trumbull-Coolidge wedding at Plainville on Monday, it has been interesting to many people hereabouts how many people gained the impression that the wedding was to be in Plainfield. Even New York newspapers fell into that error, one of them publishing pictures with captions in which the word Plainfield, instead of Plainville, was used.

"More Money, More Work, More Consecration" has been set up as an ideal for members and attendants at the Westfield Congregational church, as to advancing its activities, for the coming year. What is arranged as a comprehensive program for the year has been presented in printed form to members. The plan will be subjected to full discussion and analysis before final adoption.

It was noted, and should be mentioned, by hundreds of drivers of automobiles heading into Brooklyn today to attend the fair that federal inspectors of the U. S. department of agriculture, checking up for corn borers, made their examination of cars as brief and rapid as possible, causing practically no delay to anyone, and the fact is appreciated.

Mrs. Ardelia M. Pond, who died in Providence yesterday and is to be buried in Brooklyn Thursday afternoon at the South cemetery at about 2:30 was one of the oldest members of McGregor Woman's Relief corps of this town. Members of the corps are to attend the burial services, following funeral services to be held in Providence.

There was no suspension of business in this town today for the Brooklyn fair, but that did not operate to prevent hundreds from Danielson and other parts of the town of Killingly from so arranging their business affairs as to allow of afternoon attendance at the annual exhibition.

Brooklyn grange, having postponed its regularly appointed meeting from an evening this week on account of the fair, is to meet on Tuesday evening of next week, Oct. 1.

Damage to corn throughout this territory from heavy frosts of the past few nights is more wide-spread than was indicated in an item in this column Monday morning. While the loss is heavy, there will be some salvage from damaged fields.

Walter G. Bruce, member of the faculty of Killingly high school, was in charge of the school's vocational training in agriculture display at the Brooklyn fair today, the interesting exhibit being inspected by several thousand people.

Frank Klick was taken to Backus hospital by Dr. G. H. Jennings Wednesday afternoon following an accident at the junction of Brown avenue and Main street. Klick was riding in the Tenczar Chevrolet, a Massachusetts Buick following. The latter machine driver claimed a misleading signal, and ran into the Tenczar machine. Several veins had to be tied and sewed on Mr. Klick's head and he returned to a relative's home living near Brown avenue. State Trooper Scranton, of the Danielson barracks, checked up on the accident.

The annual reports of the Town Nurse committee were given at a meeting of the committee held in the selectmen's room Tuesday evening. Dr. G. H. Jennings, president of the board, presided. The secretary, Mrs. E. H. Hiscox, reported the total number of visits made by the nurse, Miss Alice Brennan, R. N., from August 31st, 1928, to August 31st, 1929, to be 2239. Total visits for the Metropolitan Insurance Co. were 1734, for the John Hancock Insurance Co., 176, and other visits, 329. The treasurer, Joseph H. McCarthy, reported the amount received $1864.59, and the expenses, $1858.95, his report being up to the date of the meeting. $1184.04 of this amount was paid by the Metropolitan Co. and $112, by the John Hancock Co. The Red Cross chapter has given two hundred dollars. From June, 1928, to June, 1929, the chapter has given $300. The town has bought a new car this last year, and last year voted an appropriation of $700. The work of the nurse is one of the most valuable assets the town can claim.

PUTNAM

PERMIT GRANTED FOR NEW BUSINESS BLOCK ON SO. MAIN

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 25.— Apart from the report of Ralph E. Thurston, chairman of the board of water commissioners at the adjourned meeting of the common council Tuesday evening only a few topics of interest came before the aldermanic board. John McArdle, local business man appeared before the council and applied for a building permit to tear down a two-story brick block owned by him on South Main street and to erect in its place a modern two-story concrete business house. Mr. McArdles' verbal application was brief, the only details mentioned by him being that he intends to use the block as a service and gasoline station. Mayor Charles A. Richard endorsed the business man's application, saying that he had examined the present property and was of the opinion that the proposed new block would be a decided improvement to the city and especially to that section. The permit was granted, together with several others by a unanimous vote of the board.

Alderman Eugene Migneault, chairman of the city highway committee was authorized by a vote, to sell at public auction the municipal owned colt, born to one of the street department's horses early this year and other property owned by the street department which is no longer of service.

A bonded agreement for the sale of four lots of land on Powhatton street to be used as sandbanks and to be transferred to the city on or before April 1, 1930, at a price of $1175, signed by the owners, George and Elizabeth Merton, of Thompson and by Eugene Migneault in behalf of the city was read in council and approved. Alderman Migneault stated that the bond was signed by the present owners in consideration of $25 which was paid them to bind the agreement. The balance is to be paid off in two separate installments.

The police department is to have an extra task assigned to its patrol schedule as soon as the city converts the leased stretch of land on South Main street into a public parking space. The supervision of parking there will be done by an officer of the department.

The Albert J. Breault post, 1523, Veterans of Foreign Wars, through its commander, Ernest J. Durand, in a communication to the council, informed the body of its intentions of erecting a flag staff 34 feet in height, on the municipal owned Cargill park, adjoining the Soldiers' Memorial bridge on Pomfret and following a public dedication on Armistice day would turn the flag staff and flag over to the city. A brass ball and a ball-bearing top mantel, to allow the flag to fly in the breeze at all times, will be part of the equipment. A plaque with the following inscription will be affixed to the pole, "Dedicated to the memory of Putnam's ex-service men of all wars of the United States on November 11, 1929, by the Albert J. Breault post, 1523, Veterans of Foreign Wars." Because of the presence of trees in the center of the small plot of green located in the heart of the city, which is desired by the ex-service men's organization for this purpose, some controversy arose when it was mentioned that the trees may have to be removed. However, Mayor Richard asked that the subject be tabled until the regular October meeting of the council when final action would be taken.

"Old Charley", veteran horse of the city highway department who served more than eighteen years in the service of the city, through the efforts of Mayor Charles A. Richard and Alderman E. J. Migneault has been spared from a death sentence and instead has received a new lease of life—one that will last for the rest of his days, and incidentally one of leisure and comfort. Following the purchase of a new pair of horses to supply the age worn "Jim" and "Charley," the latter by a vote of the council was sentenced to death. During the summer months "Charley" has been out to pasture along with the colt, "Putnam" and her mother. The chief executive and his able assistant spent many hours during the past summer on a humane mission endeavoring to secure a heaven-on-earth for "Charley" in his last years. Yesterday, Mr. Migneault stated that they were successful in their efforts and "Charley" within a few days would be taken to the Trowbridge farm in Pomfret, through the kindness and courtesy of John Trowbridge, and will have nothing more to do but eat, drink and be merry.

The act of the city officials is one for which they are to be complimented, for many citizens were in hopes that a reprieve for "Charley" was only deserving of him in recognition of his years of faithful service.

A social enemy, the dreaded skunk, has invaded lower Grove street and Ring street where from all appearances intends to domesticate itself, despite the protests and fears of residents of that section.

A fire at 12:20 a. m. today in a woodpile on Arch street, owned by the Bridge Street Auto company, was extinguished by the members of the pumper company of the central fire station. The blaze is believed to have origined when a lighted cigarette stub was carelessly thrown into a pile of sawdust near the stack of lumber. The blaze was discovered before it made any headway and a four stroke alarm brought out several members of the call company who made short work of the flames.

It is expected that a large court audience will be on hand Thursday at 2 oclock when the criminal session of superior court will convene to open the case of the state vs. Pasquale Paisley Perillio of this city, who is charged with abuse of a minor female child. While the nature of the charge against Perillio is not as serious as charges with which some of the other prisoners are held on, Perillio's past record of ten convictions, two of which resulted in state prison's term being imposed, it is believed will bring drastic action from the court. Members of the county constabulary, under the direction of Sheriff Charles A. Gates of Willimantic, were busy today serving summons in order to bring in a jury panel for the selection of a jury, by which Perillio will be tried.

Mrs. Mazie D. Potter, wife of Treasurer J. D. Potter of the Cargill Trust company, has been appointed as delegate of the 4th district of the auxiliary of the American Legion to attend the national convention to be held in Louisville, Kentucky. Mrs. Potter will leave Thursday morning for Boston where she will join other members of the Connecticut delegation en route to the convention city in the south.

Funeral services for Thomas L. Paine, elderly resident of Wilsonville, who died early yesterday, were held this afternoon at his late home in Thompson. Rev. James F. English, pastor of the Congregational church of this city, officiated at the service. Burial took place in Grove street cemetery. A committal service was held at the grave.

Members of the commercial of service branches of the Connecticut Light and Power company's office in this city were in Niantic today where they attended the annual outing of the company. An entertainment programme took place this afternoon at the state military reservation, followed by a dinner at the Morton house at six o'clock. The day's list of events concluded with dancing in the evening.

Past President John Reardon of the Putnam Rotary club presided at today's session of the business men which was held at noon at the Putnam Inn. The club-men were treated to a delightful travel-talk presented by William Ward, a Rotarian and welfare worker of Bombay, India, who spoke interestingly on social problems of that far off country.

Mr. Ward chose for the subject of his after dinner talk, "Some Things That are Holding India Back," in which he touched upon the thousands of caste systems, primarily responsible for the backwardness of India. The caste systems, Mr. Ward said, tend to keep the people of that country apart and incidentally increase depression in all trades. In India, according to the speaker, there are 26 major languages and almost 200 dialects, besides all types of races, religions and social systems, none of which are leading to standardization of India. Indian country villages aided greatly in the strengthening of the hazardous caste systems, but since the springing up of cities like Bombay with its population of a million people, the caste systems have begun to disappear. Industrial, political and social revolts have brought the country to the fore, Mr. Ward said, and now the present problem of social workers is to lower the death rate among the natives by the introduction of American and European sanitation methods, a factor that is slowly being accomplished.

The fire truck responded and the fire was soon extinguished, with only a little damage to the garage floor. The cause of the fire is thought to have been ashes from smoking.

Sun-Tan Is The Fashion!

AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE HAS BEEN REMOVED

False modesty is a relic of an ancient prejudice. AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE has cut it away and, in behalf of better health and pure enjoyment, sponsors the fashion of sensible swimming attire.

"toasting did it"—

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against cigarette smoking by men and by women.

"It's Toasted"—the phrase that describes the extra "toasting" process applied in the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes. The finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—are scientifically subjected to penetrating heat at minimum, 260°—maximum, 300°, Fahrenheit. The exact, expert regulation of such high temperatures removes impurities. More than a slogan, "It's Toasted" is recognized by millions as the most modern step in cigarette manufacture.

ANOTHER TAX CUT

Highly cheering news is that which comes from Washington to the effect that the treasury department will make recommendations for a further reduction in federal taxation and that such will be submitted by President Hoover to congress in his message next December.

Federal tax reductions are about the only ones that are recommended these days, but they are always welcomed. It is through the policy that has been in effect for a period of years that several reductions have already been obtained. That policy combined with the prosperity of the nation makes the expected reduction possible.

At the close of the last fiscal year there was a greater surplus in the treasury than had been anticipated. It was there in spite of the reductions in taxes. Business had developed and money which had been withheld from such channels was once more being employed for the swelling of the nation's revenue. It was a pleasing situation but it was not disclosed sufficiently in advance to permit of the surplus being used for a cut in taxes.

Only a small part of the present fiscal year has gone but the revenue returns are such as to indicate that the income is running beyond last year over corresponding periods. That means that there will be a sufficient sum to permit of a reduction in the income taxes, and it is recognized that there are opportunities for giving relief to those who should have it. Between now and the time of the president's message there will be opportunity for getting a better idea as to the amount that should be fixed with safety for tax reduction.

It has been insisted regularly that there should be no such slicing as would result in a deficit. No deficits have resulted, due to a combination of good judgment in making tax reductions and generally prosperous conditions. Whatever surpluses have accumulated have been turned to debt reductions which always operate indirectly to effect a lowering of taxes. With four tax cuts in eight years the federal government is preparing for a fifth and the country hears the good news with elation.

THE COMING CONFERENCE

Though the invitations are not out it will not be long before the call is issued for another naval conference, to be held this time in London. Hitherto it has been the policy of sounding the respective nations as to whether they were ready to enter a conference for the purpose of discussing naval changes such as might be expected to be advanced. That might even be followed now but for the fact that this country and Great Britain have been discussing an agreement between themselves, and at the same time it has been revealed to the assembly of the league of nations what the purposes of the discussion were and that they would not be confronted with the proposition of signing on the dotted line.

In all probability there will be a complete understanding between the United States and Great Britain, following the conference of Premier MacDonald with President Hoover and representatives of this country. It is time that there was an agreement in regard to naval limitations, but with that ready for elaboration in case of endorsement by other countries much is expected from the projected London conference. While it is undoubtedly true that the United States, Great Britain and Japan could come to an early understanding in regard to further limitations, it is not to be overlooked that there are problems involving Great Britain and France and there is that old-time race between France and Italy.

As between the British and French the main difficulty will probably center about submarines. The British want to have them abolished. The French have always been insistent upon them. There are hopes that some limitation looking to eventual abolishment may be agreed upon but it is by no means assured.

France and Italy seem to think that they must protect themselves, one against the other, through naval construction. They haven't as yet, unless the conference discloses a different attitude, reached the point where they are prepared to curtail in this regard because of Mediterranean problems. Thus there is faced the difficulty of solving one big problem which has several smaller ones involved. Limitation has gotten where it is through discussion and it is through that channel that it should eventually reach the desired goal.

GETTING ENFORCEMENT

From the efforts which are being made to bring about an improvement in enforcement conditions in Washington, both as to drugs and liquor, some betterments may result. Just at present there appears to be a disposition on the part of some members of congress to cry down conditions without being able to say that they have offered any constructive assistance either in obtaining enforcement or in putting their fingers on conditions about which they speak. They join in the cry that conditions are bad, bootlegging is rife and enforcement is needed. Possibly it is so, but it makes a difference whether they are passing along the talk which is indulged in by many or whether they are dealing with the facts and really know what they are talking about.

In the midst of this talk, much of which is admitted to be hearsay, there is advocated the calling in of General Smedley D. Butler to take hold of the situation and dry up Washington. General Butler is known as a doer, although he failed to accomplish what was desired in Philadelphia. He failed there because of a lack of cooperation which he insisted he needed. Should he be called to Washington, is there any reason to suppose that he would get any more cooperation than he got in Philadelphia? Would he be given any better cooperation than the present enforcement authorities are getting? Would those who are raising the question of enforcement now be ready to do any more for General Butler than they are doing for the present officials?

If they would be ready to assist General Butler, why is it that they are not showing the same disposition to the existing enforcement officials? If they want enforcement and they know where conditions exist which ought not to, it would seem that they are duty bound to lend their cooperation. If after they have offered some real assistance, not mere guesswork and hearsay, they can see no better results it might be well to advocate the calling in of General Butler or some other enforcement officer, but when they shut their eyes to conditions and expect others to do the impossible it is folly to complain.

COMBATTING FOG

Fog is a terror for those on the water as well as those who are flying. Something that will dispel it, or make navigation through it safe is greatly needed. There are devices that are employed for protection as vessels proceed through such curtains, or fliers try to find their way, but what promises to be a valuable addition to existing methods was the successful test of a group of instruments by Lieutenant Doolittle at Mitchel field which were designed to overcome the danger of flying in the fog.

With no means of seeing where he was going, but guided solely by the instruments, Lieutenant Doolittle made a successful flight and landing and if other tests go to show that this can be done at any time it is going to mean a great relief to aviators and a safety provision that will mean much in the protection it will give to humanity while in the air.

These instruments have been brought out through the efforts of the Guggenheim foundation, established for the promotion of aeronautics, but if this aid can be given to fliers there seems to be no good reason why it could not be made to apply to ships. Whether it would be disclosed if other airplanes were in the way or if a side of a mountain was in the path of the airplane is not indicated. Perhaps we cannot expect too much in too short a time from the efforts that have been put forth in the study of this problem, but there is, nevertheless, satisfaction in large measure to be gained from any progress that is made in overcoming fog. It is through such advancement that we are strengthened in the belief that time will yet produce instruments or other means of overcoming the menace from fog, whether on land or sea, or in the air above or both.

LIGHTNING RODS

Perhaps you have traveled through the country and noticed new farm houses well covered with lightning rods, and there may have run through your mind the thought that such a scheme was given up a long time ago as a protective measure. Just why there should have been any such abandonment may not be understood, but the thought is backed up by the knowledge that there are not many farm houses, or farm buildings, which display such equipment. The new buildings which are thus equipped attract attention because they seem to be the exception. The equipment indicates a return to the practice of other days, and a step in behalf of prevention.

It is in this connection that a report by the National Board of Fire Underwriters makes interesting reading when it states that the chance of an unprotected farm building being destroyed is 57 times as great as that of the protected one. Thus, even though it has been possible to show that such protection has not prevented buildings being struck by lightning, the experience of country residents has been highly favorable where the lightning rods have been employed.

It might be difficult to pick a place that would be absolutely safe in a thunderstorm, even though it might be pointed out that certain buildings have never been struck and no one has ever been injured in those buildings, for there is no telling when the unexpected will happen. The record which shows that buildings with conductors are the safer, through actual experience, furnishes evidence that will provide a legitimate excuse for increasing such equipment and therefore lends much encouragement to the return of the lightning rod agent.

ON THE OTHER FOOT

When you are aged two and a half you throw things. Anything. Vases make a lovely sound crashing on the brick of the fireplace. Silver spoons are grand when your aim is good and you hit a water glass or a soup plate. Ash trays occupied by burned debris are splendid if you succeed in managing a sort of slicing stroke that sprays the contents out over the thick Chinese rug. Bobby Smith, with the direct eye and pudgy roll to his walk, was one of the most expert throwers in the neighborhood. His distracted mother was in despair. His father was philosophical.

"Why expect him to listen to reason?" he wanted to know. "Grown persons generally refuse to listen to reason, and he is merely getting an early start. The habit shows he has initiative and resource!"

"Resource your eyeball," retorted Bobby's mother, who had just crawled under the davenport to retrieve three sharp pieces of a broken bonbon dish and who hated undue exercise. "It shows he is a desperate child with no regard for other persons 'property and I have no doubt whatever that he will spend most of his adult life in prison unless something is done about it!"

"Don't be silly," warned Bobby's father. "It's just childish prankling."

Another thing you like to do when you are two and a half is to roam in the early gray dawn when parents are asleep. Bobby Smith would have been an inspiration to burglars could they have seen the expert way in which he wrapped himself around the railing of his crib, scaled it and slid down to the floor. Very quietly, because noise always attracted parents, when then wanted to know why and what for. He hung for some minutes over the open window ledge in the big front bedroom, where he had wandered, listened to the tinkle of melting ice and surveyed the wet grayish snow covering all the yards. He turned back into the room. Lots of things were lying about.

Picking up one parental shoe Bobby trotted to the open window and threw it out. It fell ker-plop into an icy puddle. It was fun. He threw the other one. He threw the vest and the coat, the shirt with the gold cuff links, the woolly bathrobe, the trousers. They scattered over the leafless bridal-wreath bushes, over where the peonies would be later on, everywhere. They made an ensemble effect which suggested the return home of a riotous parent who had undressed with haste, wishing to seek slumber as soon as possible. The collie from two doors down across and after a meditative pause departed with one shoe. A light rain began to fall.

There was the long, low, slowly rising, hideous moan of the siren whistle which was the village call to arms of the volunteer firemen who assisted the small permanent force at the engine house. Suburban fire is a serious affair. Half awake, Bobby's father sprang out of bed and groped for garments. He opened one eye, he opened two, he began to shout excitedly. Bobby's mother said why, it was absolutely impossible, and began running around the room distractedly, looking behind things.

Bobby's father had dashed head-on into his closet and was hurling things out into the room as an Airedale hurls back rocks and sand when digging for a gopher. The siren was shrieking its head off. Neighboring cars tore by. "I could go in a bathrobe," he stuttered. "But there isn't any! Why should burglars take a bathrobe?"

The fire was out before Bobby's father got into his masquerade attire of golf trousers, short socks, bedroom slippers and a sweater. And while the discussion raged regarding the ingress and egress of the burglar, the milkman rang the back door bell. He carried an armful of clothing and an understanding grin.

"I just picked 'em up, Mr. Smith," he said confidentially. "From all over the side yard. You must have sort of dropped them in a hurry when you came in last night, didn't yuh?"

"Something," announced Mr. Smith sternly and judicially over the breakfast oatmeal some time later, "has got to be done about that child's habit of throwing things. I should think you'd have realized that long ago!"—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24—Encouraging progress of the British-American naval conversations invites the reflection that, after all, it is an implement of future British-American diplomacy, not a weapon of war, that is being forged.

Which was precisely the primary aim of the original Washington naval treaty. In that instance, however, the important theatre was the Pacific; the important naval ratio was that between the United States and Japan.

In acceding to the proposition that Japan's naval power should be as three is to five compared to that of the United States, President Harding and Secretary Hughes had to face the fixed belief of American naval authorities that victory in far eastern waters could not be assured except on a naval ratio as of two to one compared to Japan.

And in accepting a new limiting figure for all fleet purposes as compared with the United States, Great Britain faces the necessity of making a similar concession. She must agree that hereafter that ancient and arrogant British ditty, "Britania Rules the Waves," shall terminate in a question mark, at least, instead of a period.

Theory of Peace.

Presumably the theory of all naval limitation or reduction conversations is that naval strength is to be regretted rather as a weapon of diplomacy than of war.

Such agreements assume first of all that there is not going to be any armed clash between the countries involved.

On no other theory would any power be justified in limiting its defensive armament.

So, in the case of the 5-3 ratio treaty, Washington made a very peaceful gesture toward Japan. It was agreed that, despite her economic capacity to fashion and maintain an overwhelming superior fleet, the United States actually would have a naval strength perhaps incapable of enforcing her will in distant waters.

That enormously increased Japanese diplomatic negotiating power. It put her virtually on a basis of diplomatic equality with the United States in discussin far eastern questions.

And now comes the Hoover-MacDonald naval accord, which admittedly will not represent absolute naval parity. The thing that certainly will be obvious about it when details are revealed is that the proposed composition of the two auxiliary fleets will be such as to make it doubtful in any future war where Great Britain is a belligerent and the United States a neutral, that the treatment accorded neutral commerce would be as arbitrary as it was under British orders in council during the World war.

Must Protect Herself.

The fleet ratios must be such as to afford the United States reasonable hope of successfully maintaining by arms her own conception of freedom of the seas if forced to that alternative.

And the effect of that clearly would be to insure diplomatic treatment of differences of opinion on the point, and hinder resort to arms by either country, since the military outcome would be uncertain.

Whatever may be the arrangement of ships and guns in the so-called yardstick formula of the proposed accord, clearly it must amount to absolute diplomatic parity in the eyes of Mr. Hoover and his advisers to be acceptable.

That the actual fleet ratios should be arrived at only at some future day, Great Britain maintaining the more powerful naval armament up to that time, is only a detail.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Days of Golden Rule Are Gone

Mr. Editor: May I voice a matter through your columns that I think others will agree to?

Why is it that a person who buys a license to have a dog and thinks enough of it to pay for having it, can't keep it?

I had a very nice Scotch collie that is trained to do many things. On Thursday, Sept. 19, he got out of the house and came downtown.

I saw him from where I work and went after him but automobiles got between us and he simply dropped out of sight at the corner of Rose alley.

I know that he would come home if he were not confined or had been taken in a machine so far that he could not find his way back.

He had a tag and collar on and it seems to me that if a person found him they could at least go to the town clerk's office and find out to whom he belongs and in some way communicate with them. Also I wonder if they stop to think that perhaps he may have been the sole companion of some elderly person or a small child.

In this case he was the companion of an elderly man who is alone all day and is missing him very much.

I wonder how, whoever has my pet would feel if somebody took the only companion of their old age and kept them apart?

It used to be, a few years ago, that you could have pets and they belonged to you but, these days, if anyone sees anything they want they take it and don't consider it stealing.

The days of the Golden Rule seem to be past.

Some Real Men

Mr. Editor: I am deeply interested in the controversy that is going on relative to the Post-Gager burial plot. And as I read I cannot help but think that the one who is trying to keep this hallowed spot from the gradual encroachment of this age of commercialism is to be commended for her brave fight to prevent what would appear, as I understand it, as a desecration of God's Acre. Candidly, I must admit that without the cooperation of the powers that be there will not be any hopes realized to save this or any other section that is in the way of the onward march of progress. Perhaps I do not rightly understand the question that is involved, or what is behind it all, but there must be some vital question at stake when Edith Huntington Wilson makes such a valiant fight for its solution.

For some people there seems a sort of fascination in strolling through a churchyard. This is not of recent years but was incident to the years that have passed. No doubt the reader has at some time read what is considered one of the most beautiful poems in any language, Grey's Elegy In A Country Churchyard. What stories are contained here and are hid from mortal view! All alike are sleeping here; the artist, the poet, the brilliant man of letters. All are on a common level. The mystery of life and death none of us can comprehend. It may have been told to us by those who try to explain; beyond this we do not know. And yet we live and hope, for all paths no matter how bright they may have been, end here.

Just recently I had some business to transact in New York state and, having a little time to spare, I visited the historic cemetery at West Point. Here sleep many brilliant men. I may mention a few, such as Major General Butterfield, who was the chief of staff to General Hooker at Lookout Mountain; General George A. Custer, who was killed with his entire command on June 25, 1876; General Fred D. Grant, son of the great Union general, U. S. Grant; General Robert Anderson, the hero of Fort Sumter, and he will be recalled by the remaining Boys in Blue. Here, too, are others; notably a cadet who, too, showed himself a real man. And there is a story connected with this. Perhaps the reader at some time may have had the extreme pleasure of going by boat across the Great Lakes from Buffalo to Detroit. This is perhaps one of the finest sails on the inland waters in this country in the summer months, calm and peaceful, but in the fall of the year, the storms coming down from the north country oftimes lash the waters against the shores in a fury and then it becomes very dangerous. Many vessels have been driven out of their course and become wrecked upon the shore. At one time a vessel was driven ashore and the waves were gradually pounding it to pieces. It was found impossible to get a line to it to help the people off the boat, when a little boy about 14 years of age volunteered to swim out and carry a line to the vessel. At first he was not listened to, for it was considered too hazardous. Finally, as a last resort he was allowed to try it and, with the line tied to him, he started and after a desperate struggle against the waves reached the vessel and then the people were brought to safety. The boy was the hero of the occasion. They wanted to reward him, but his answer was, No, I want no money. But he said, "I wish I could be a cadet at West Point.' His wish was gratified and men of influence got busy and he received his appointment and graduated with high honors. On the outbreak of the Civil war he went with many others as a defender of his beloved flag and country. Here, too, he showed himself a real man, as have many others. At one time he with others had a furlough coming to them as their due, but he did not take it for, as he had told them, "My place is here at the front." He rejoined his company and in an engagement just 48 hours later he was killed in one of the battles of the Civil war. And here he is sleeping, like many others, just waiting for the bugle call to fall in. All real men. So, perhaps, in this cemetery that is in contention there may perhaps be someone who had to face the privations and hardships of the early Colonial days when this country was in the building. And surely the ones who today are enjoying the fruits of their hard work ought at least to respect their memory enough to leave their resting place undisturbed until the final call. And may I say this:

By fairy hands their knell is rung;
By forms unseen their dirge is sung.
Their honor comes, a pilgrim gray
To bless the turf that wraps their clay;
And freedom shall awhile repair,
To dwell, a weeping hermit, there!

The business of the world moves on and gives no thought of the past.

YOUR HEALTH

A Man is Drowning Do You Know What to Do?

By E. B. Marx, Athletic Director
Baltimore, Maryland

The prevention of drowning is becoming a greater problem every year. In Maryland alone in 1926 there were, of all deaths, 0.57 per cent. deaths due to drowning, and during the year of 1927, the total number of deaths caused by drowning, in Maryland, was 0.76 per cent., of all the deaths. Obviously you are asking yourself, why should there be an increase in the number of deaths by drowning from year to year? Of course, logically, there should not be an increase with the opportunities offered today for water education. However, the fact still remains and is due to the thousands that migrate with the warm weather to water front resorts and water front communities (and these increase in vast numbers every year), who through carelessness, lack of water education, and neglect, become involved in water accidents. The problem of the prevention of drowning, as I see it, resolves itself into two fields. The first lies in the field of education and the second into actual rescue and resuscitation.

There are many agencies where men, women and children may learn to swim, and this should be the first step towards the promotion of water safety. But just learning to swim does not prevent loss of life by drowning. Each swimmer is a potential life saver, and should know at least the rudiments of life saving, for it is impossible to know when one may have to meet an emergency while in or near the water; and even a slight knowledge of life saving may prevent the loss of life by drowning.

The swimmer who wishes to become a life saver, or finds himself in the position of performing a rescue, must remain cool and must conserve his strength. First look for a boat in which to make the rescue, and if this is not available, look for a life preserver, log, board or anything that can be used as a support for the victim. As a last resort, the swimmer must go after the victim when there is no equipment at hand. But this form of rescue is the most dangerous to both the victim and the one performing the rescue.

It is safest to approach the drowning man from the rear. Swim to a point directly behind the subject, reach a hand under his chin and pull the head back at the same time, working both bodies to a horizontal position. If this is difficult, place the free hand against his hips and swim with your feet. When his body is horizontal, release the hip, push and start swimming with this free hand. And when the body is going along smoothly in the horizontal plane, change to a carrying position.

Sometimes it is impossible to approach from the rear. Then the underwater approach should be used. In this method, the life saver, when about 6 to 10 feet in front of the subject, should go under water and swim to the front of the subject, about knee level, grasp his knees and turn him around, remain behind him and come to the surface without losing touch of him, and then proceed as in the rear approach.

The positions used for carrying the subject while in the water are many and varied and are suitable for different types of swimmers. Perhaps those most used are the head carry, the cross-chest carry and the hair carry. In doing the head carry (all carries are performed from in rear of the subject) place the palms of your hands over the ears of the subject, holding his chin out of the water and swim using a frog or scissors kick. In using the cross-chest, reach across one shoulder and the chest, of the subject and place your hand under the opposite arm pit. Support the subject on your uppermost hip and swim a side stroke. This carry carry is good when the subject is struggling. For the hair carry place your hand on the top of the victim's head with the fingers towards his forehead and grasp a handful of hair. Swim on your side using the side stroke.

After reaching shore with the victim, the most important part of the rescue is still to be accomplished, and this is the performance of artificial respiration. But it is of utmost importance to remember that artificial respiration should be used only when the victim is unable to breathe.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Peter Teases Flip.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Who would his friends and neighbors please
Will find it doesn't pay to tease.
—Old Mother Nature.

What was that? Flip the Terrier threw up his head to listen. That noise had come from inside the dear Old Briar Patch. It could mean but one thing and this was that some one was in there. There it was again—thump, thump! Flip's ears were cocked forard. He stood perfectly still, excepting for a little quiver that ran over him now and then. It was a quiver of excitement. He was staring into the dear Old Briar Patch. It was dark in there and he could see nothing. Once more sounded that thump, as if some one were striking the ground hard. Then Flip got a glimpse of someone or something moving.

Of course, you know who was thumping. It was Peter Rabbit. There was anger in those thumps. Yes, sir, there was an angry sound to those thumps. Finally, Peter began to hop along one of those private little paths. He was hoppin along toward Flip. He wanted Flip to see him. Peter had a plan in his head. Yes, sir, Peter had a plan in his head. He wanted Flip to be taught a lesson. He couldn't possibly hurt Flip himself, but perhaps he could get the friendly briars to help.

For the first time Flip got a good view of Peter and instantly he began to dance about excitedly. "That's the fellow I chased into the hole in the old wall!" he exulted. "Yes, sir, that's the very same fellow! There isn't any old wall here and I'll get him." He began to follow along on the outer edge of the dear Old Briar Patch as Peter moved along inside. When he came to one of Peter's little paths he started to crawl in. But there was a bramble bush right there and though he flattened himself as much as he could, those brambles made him yelp. Meanwhile Peter had moved along, grinning as he heard those little yelps.

Flip was growing more and more excited. Every time he came to a little opening that seemd to lead into the dear Old Briar Patch, he rushed at it and tried to get in. Each time it brought a yelp—sometimes two or three—for each time the brambles scratched him. Peter Rabbit was enjoying it. He grew bolder. He would stop and sit in plain sight just back of a bramble bush, and chuckle to himself as Flip grew more and more excited and did his best to get in there. Peter was teasing Flip.

Meanwhile, little Mrs. Peter was keeping out of sight. She didn't approve of what Peter was doing. She didn't approve at all. But there was nothing she could do about it and so she sat still. Flip hadn't discovered her at all. It made her nervous to have that dog barking outside the dear Old Briar Patch and doing his best to get in. What if he should succeed in getting in? He was a small dog and he might get in. She did wish that Peter would stop his teasing.

Peter didn't stop. He grew bolder. He hadn't the least bit of fear. He hoped that dog would get inside the dear Old Briar Patch. You see, he knew that at best Flip could no more than creep along those little paths of his where they went through the brambles. Peter could hop along through them comfortably, but any one bigger than Peter would have to crawl through them and would be likely to be well scratched doing it. That is the reason Peter was not afraid. That is the reason he grew bolder and bolder in his teasing of Flip.

CHILD TRAINING

Freedom Necessary For Growth

Elsie F. Kartack

The apartment below me was rented. I realized this as I opened the lower hall door, for these words greeted me, "Daddy will slap you, John, if you touch his cigarettes again."

"A child!" I exclaimed to myself, "cooped up in that three-room apartment."

It was several days before I saw John. He stood on a chair looking out of the window trying to find something to interest him. His downcast little face lit up at my smile and he tried to hold me with some baby exclamations. I judged from the glance that I gave him that he was less than two years old and had just mastered the art of walking—at the age when everything is new and interesting, the age when his own powers were just becoming known to him. I passed on my way with my heart full of pity for the child.

"But why," you may ask, "was this child to be pitied? Was he not the child of parents who could provide him with the proper food and clothing to make him comfortable and even give him many of the luxuries of life?"

Yes, but could you live with me a few days and hear, as one does hear living in such close proximity with neighbors, you would understand why, provided, of course, that you understood the needs of little children. From the time when I return from my work at four until I retire, I hear the same statement, with variations, that I heard the day that they moved in, "Daddy is going to slap you if you touch that," or, "Take your fingers off," or, "Stop bothering us," or, "Go away."

With life just beginning, with everything new and interesting, a child must touch something, must investigate, must do something to develop his new-found powers. In a three-room apartment there is not much room to develop even the muscles of his little body without getting in someone's way, to say nothing of developing his intellectual powers through investigation, without trespassing upon some of the property of his parents.

Even the radio seems to have more rights than he, for its voice is heard all the time, disturbing the child's rest, wrecking his nerves and spoiling his disposition. In the evening when there is company, there is no place far enough from the chatter and the radio, in the small quarters, to allow him to sleep!

Occasionally the door into the hall is left ajar and then the child escapes, raises his voice to the limit and kicks up his heels for pure joy, like a colt that has been long tied in the barn. But it is a short-lived respite, for he is quickly caught and brought back with, "You know you must not make a noise here." For it is a rule that anyone with a noisy child cannot remain.

Would not a wise and understanding mother wish to sacrifice her select neighborhood and janitor service for a little house on the outskirts where her child could have a yard in which to play? Would she not willingly sacrifice her sense of ease and comfort and elegance for a home less pretentious but more room? so that her child might have a place to keep his toys and to play with them unmolested in the daytime and where he could sleep undisturbed at night?

According to Joe and Janice, two 16-year-old twins, answering questions about themselves gets rather monotonous. Recently they determined they would have a little fun out of it.

It started when a new girl at the store where they work part time asked: "How old are both of you girls?"

Joe correctly replied: "Both of us are 32!"

"Thirty-two!" the new girl exclaimed, "why you don't look as though you were more than 16!"

DESSERTS THAT A MAN WILL LIKE

Try This Rhubarb Cobbler.
Recommended Especially for Men

Fill a deep pudding dish with 1 quart rhubarb. Add 1 cup sugar, orange peel, and ½ cup water. Cook 4 minutes on top of the stove. Place small rounded dough biscuits on top of the rhubarb and bake in a hot oven (400° F.) 10 to 12 minutes.

Rhubarb is now in the market practically all the year, and so many people, especially men, are fond of appetizing and satisfying rhubarb desserts.

An old cooking secret, recently rediscovered, is of importance to every woman—hence also to every man and every child. Food scientists teach us that vegetables are one of the three essential foods. Children and adults must eat plentifully of vegetables. A dash of sugar added to the vegetables while they are cooking in little water works wonders with the vegetable flavors. It does not make them taste sweet. It makes these healthful foods so fresh, bright and delicious that people will eat enough of them. Serve at least two vegetables daily.

Use sugar in making stewed fruits delicious and in making appetizing milk desserts. Fruits and milk are the other two essential foods. Use a dash of sugar in preparing meat dishes and in making better gravies and sauces. A little sugar is the friend of good cookery. Good food promotes good health. The Sugar Institute.

GAVE SONG RECITAL FOR ROTARY MEETING

Henry J. LaFontaine, vocalist and pianist of the Norwich Rotary club, gave a most pleasing song recital at the meeting of the club on Wednesday noon at the Wauregan hotel. Mr. LaFontaine opened his recital with Periel (Tosti), a cycle of three Italian love songs. In his rendition of the songs, Mr. LaFontaine showed a deep appreciation of the love theme that ran through and sang with great understanding.

From the Italian, Mr. LaFontaine went to the lighter English lyrics, giving Why So Pale, Fond Lover (Suckling) and Captain Stratton's Fancy (Deems Taylor). In these Mr. LaFontaine brought out the lilting qualities in an exceptionally brilliant way. His next was Pauvres Fous (Taglifico), which was followed by the Kashmiri Love Song (Finden). He closed his recital with Gloria (Buzzi Peccia), rendering this in a marvelous range of tone and expression.

The recital was highly appreciated by the members of the club, who were warm in their applause. Charles J. Dyer, who has taken a very active interest in Mr. LaFontaine's musical career, paid compliment to his ability as a singer and pianist. Main Building Planned For New London County Home

THREE BRICK BUILDINGS IN GROUP FOR NEW LONDON COUNTY HOME

Three brick buildings, of which the main building is to be fireproof, are to constitute the new county home property on the site on Laurel Hill road, on which the county commissioners are now asking bids, which are to be in the hands of George H. Bradford, chairman of the board, by Oct. 3. The group will include the main building, the school building and the isolation cottage, and the estimated cost has been placed at $250,000.

The front of the main building is 127 feet long. The two wings on the end are at an angle of 45 degrees which gives light and air from all sides. The ground floor is to be used for the heating plant, laundry, meter room, etc. On the main floor the center wing contains the kitchen and dining room. The two diagonal wings on the ends of the building contain large playrooms. The center of the main portion of the building on this floor is occupied by a living room, sewing room and a main office. The boys will occupy the northerly wing and the girls the southerly wing of the building with the utilities in between.

On the second floor the north wing is occupied by the boys' dormitory and the south wing by the girls' dormitory and the central wing contains the rooms for the staff. On this floor are the toilet rooms and rooms for the older boys and older girls. This building is to be finished with selected face brick and is to have a large porch in the front. The roof is to be slate with copper gutters and conductors.

The school building is connected with the main building by a corridor about 60 feet long, enabling the children to pass from the main building into the school rooms without going out doors.

The school building contains three class rooms which are so arranged with movable partitions that one class room can be used in connection with a hall giving a seating capacity for 125 for assembly purposes. The class rooms will have modern lighting, heating and ventilation. Toilet accommodations are also provided.

The isolation cottage is of brick, colonial design, containing eight rooms in addition to the baths. This building is to be located northerly of the main building but without any connection between the two.

The heating is to be done from one central plant located on the ground floor of the main building. The heating plant consists of two boilers so valved that either one or both may be used. The plumbing will be modern in every respect.

The land was obtained from the state of Connecticut and is a portion of what was known as the "Davis farm." When the land was purchased a right was also obtained to run an independent sewer line from this group of buildings down to the river. A septic tank to take care of the sewage is to be installed, under supervision of the state department of health.

Judge Ells To Be Speaker

Invitations have been sent out by mail for the annual meeting of the women's auxiliary of the W. W. Backus hospital, when Judge Arthur F. Ells, of the superior court, is to be the speaker next Tuesday evening at Slater hall.

RESERVES DECISION IN SUIT OVER FAIRGROUNDS

Decision was reserved by Judge Earnest C. Simpson in the superior court here Wednesday afternoon after hearing trial of the suit of Gilbert S. Raymond, receiver of the New London County Agricultural society, against Attorney George H. Gilman and his brother, Francis Gilman, to compel payment of a balance of $18,500 on the purchase of the county fairgrounds property at East Great Plain on which George H. Gilman bid $15,750 at public auction on the first of May and paid $2,000 down.

Attorney Gilman argued his own case and Edmund W. Perkins was counsel for the receiver.

Judge Simpson denied a motion for non-suit made by Attorney Gilman and denied it again when it was renewed later in the trial by Attorney Gilman. He also denied Mr. Gilman's motion to dismiss the case against his brother Francis.

In his arguments on the case, Attorney Gilman attacked the way in which the receiver had been appointed by the court and made the claim that Judge Brown had no power to modify an order made by Judge Avery which directed that the real estate and the personal property should be sold together. This order was modified by Judge Brown so that the real estate and personal property could be sold separately. He also argued that the newspaper advertisements of the sale contained the date Monday, May 1, which should have been Wednesday, May 1, and also that no mention was made of personal property and the words "assuming the mortgage" were used instead of "subject to the mortgage." As to the bond for deed, he claimed that he signed this individually for himself, that Francis Gilman did not sign it, and could not be bound by it. There were errors in the bond for deed, he said, some of the blanks were not filled in and by the use of the word "obligor" where it should have been "obligee," the bond called on Mr. Raymond to pay Mr. Gilman $13,500 instead of the other way around. For these various reasons he claimed that the receiver could not give a good deed and he was not obliged to pay the balance if he couldn't get a good deed.

At one point in the attorney's argument Judge Simpson asked if he wasn't trying to get out from under a bad bargain, but Mr. Gilman replied that wasn't so for he had an offer now for the property which would give him a profit of $5,000, if he could give a warranty deed.

All these claims by Mr. Gilman were disputed by Attorney Perkins, who claimed that whatever errors had been made were immaterial and irrelevant, that the legal requirements had been met and the receiver should have judgment in the case.

Witnesses called by the receiver's attorney were Charles E. Hickey, assistant court clerk, and Receiver Raymond.

After their testimony, Mr. Gilman moved for a non-suit and when this had been denied he called two witnesses to the stand, Martin E. Jensen, treasurer of the society, and Joseph C. Worth, before the testimony was closed.

WILL SEEK DELINQUENTS ON INCOME TAX PAYMENTS

An intensive state-wide campaign against "delinquent" income tax payers will be launched this week, Colonel Robert O. Eaton, collector of internal revenue for this district has announced. The campaign will be directed against persons who have been profiting in the stock market, and brokers may be compelled to reveal the names and addresses of their customers for whom business was transacted during the calendar year.

Persons suspected of having made false returns will be carefully investigated, and in the event intent to defraud the government seems apparent they will be prosecuted, Colonel Eaton indicated.

Anyone found guilty of making a false return is liable to a fine of $1,000 or a year in prison, or both, at the discretion of the court, with costs of prosecution.

In cases where erroneous returns have been made without intent to defraud penalty of 25 per cent of the tax plus 12 per cent interest a year on the total amount involved, is provided.

TOWN HEALTH DEPARTMENT MAKES ANNUAL REPORT

The annual report of the town health department as submitted to First Selectman William S. Murray is as follows:

The advisory committee of school nursing: Dr. Harrison Gray, town health officer, chairman; Mrs. Harrison Gray, vice chairman; Mrs. Charles C. Gilbert, secretary; Dr. Edward J. Brophy, Edward J. Graham, Dr. Albert C. Freeman, William S. Murray, Dr. Edward Kirby.

The committee has met regularly throughout the year to discuss various phases of the work, and while ideals have not been attained, yet we are confident that a great improvement in the general condition of the school children has been made.

What is the value of all these examinations? What good comes of finding defects? How many children have defects corrected and how are they benefitted? These and many other similar questions which are so often asked by the public concerning our school children are answered in the report of school nurses which we commend to your careful consideration.

In every case the child's best possible health is the ideal for which we strive.

A dental hygienist has been employed throughout the year, visiting every school in town. All the children in the first and second grades had their teeth cleaned and were given an opportunity to have them filled, if necessary, by a dentist at reduced prices. Our nurses were represented at the Health institute, held in Hartford, and later two nurses attended the International Congress of Nurses at Montreal.

The character of the school nurse's work has followed the same general lines as in previous years, notwithstanding an increased school population in both public and parochial schools.

As usual at the opening of the school year all children were weighed and measured, all parents of children who were 10 per cent. or more underweight were notified and instructive literature given them, as a result a great many of the underweight children came up to their normal weight during the school year.

The nurses assisted the examining physicians with the annual physical examinations and notified all parents of children having defects. The majority of children needing glasses have obtained them and with the aid of the Tonsil Clinic at the William H. Backus hospital and this department, 100 children have had their tonsils and adenoids removed during the summer.

The school nurses have assisted in the control of communicable diseases by regular daily classroom inspections. Children suspicious of illness are excluded from school not only for their own benefit but for the protection of other children.

With the outbreak of smallpox during the early spring the nurses not only assisted the physicians vaccinating school children but assisted daily at the clinic held by the city health officer.

Four hundred and sixty-four children were given toxin-antitoxin treatment for the prevention of diphtheria.

Through the courtesy of the visiting nurses and their clinics a number of children have been sent there for diagnosis.

Number school visited 1,006; class inspections 4,317; pupils inspected (general) 154,969; pupils inspected (contagion) 1,549; impetigo 235; pediculosis 147; excluded for illness 185; excluded for uncleanliness 123; referred to family physicians 120; parents notified 1,115; follow-up visits to homes 1,639; follow-up visits to schools 40; class talks given 408; first aid at school and office 6,421; classrooms visited 491; certificates issued 320; telephone calls 63.

FAST BLACK ON COTTON STARTED IN STERLING MILL

Some time ago mention was made in The Bulletin of the old Stone Mill at Sterling, Conn. A Norwich man, Attorney John Dixon Hall, in his early days states that he frequently saw the old mill. It was well built of cut faced stone, several stories high, not a large mill, but one that must have been quite pretentious at the time it was built. It was then in the seventies, vacant and idle, and had been for a good many years prior to and after that date, but was in a good state of preservation.

Questioned this week regarding the mill, Judge Hall explained that it was related to him that the mill was built about or before the year 1800 by Dixon Hall, and the latter, who was John D. Hall's great grandfather, lost his life in the mill in the early twenties of the last century. His first name was derived from his mother's family, the Rhode Island and Westerly Dixons.

Political Leaders

From the period of 1800 to 1825, as the early records disclose, this Dixon Hall and a Lemuel Dorrance seemed to have carried the political district of Sterling in their pockets, and just after the time, in 1800, when state senators ceased to be called "Assistants to the Governor," one or the other of them was continually in the senate or house, either at New Haven or Hartford, when the state had dual capitals. Dixon Hall was a member of the state convention in 1818.

Sterling in the seventies and eighties was a moribund place. Then something happened that opened the old mill and made Sterling see better times. It was when James Pike made the discovery of a fast-black dye for cotton goods—and thereby hangs an interesting tale and a romance of business.

Before this time no black would remain fixed on cotton, and it may be of interest to state how it all come about.

Owner of Sap Works

Mr. Pike resided at Sterling, it is recalled, and was the owner and successful operator of several wood acid plants, called in common parlance "sap works." There was one at Sterling, Oneco, and at Hazard's mills, West Greenwich, R. I., and some others. Pike came frequently to Hazard's mills; he was a bright, active man, in the forties then, and far above the average in ability. It is of interest to know how these acid plants were operated. The system was quite simple. They were housed in a shed-like building, consisting of a battery or tier of six or more cylindrical, air-tight retorts, or drums, some six feet in diameter, and some fifteen feet in length, with a removable head-plate, which was clamped on and sealed with clay. All was supported by masonry, with a long fire box under each retort. The head-plate was removed and each drum filled with cord-length white birch wood, the head-plate put back, and wood fires started under each retort. The vapors, etc., were driven off through rear pipes connecting the retorts and condensed in pipes placed in a large wooden tank filled with cold running water.

Sent To Print Works

The resultant product was a rather thick dark distillate, which was placed in very large wooden butts, or tuns, shipped to the Cranston, R. I. print works and used in the manufacture of calicos. From some of this distillate at Sterling was made acetic acid, glauber-salts and other products. After several days of day and night firing, (two men doing all the work) and no distillate running off, the drum head was taken off, and the by-product, charcoal, was raked from the drums and sold to peddlers, a good portion of it coming to Norwich.

Pike was considerable of a chemist, and he began experiments to find a fast black dye for cottons; after several years of hard work and considerable expense, he achieved it, but his money was all gone. He had been a railroad commissioner of this state and was well acquainted in Norwich.

Backed By Norwich Capital

So he came to Norwich and laid his black dye formula and samples before his Norwich friends. They were interested, money was raised by a stock company of which the late Hugh H. Osgood and Allen Tenny were members, and the formula for the fast black dye was locked up in the vaults of the-then-Thames National bank.

Utilized Old Stone Mill

Pike, thereupon, opened up the old stone mill, after many years of idleness, went to work and began operations dyeing cotton stockings and cloth. The business succeeded, for a fast black on cotton was a fact and not a dream. He continued the mill in successful operation until the business was sold out to the U. S. Finishing company.

The old mill still stands, but is enclosed by many additions and new buildings. Sterling took on new life, all due to Pike and his fast black dye.

The late Horace Hall, of Williamantic, was a son of the above Dixon Hall and the late Judge John M. Hall and Dr. Dixon S. Hall were grandsons.

TO PLANT TREES ALONG CONNECTICUT HIGHWAYS

Through its landscape division the Connecticut highway department will plant 1,322 trees along various state highways this fall, according to an announcement made today by Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald. Contract bids for the planting of these trees will be received at the Hartford office of the landscape division on October 7.

The roads to be enhanced by this fall's beautification work are in Hartford, Middlesex, New London, Tolland and Windham counties. The trees to be planted are as follows: 616 sugar maple; 561 elm; 72 pin oak; 63 Norway maple; three weeping willow; seven white ash. These species of trees have been selected by the highway department landscape experts as those most fitted for the beautification of the particular sections of road where they will be planted.

Contracts covering the fall planting will require the successful bidders to furnish the specified trees, to plant them and to care for their growth until one year from the date of planting. It will also be specified that the contractors must replace trees which die or become diseased during that period of time. Only landscape architects, nurserymen or certified tree experts are permitted to enter bids upon the work. Planting will begin not later than October 15.

HIGHEST AUGUST RECORD IN JUNIOR EGG-LAYING

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Sept. 27.—Results on the Connecticut junior egg-laying contest through the month of July have been computed, and announced by Edward S. Walford, assistant poultry specialist at Connecticut Agricultural college.

The 66 contestants who sent in their reports for August averaged 14.7 eggs per bird from their 1695 birds. This is the highest August production in the history of the contest, exceeding the former high August by .53 eggs per bird. Edward Kinsman of Sharon, is high contestant for the month with an excellent average of 25.3 eggs per bird from his twelve high grade Red pullets. He is followed closely by Laurence Dick, of Stratford; William Deegan, of Stafford; Franklyn Brockett, of Suffield; and Eugene Frank of Norwich.

The Suffield 4-H Poultry club is showing up particularly well. Mr. Walford stated. During the last year this club has won more ribbons for showing poultry and in the junior egg-laying contest than any other poultry club in the state.

The following are the contestants whose records credit them with an average production to date of more than 170 eggs: Edward H. Kinsman, of Sharon, 244; Harold McDonald, of Northford, 227; Rhoda Bartholomew, of Torrington, 217; William Deegan, of Stafford, 206; Vincent and Joseph Ruett, of Torrington, 205; Laurence Dick, of Stratford, 204; Lawrence H. Walker, of Litchfield, 203; Jack Merrill, of Suffield, 198; Elizabeth Reed, of Rockville, 191; Michael Hracvk, of Norwich, 180; Raymond, of Hanover, 176; Franklyn, of Suffield, 174; Henry Victor Hierl, of Suffield, 173; Gerald Sisson, of North Plains, 172; Arnold Emanuelsen, of Deep River, 171; Delmont Tufts, of Deep River, 171.

FORMULATING PLANS TO ORGANIZE COMMUNITY SYNAGOGUE IN NORWICH

Rabbi Ira Eisenstein, of the Jewish Theological seminary of New York city, arrived in this city Tuesday with the object of taking charge of the Community synagogue of Norwich. The new synagogue is being organized by prominent Jewish men in town who are arranging to conduct high holiday services at the Community house. The rabbi was met by the principals interested in the new synagogue at a reception held at the home of Charles Gordon. The men gathered at the reception were impressed with the outline of the project of the young rabbi whose mission in Norwich is to guide the conservative members of the Jewish community in conformity with the modern tenets of Jewdaism. Rabbi Eisenstein has advanced ideas about religion and its application for the spiritual benefit of the individual and his relation to the community.

In order to acquaint the Jewish people in town with Rabbi Eisenstein, he was invited to speak this (Thursday) evening at an open meeting to be held at the B'nai B'rith rooms, where the organization is having a joint social. The rabbi will speak on "Community Service."

The members of the community synagogue are planning for an organization meeting to be held at the B'nai B'rith rooms on Sunday evening, September 29. The object of the meeting is to devise ways and means whereby after the high holiday services, it may be possible to continue modern conservative services in Norwich. Jewish leaders who are imbued with present day tendencies feel the need of making religion attractive to the younger generation, and the move of the new community synagogue is declared to be in that direction.

This new synagogue which it is proposed to organize will make the third in the city. The other two are the Brothers of Joseph synagogue on West Main street and the United Brethren synagogue on High street, the former being the older one.

HUGGINS, MIGHTY ATOM OF BASEBALL, LOSES GALLANT BATTLE FOR LIFE

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—(AP)—Miller Huggins, the "mighty atom" of baseball, is dead.

The bantamweight manager who knew how to handle the heavyweight home run king, who manipulated the play of the most powerful team ever known to baseball, winning six pennants and three world championships in eight years with the New York Yanks, died this afternoon at St. Vincent's hospital.

The end to one of the most remarkable careers of major league leadership, one which saw Huggins battle against obstacles to produce the richest and greatest club of modern times, came at 2:10 p. m., after the diminutive manager had fought a gallant but losing fight against a complication of maladies. He was 49 years old.

Huggins was taken seriously ill less than a week ago. He was removed to the hospital last Friday mainly at the insistence of Dr. Edward H. King, club physician of the Yanks, who realized the little man was in dangerous condition. He had suffered from a protracted cold which developed into influenza. A slight infection of the face developed erysipelas and it was the combination of ailments that rapidly undermined his resistance.

Four blood transfusions were made within the past two days in an effort to save the manager's life but at no time did he rally sufficiently to develop much hope for his recovery. Death was directly due to pyaemia, the process of blood forming organisms in the blood, with infection of the face and gedema, the filling of the lungs with water, as contributory causes.

Higgins, an unyielding fighter on the diamond, nervous and aggressive, even though he never sought the limelight, did not have the nervous energy or the physical stamina to win his last battle. Never really robust, although of wiry build, he had exhausted in a major league career of 25 years most of the strength which he so badly needed in the crisis. Nevertheless, he fought hard for life and with characteristic gameness.

At his bedside when the end came were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Huggins, his brother and sister-in-law; Myrtle Huggins, his sister, and the Rev. J. E. Price, of the Washington Heights Methodist Episcopal church.

Col. Jacob Ruppert, the wealthy brewer, who selected Huggins as manager of the Yanks 12 years ago, backed him to the limit through varying fortunes and made millions through the success of the club, had spent most of the morning at the hospital, along with Edward G. Barrow, his business manager. They had left the hospital for lunch shortly before the end came.

Grief-stricken, both shared keenly the regret that was universal tonight throughout the baseball world. The spontaneous character of tributes from friends, leaders and rivals of Huggins in many a brilliant baseball conflict all testified to the high regard in which he was held. It was an especially hard blow to Colonel Ruppert, whose personal confidence in "Hug" under any and all circumstances, was rewarded by the remarkable triumphs of the Yanks.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m., Friday, at the Church of the Transfiguration, 1 East 29th street, with Dr. Price, a close personal friend of Huggins, officiating. The body will be taken Friday afternoon to Cincinnati, Huggins' birthplace, where final services will be held Sunday afternoon at the First Presbyterian church. Burial will be in Cincinnati.

All American league games scheduled Friday have been called off, by order of President E. S. Barnard, and the funeral services that afternoon will be attended in a body by the Yanks, led by Babe Ruth, out of whose battles with Huggins grew a firm friendship and mutual admiration. The Yanks were scheduled to meet Washington in the capital on Friday.

Huggins was reputed to be worth more than $250,000. At one time, he sold holdings in Florida real estate for a reported price of $150,000. His salary was understood to have been $25,000 for the last few years, having more than doubled since he took over the management of the Yanks in 1918, leading them to their first pennant three years later and repeating in 1922-23-24-27-28, with the aid of the Ruppert check book and his own ability to develop a new crop of stars.

Mayor James J. Walker of New York said: "Baseball has lost one of its most gallant leaders. The fans of New York and of the nation idolized him. He was a clean sportsman and brought credit to the national pastime. New York city and the nation mourn their loss."

DEATH OF HUGGINS KEENLY FELT BY GIANTS AND BRAVES

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—(AP)—A hush spread over the dugouts of the New York Giants and the Boston Braves today and a baseball game went on as though the players were in a daze as news of Miller Huggins' death was made known in the Polo Grounds. It was there that "the mite" won the first American league pennant for New York in 1921 when the Yanks shared the park with the Giants.

There was a let-down in the chatter and banter in the press box, where usually few things ever can upset the spirits of the "experts." Joe Dugan, now with the Braves, who last year wound up a spectacular period of service as the Yank third baseman under Huggins, came to the wire netting of the press enclosure and asked:

"Boys, is it true that Huggins is gone? I'm terribly sorry. I respected Huggins. He was a great little fellow to work for, and always gave his men a square shake. Baseball for me will hardly seem the same now."

The flag over the Giants' clubhouse was half masted as soon as possible and by the time the game reached the third inning its folds were flapping mournfully down over the face of the big clock in right centerfield.

Johnny Evers, acting manager of the Braves, choked up when he heard the news.

"I've known him longer than any other man in baseball," said the Trojan brokenly.

"It's very painful to hear he's passed away. Everybody with the Braves extends his sympathy to the brother and sister who are left."

Ray Schalk, who was in charge of the Giants today was deeply affected.

"He gave his life to the Yanks," Schalk said. "I've known him as a prince of men and a good sportsman. This is a blow to me and the rest of the Giants."

CONNIE MACK AND QUINN SPEAK IN PRAISE OF HUGGINS

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—(AP)—The Yanks and Red Sox were playing the second inning of their game here today, when word of the death of Miller Huggins, the Yanks' manager, reached Mark Roth, the Yanks' traveling secretary. He requested that the news be withheld from the players until after the game.

Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, was present with the other members of the Philadelphia team, which will open a series with the Red Sox tomorrow. Mack, a close personal friend of Miller Huggins, said:

"Miller Huggins was one of the outstanding figures of the American league and he will be greatly missed. His record has surpassed that of any other manager in the league and I have personally always felt that he had never received the full credit that was due him. He was one of the smartest baseball men the country ever had. I feel that I have lost one of my very best friends."

Bob Quinn, president of the Red Sox said:

"I have lost one of my best friends. I have known Miller Huggins since he left school in 1898 and when he first started baseball in Mansfield, Ohio. We always have been close and intimate. His death is a distinct loss to baseball. He went to New York under most discouraging circumstances and started the greatest career of any man in the game when he successfully overcame the obstacles that faced him when he first took over the Yanks."

McGRAW PAYS TRIBUTE TO THE "MIGHTY ATOM"

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—(AP)—One of the first to pay tribute to Miller Huggins, doughtily little manager of the New York Yanks, who died today, was John McGraw, pilot of the Giants against Huggins' men in three world series in 1921, 1922 and 1923.

"I am very, very sorry," McGraw said. "Miller was a gallant little fighter and one of the very best managers in baseball history. He made a great fight to push the Yanks to the top and got them there. It is terrible to see him go now.

"He leaves an empty spot in baseball that can never be filled again. We'll all miss him."

President John A. Heydler, of the National league, watching the game at the Polo Grounds between the Giants and Boston Braves, was saddened at the news of the manager's death.

"All baseball men feel Huggins loss. He was in our league for 15 years. Miller was held in high respect and esteem. He was an able, resourceful leader and a splendid sportsman. His death is a distinct loss to the game."

STEPHENSON CONFIDENT CUBS WILL TAKE ATHLETICS

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—(AP)—Jackson Riggs Stephenson, the "old hoss" of the Cubs, drawled away in his best Alabam' dialect today, telling why he and his mates expect to make a "one horse shay" out of Connie Mack's Philadelphia machine in the coming world series struggle.

"Old Hoss," regarded by National league pitchers as the hardest hitter to foll in the pinches, says the Cubs will simply "ovapowah" the House of Mack.

"Ah am not much for making predictions but ah am a' thinking we'll give the Athletics plenty to worry about when we all get up thar swinging." Stevie said "with Hornsby, Wilson, Cuyler and others w ehave demonstrated we all can hit that ball. And if we all get some pitchin', we are gwan to win quickly."

One element of forecasting Stevie cannot comprehend, and that is, the claim that American league pitching is generally superior to that dished up in the Heydler circuit.

But win or lose in the championship classic, Stephenson is almost certain to play a big part. Every inch an athlete, the big Alabaman is one of the surrest hitters in the game. When runs are needed he rises to the height of his dependability. His drives are long, straight and bullet-like and on bases he is one of the smartest. Day in and day out at Wrigley field, Stevie is the hero and no series has found him lacking.

Stephenson is another football star who has succeeded. Born at Akron, Alabama, in 1899, he went to the University of Alabama where he shined three season as a fullback. He came up to the majors with Cleveland in 1921 and while he never batted less than .300, he was slowed up by a leg injury and sent to the Kansas City and Indianapolis clubs of the American Association from which he came to the Cubs in 1926. With the Bruins, he batted .288 the first year, .344 in 1927, .324 in 1928 and .355 so far this season.

MILITARY BOXING TEAM IS ORGANIZED HERE

The local military units stationed at the state armory are to sponsor a boxing team during the fall and winter, with representatives in every class. At present, Joe Besade, who is to handle the team, believes that he is fortified in every division but the heavyweight and is in the hopes that a real prospect will be found in the list of candidates available. Equipment for training is to be installed at the armory shortly.

The following are those on whom Besade places much faith: Tommy Long, of Stamford, bantamweight; Pete Gauvin, Taftville, and Battling Joie Morzerelli, featherweights; Billie Mitchell and Pete Caron, lightweights; Freddie Besade, welter; Patsy Ferra, middleweight; Eddie (Red) Fadelle, light heavyweight.

We heard of baseball and football by arc light, golf in the moonlight and tennis by electric light.

Bud didja ever see horse-shoe pitching by lantern-light? I never did until the other night—and then only for a short time.

Driving along one of our state highways, the other night (yes, friend husband was with me) when I, or rather we, noticed a lantern in a barnyard and four men around it.

Womanly curiosity was too strong to resist and we pulled up to the side of the road in a shadow to see what it was all about. There were four of the patriarchs of the village in heated conversation.

In fact, it was really more than conversation, it was a real hot argument. From what we could gather it seems that the four had engaged in a friendly (?) game of horse-sneas after the chores were done.

Everything had apparently gone well until one of the foursome had been caught pushing his horse closer to the pin with his foot. The lantern had been placed at the end where the men were throwing the shoes but each one after pitching would go up toward the pin where it was dark.

One of the men had been detected in his act and was taking a dressing down from the other three. "If ye can't play square you oughta quit the game," says one.

"Well," says the accused, "if I can't stumble over my shoe without bein' accused of cheatin' I will quit. And besides I told you that you oughta have brought another lantern."

"We would have if you hadn't been such a rotten shot last night that you busted the only one left. I can't afford a new lantern every night for you old fools to bust with horseshoes. And besides you don't furnish nothing and then drink up all the cider after the game."

"Why, you old fossil," says one, "you're sore 'cause you can't win. And as for your darned old cider, it was made from rotten apples you couldn't sell and it ain't fit to drink anyway." "Well, I noticed you drank four glasses of it last night and went home tight," comes back the other.

"If you old roosters are going to argue about the cider I'm going home," says one who ain't done much talking. Well, that kinda stopped the chin music for a minute.

"All right," says the feller that owned the cider, "Come on, we'll play but nobody is going up to the peg before everybody is through pitching the shoes and then we'll take the lantern and all go up at the same time."

Well, that seemed agreeable to the foursome and the game continued and we drove on.

RICHARDS SHOWS BRILLIANCE IN HIS TENNIS PLAY

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 25.—(AP)—Three years of professional tennis have not taken any of the fire out of the flushing, spectacular volleys that marked the play of Vincent Richrds.

Charging into the net his racquet flailing with all the impetuous fury of his amateur hey-day, Richards crushed the veteran Philadelphia chop-stroker, Wallace F. Johnson, by scores of 8-3, 6-1, 6-2, today to reach the semi-final round of the national professional singles championship in which he is defending his title.

On an adjoining court, Karel Kozelin, the Czechoslovakian, master of control who lost to Richards in the final of last year's tournament, was using totally different methods to subdue Phil Bagby of the Rockhill Tennis club, Kansas City, Mo., at 6-1, 6-2, 6-2, in the third round duel.

DETROIT, Sept. 25—(AP)—Earl Whitehill allowed St. Louis two hits up to the ninth inning in the last game of the season against the Browns here today but weakened then and lost a 3 to 2 decision for the Tigers.

The victory gave St. Louis 12 victories over the Tigers in 1929, Detroit won 10.

RALPH "CHUBBY" GIBBS ELECTED TO CAPTAIN ACADEMY BASEBALL TEAM

Ralph C. (Chubby) Gibbs, regular shortstop of the Academy team the past two years, was chosen as the 1930 captain at a meeting at the school Wednesday. Gibbs is a member of the senior class and was a unanimous choice.

Gibbs was named by many as the peer of high school short-fielders both in 1927 and '28 and was the logical man for the honor. His work has been one of the reasons for the Wildcats' success during these two campaigns.

In '27 he was rushed into the line-up to fill the post left vacant by Cimikowski, and immediately stuck. Chubby will have Bud Fontaine, catcher; Butsy Weisgraber, pitcher; Alec Arico and Sherry, infielders and Lea Crowell, catcher-outfielder, with him as lettermen to form the nucleus of the 1930 club for Coach Earle E. Brigham and to enable the mentor to win his sixth straight league title and once again cop the state championship, which was taken by Warren Harding of Bridgeport this year after resting two years in Norwich.

YANKEES NOSE OUT RED SOX IN ELEVENTH

BOSTON, Sept. 25—(AP)—Playing for five innings without knowledge of the death of their manager, Miller Huggins, in a New York hospital, the Yankees defeated the Red Sox by 11 to 10 in eleven innings here today, cleaning up two straight in their short stay in the Hub. George Pipgras rescued Frank Nekola, and gave Boston only one hit in the last three innings. At the start Nekola was opposed by Ray Dobens, his pitching mate at Holy Cross a year ago.

Just before the sixth inning started players of both teams lined up at the plate and the spectators stood in one minute of silent prayer for Miller Huggins. The midget manager passed away just after the start of the game.

MYATT'S HOMER IN 9TH GIVES INDIANS VICTORY

CLEVELAND, Sept. 25—(AP)—Glenn Myatt hoisted one of Harold McKain's fast ones over the right field wall with Joe Sewell and Johnny Hodapp on base in the ninth inning here today to give the Cleveland Indians a 9 to 7 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Harder, recruit from New Orleans, and the Indians' fourth hurler of the day, pitched the last inning and received credit for the win.

WEIL BUYS CONTROL OF CINCINNATI REDS

CINCINNATI, Sept. 25.—(AP)— Sidney Weil, wealthy young Cincinnati business man, tonight announced that he had obtained enough shares in the Cincinnati baseball club to assure his control. Within a few days he will become a director, and it is assumed will be elected to the presidency.

Weil said he believed the Reds would be a paying venture, but said his first thought would be to build up a winning team as rapidly as possible.

A week ago today Weil owned 43 shares of the club stock. Tonight he possessed 3,200 of the 6,000 shares.

No American Games Friday

CHICAGO, Sept. 25—(AP)—President E. S. Barnard today wired all American league clubs to cancel all games scheduled for Friday, the day set for the funeral of Miller Huggins, Yankee manager, who died today.

PHILLIES CUT INTO ROBINS' HOLD ON FIFTH PLACE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25—(AP)—A double conquest by the Phillies over Brooklyn today by 10 to 8 and 8 to 5 enabled the local club to whittle down the Robins' lead for fifth place to half a game.

Slugging marked both games with the Phillies winning the opener in the ninth inning on home runs by Chuck Klein and Don Hurst.

That was Klein's 40th and Hurst's 30th of the season. In the second game Klein hit his 41st and Frank O'Doul his 21st.

Babe Herman hit for the round trip with two nals on in the night-cap while Tripp Sigman who hit 41 homers this season in the Central league got his first major league circuit belt in the opening game. Score:

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 25—(AP)—The Cardinals took the series with the Cincinnati Reds today, winning the third and last game 8 to 0. It was the Cards' 18th victory out of 21 games with the Reds this season. Al Grabowski, young southpaw rookie, hurled for the Cards, making a record for himself of 25 scoreless innings. It was also Grabowski's third victory in four starts. Kolp was the losing pitcher.

SHARKEY RULES AS SLIGHT FAVORITE TO BEAT LOUGHRAN IN TONIGHT'S BOUT

By EDWARD J. NEIL
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—(AP)— The battle of the loquacious larrupers took on new life today under the encouraging rays of a warm sun.

The steady flow of customers past the Madison Square Garden box offices brought forth smiling predictions that Jack Sharkey, the talkative Tar, and Tommy Loughran, the expanded light heavyweight champion, will wage their 15-round leather warfare before 50,000 persons and a gate of $300,000 in the Yankee stadium tomorrow night. In just two days mild weather has doubled interest in the final heavyweight show of the outdoor season.

Confident that Loughran will not last beyond the sixth round, Sharkey finished up his training today with a light session at the exercising machines in a gymnasium here after quitting his outdoor conditioning grind at Orangeburg, N. Y. yesterday. He is in fine shape after a six month respite from the ring wars and will scale about 195 pounds.

Loughran, backed by all the resources of Philadelphia, merely loosened his muscles for the battle that must mark the turning point in a brilliant career. The light heavyweight king who never evaded a challenger can step into the front rank of pretenders to the vacant heavyweight throne by a decisive victory over Sharkey—defeat will push Tommy back to the ranks of the 175 pounders and the job of regaining that championship all over again.

In physical proportions, Sharkey will have a slight edge tomorrow night, including a pull in the weights of about ten pounds—Loughran hopes to balance the bar at 185 pounds, the greatest weight of his career. They are equally matched in height, reach, and speed with Loughran the better boxer and Sharkey a bit huskier puncher.

The favorite is difficult to choose and even money odds are most frequently quoted. Experts who saw old Mike McTigue handle Sharkey easily for ten rounds before breaking a blood vessel a couple of seasons ago can't see how the smooth, clever Loughran can lose. Others remember the tempermental Tar's slaughter of Jimmy Maloney and hasten to make Sharkey the favorite.

The supporting card was jolted today when Armand Emanuel, San Francisco heavyweight barrister, withdrew from his semi-final match with Jimmy Maloney because of an injured arm. No substitution has yet been made. Tom Heeney, New Zealand veteran, will meet George Hoffman, New York youngster, in the second ten round bout with Jack Gagnon, of Boston, and Lou Barba, New York, clashing in another.

GIANTS MAKE IT THREE STRAIGHT FROM BRAVES

NEW YORK, Sept. 25—(AP)—The Giants made it three straight over the Braves here today winning by 8 to 4 and reducing the second place lead of the idle Pirates to three games. Boston outhit New York 15 to 12, but Walker was tight in the pinches and hung up his seventh straight victory. The Braves erred four times. The Giants knocked out Bob Smith in five rounds. Score:

Attractive Entrance to Brooklyn Fair Grounds

BROOKLYN FAIR ATTENDED BY LARGE CROWDS; EXCELLENT RACING PROGRAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

BROOKLYN, Conn., Sept. 25.—For the 80th year people came from far and near this beautiful September day to attend the Brooklyn fair, arranged and presented each year by the Windham County Agricultural society. It seems important to set down this early in this account of this year's exhibition that it is far and away better than even members of the executive staff hoped it might be, various handicaps peculiar to this season being taken into consideration. This was demonstrated to the several thousand people attending the fair today.

No Cut Flowers Exhibited

Quarantine restrictions against the spread of the corn borer entirely eliminated all exhibits of cut flowers and various vegetables, yet, while the flowers were missed, the vegetables shown contributed about the best display of the kind seen at this fair in years. And this despite a summer-long period of drought. There were fewer cattle on the grounds today than was the case last year, due again to a seasonal handicap—lack of the usual ample water supply at the fairgrounds—but many fine animals were shown and held the attention of a great many people during the day, including that of a very considerable number of persons who, throughout the year, only look at cattle as they ride comfortably along the highways in their cars.

The fair, as a whole, is much the same as it has been for a generation. The exhibits are along the same lines, though the exhibitors change. Yet one notes the march of progress in the exhibits of sprayed fruits, scientifically grown vegetables, inoculated, pure-bred cattle, electrical and gas equipment for farms and the many other things that science has worked to bring into being to lessen labor of those who till the soil and to allow these diligent workers to produce finer and more tempting products than was possible a score of years ago.

Nice Juvenile Exhibit

This particular Brooklyn fair is of enlightening interest in one particular way, because it has so many youthful exhibitors. The youngsters are not all going to abandon the farms and the way of their fathers, it would appear. Among other things, there is a fine exhibit by the Canterbury Juvenile grange. Everything in it is the product of youthful hands and toil. One will find a boy of 11 years competing with his prize heifer in the cattle show, will ascertain that other boys have exhibits in the poultry department and that still another group of boys are right up front competing for prizes in the vegetable section. Likewise, little girls have the products of their needles and other domestic arts on display and competing strongly for honors and awards in the ladies' department. In a word, the younger generation is asserting itself at the Brooklyn fair, promising that this old-time fair will not die out for lack of interest in the allotted time of the present older generation.

Exhibition Hall Crowded

Roaming through the exhibition building today, and it was jammed to just about capacity with spectators all day long, one noted that husbandry and industry was competing for attention from the crowds. Outstanding were the competing exhibits by Brooklyn grange and Canterbury grange. These grange exhibits represent the combined efforts of the respective members to demonstrate what is being done more or less collectively in the agricultural areas they represent. Each grange this year specializes in displaying a bewildering variety of things grown or produced on the members' farms or in their homes. Vegetables, fruits, canned goods, cake, pie, bread, cream, butter, cheese, needlework and many other things figure in these exhibits. The displays would tempt the average person to get out of the rush and bustle of industrial life and seek the quiet, beautiful and bountiful countryside. Featured in each of the grange exhibits this year is a cleverly worked out farm scene. Brooklyn grange showing a home surrounded with snow-covered fields of the winter period, while Canterbury's miniature farm place was set amidst fields of growing things—real plants that seemed to be thriving in the rich soil in which they were set.

High School Exhibit

Pressing the grange exhibits for general attention was the fine vegetable display of the Killingly High school department of vocational agriculture. This display, supervised by Walter G. Bruce of the high school faculty in charge of this department, contained 45 varieties of vegetables, all grown by Killingly High school students in this course during the past summer season. It was a fine display and indicative of what Killingly High is doing to further agricultural progress.

The general display of vegetables and grains was surprisingly good and the competition for awards so keen as to make a real job for the judges who had to decide how these awards should go. There is a limited display of excellent fruits by individual exhibitors this year.

Commercial Exhibitions

Industry, commerce and banking are represented in the exhibition building by various concerns. The Connecticut Light & Power Co., Danielson division, is showing electrical appliances, gas ranges, electric washers and electric refrigerators. The Darbie Furniture Co., Danielson, has a display of Atwater Kent and Majestic radios, Heatrolas and furniture. Robert Fleishman, manager of the firm, J. W. Goddard and Nelson Richardson are in charge. J. Dyer Potter, cashier of the Cargill Trust Co., of Putnam, was in charge of the banking concern's booth, and he spent much of his time giving out souvenirs and greeting many friends, for he hails originally from Brooklyn and is generally known throughout the county. The State Board of Education for the Blind also has a section in the exhibition building, its representative engaged in acquainting the public with the work the state is doing for those who do not see and in disposing of articles made by the blind to all who wish to purchase.

Other commercial exhibitors in the exhibition hall are the Despathy Furniture Co. of Moosup, showing Lyric, Brunswick Combination and Philco radio sets, Barstow ranges with "country gas" equipment and special articles from their lines of furniture; D. Blumenthal, Danielson, with a display of Majestic radios, and Chandler & Morse, Putnam, showing the Stewart-Warner radio line.

Interesting Cattle Section

The cattle section is interesting this year. All animals shown are tuberculin tested. Lawndale farm, North Woodstock, Mrs. Harold Hibbard owner, shows eight head of milking shorthorns. M. R. Wibberly has Guernsey entries. W. H. Herr & Sons, Canterbury, have a herd of splendid Jerseys on display, headed by the famous herd sire, Upways Owl's Floyd, whose three nearest dams average 12,500 pounds of milk and 752 pounds of butter in a year. The bull is three years old and a handsome animal, about perfect, experts say. The Herr exhibit includes 20 head. In the herd are four cows that have averaged 48 pounds of milk a day and one with a record of 51 pounds a day and of 4,800 pounds in 110 days.

George Butts of Woodstock shows Holsteins at the fair.

Leslie Jewett of Hampton shines as a comer in the cattle division of exhibitors. This year this 11-year-old boy shows a splendid Holstein heifer that is averaging 40 pounds of milk a day, Leslie has cared for her since she was a calf, has given her excellent care, and is very proud of the fine record she is making.

Much Fine Poultry

The poultry section is good, but limited, this year. With the hens and roosters, ducks, turkeys and rabbits are shown. Two splendid Tom turkeys—the bronze variety—that are competing for prizes are owned respectively by John Meehan and Al Pakulis, of Brooklyn.

Only a few sheep are shown this year. A pen of nine fine Hampshires, first award winners, are shown by Emile Baker of Killingly. The Sheba Sheep club and George N. Holbrook, both of Abington, each showed a Dorset ram.

Ladies' Department

Exhibits in the ladies' department are particularly fine this year. There are many really beautiful things. Mrs. Susie G. Williams, Brooklyn, secretary of the woman's department of the fair, is in charge in this department. Assisting as judges today were: Mrs. John T. Ashworth, Brooklyn, Mrs. Alexander Maitland, Thompson, food and canned goods; Everett E. Brown, Plainfield, honey; Miss Edith Mason, Storrs, domestic and fancy work; Mrs. Henry Atwood, Danielson, Mrs. C. C. Rowlinson, Mrs. Anna Cummings, Brooklyn, fine arts; Rilla Child, Woodstock, Adrianna Hutchins, Pomfret, and Mrs. Leslie Sumner, Woodstock, exhibits by ladies' societies, girls' clubs and graded schools; Mrs. Lucy Tanner, Brooklyn, Mrs. Walter Tripp, Danielson, children's exhibits.

J. B. Stetson Attends Fair

Something akin to a reception was accorded Joseph B. Stetson of Brooklyn as he went through the buildings and about the fairgrounds today. Mr. Stetson is one of those precocious youngsters who will reach his 82nd birthday within a few days. He served the Brooklyn fair in one official capacity or another for 53 years, from ticket-taker at the main gate up through all offices to president. He was secretary for 32 years, resigning less than a decade ago. Mr. Stetson remarked today that last year, when it rained and he was not feeling too good physically, he missed attending the Brooklyn fair for the first time in 75 years. He said today: "I can remember this fair before the present fair grounds came into use about 70 years ago. In the days I am speaking of the vegetables and other such displays were shown in Unitarian church at Brooklyn Green, and other parts of the fair were to be found on the grounds outside and nearby.

Good Midway

The midway is much the same as ever at this year's fair and there are the usual abundant facilities for satisfying the inner man, or woman. One well-patronized eating place was that in charge of the American Legion, with Mrs. J. Dyer Potter, now of Putnam, supervising activities.

A band concert, races and vaudeville provided a full afternoon of entertainment for those attending the fair.

PETER TAGGART WINS FEATURE RACING EVENT

The races held the attention of the majority of people at the fair this afternoon. It was good racing for a small fair. J. Carl Witter of Danielson was starter and he had with him in the judges' stand the following judges and timers: Dr. F. T. Baldwin and J. Otis Fox, both of Putnam; Walter R. King of Willimantic, Samuel Roberts of Webster and Arthur J. Lathrop of Dayville. There were three races on the card this afternoon, one of which, the 2:20 class, was unfinished as darkness fell and it will be completed tomorrow. REVAMPING OLD WHARF WHERE WHALING SHIPS DOCKED

Men are driving spiles and will construct a wall on the north side of the Pendleton wharf to take the place of the one that has tumbled down. This wharf was one of the first wharves constructed in whaling days, 1842 and 1843, and was used by the Long Island sound and other packets for loading and unloading goods for New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Cuba. Whaling ships tied up here and their cargoes were handled from this pier. The ship Cincinnati which came in in 1859 was the last to tie up there and discharge her oil and bone.

The Chesebro Packing station is now on the wharf, and the motor ship Elizabeth Ann ties up there, and for the past two years it has been a busy place. When the work is finished the surface of the wharf will be larger and will allow for the better handling of freight.

STOCK PRICES MODERATELY LOWER IN VIOLENT AND ERRATIC MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—(AP)—Speculative chills and fevers today were reflected in violent and erratic price movements on the stock market, which left the general level moderately lower.

The market was heavily bombarded by selling during the major part of the session, and prices of scores of leading issues were sent down 5 to 25 points, but shorts were driven frantically to cover in the last hour, and the market rallied with amazing swiftness. Losses in many prominent issues were completely wiped out, and a handful of stocks pushed sharply higher. Trading was in heavy volume, 4,957,260 shares changing hands.

The decline was accompanied by such a wild assortment of rumors as may be heard whenever speculative circles become panicky. It was hearo that some of the larger operators were in distress, which was promptly and firmly denied. The collapse of the Hatry stocks in London was said to have seriously injured traders with important New York connections, which was also emphatically denied. Houses with London connections pointed out that the Hatry stocks occupied a relatively minor position in the London market, and their collapse had not disturbed fundamental conditions there.

The tight money market, and fears that the peak of this cycle of industrial prosperity may be passing, tended to instill considerable gloom. Wall street has been able to ignore tight money when everything else is rosy, but traders are inclined to balk at heavy carrying charges when market trends are uncertain. Also, the persistent declines of the past week have carried some stocks from 30 to 60 points below their recent highs, and impaired margin accounts.

Call money renewed at 8 per cent, but closed at 10, and time money was firm at 9 to 9 1-4 per cent. Further withdrawals of gold from London made an increase in the Bank of England's discount rate tomorrow more likely than ever. Bankers said that money is extremely snug, and will remain so over the month end, and will probably rule high until after the turn of the year. There was a feeling, however, that the banking system is in a position to prevent as much crises in credit as occurred last winter. Bankers were inclined to regard the prospect of a higher rate in London with less apprehension, as it was stated in circles close to the federal reserve bank that contrary to recent rumors, holdings of sterling acceptances here are almost negligible.

The weekly steel trade reviews were not very cheerful, indicating a slight softening of prices. Iron Age said however, that the expanding railway needs may stiffen the price structure, although it will be sometime before specifications actually reach the mills. The weekly crude oil production figures were more pleasing than at any time in months, the Oklahoma City pool thirty day shutdown causing a substantial reduction. Car loadings for the second week of the month were reported at the highest level for recent years.

Some of the high priced stocks fluctuated widely. Commercial Solvents dropped 25 points, then rallied 20. Columbian Carbon soared more than 24 points to a new high record in what appeared to be a driving in of heavy short interest. A. M. Byers was rushed up more than 15 points and closed near the top. Adams Express dropped 74 points to 575, then rallied to close at 630 off 19. It was announced after the close that it will be split ten for one and the concern merged with railway and express and Haygart corporation.

The action of American Can was typical of that of many of the leading industrials. It sagged about five points, then rallied and closed nearly a point higher net. U. S. Steel dropped a similar amount and rebounded to close off only 1-4 of a point. American Telephone dropped four points, then closed practically unchanged. Johns Manville and Westinghouse each dropped about 13 points then rebounded about ten from their lows.

The decline in Radio was checked, and it closed nearly four points higher. A few of the utilities were strong. Columbia Gas rising 9 points to a new peak at 140 and Standard Gas rising about four points. American and Foreign Power dropped 11 points and rebounded ten. Some of the oils were well bought. Houston was rushed up more than nine points.

Commodities were largely firm. Wheat rallied about one cent and corn two cents a bushel on less favorable weather reports. Cotton futures sold up about fifty cents to $2 bale on reports of rains over the cotton belt.

Foreign exchanges were firm, with sterling receiving strong support, the cable rate rising 1-4 of a cent to $4.85 1-2, which would make further takings of London gold by New York unprofitable. The Canadian dollar rallied from below 99 cents to above 99 17 cents.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—(AP)—The bond market continued heavy today. Encouraging factors were absent, with time money clinging to the 9 to 9 1-4 per cent quotations and hard to get at those rates.

Selling in all groups was light and with the exception of two or three convertibles the entire list suffered from lack of interest.

Share option bonds had an erratic day, as was to be expected from the course of stocks. A mid-afternoon break, which sent prices of the leaders down sharply from the day's high, was followed by a recovery which virtually erased the losses and closing quotations showed little variation from the Tuesday finals.

American Telephone 4 1-2s again led in volume, selling as high as 215 and then reacting to 207 1-2 on the broad decline. An advance of 6 points from that low resulted in a net gain for the session of 3-4. International Telephone 4 1-2s did not fare so well, selling down to 192 and closing at 196 for a loss of 2 points. Allegheny Corporation 5s and Reading Coal & Iron 6s were also weak, while American I. G. Chemical 5 1-2s got down to 112, the lowest price in weeks.

Rails and utilities bore the brunt of the selling in the more seasoned sections of the list. Santa Fe General 4s yielded half a point on a fairly large turnover, while the Rock Island, Big Four, New Haven and Northern Pacific groups offered small resistance.

American Telephone debenture 5s equalled their year's low of 101 1-4, while Federal Light & Traction 5s touched a new minimum. Northern States Power 5s and Public Service Electric & Gas 5s and 4 1-2s also declined, the losses averaging about a point.

Cuba Cane Sugar obligations all touched new lows. Oil company bonds firmed slightly.

Seaboard Air Line Adjustment 5s moved up more than a point on the announcement that more than 86 per cent of the bonds had been deposited under the recapitalization plan.

Industrials were moderately steady, but trading was light.

United States government obligations sagged a trifle and Liberty Fourth 4 1-4s closed a small fraction above the year's low. Foreign bonds were a little more active, but changes ruled highly irregular.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—(AP)—Corn led the grain markets upward in price today, especially in the last hour. An authoritative summary of crop conditions prevailing throughout the corn belt indicated that the 1929 corn crop as a whole is practically made, but that the yield is to be the smallest since 1924, and with only two exceptions will be the smallest in 25 years. Wheat today touched a new low price record for the season, but afterward rallied helped by bulges in quotations on corn.

The corn market closed strong, 1 1-2 to 1 1-8c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Wheat closed firm, 3-8c to 7-8c up, oats 1-2c to 3-4c advanced, and provisions ranging from 25c decline to a gain of a shade.

Almost from the outset, the corn market today showed independent strength, owing a good deal to a forecast of wet weather over part of the corn belt, together with probable frost tonight in the northwest. Besides, the government weekly report pointed to considerable crop damage in various sections as a result of preceding frost. It was also asserted in some quarters that there are yet many fields where corn growth is in the milk stage, and that frosts would be harmful.

On the other hand, statements were current that shrinkage of the 1929 estimated yield of corn is largely due to drought which prevail during July and August, resulting in small-sized ears and barren stalks. The quality of the 1929 reduced yield, however, is said to be better than that of the 1927 crop, the quality of which was poor. Some of today's buying of corn future deliveries appeared to be based on improved demand here from shippers.

Talk of better European call for wheat from North America was partly responsible for market upturns here today, after fresh reports of Argentina rains had forced wheat down to a new low price for the season. Predictions of frosts in Argentina tended likewise to stimulate wheat buying, and so too did an estimate that 1929 world wheat production exclusive of Russia and China will be 500,000,000 bu. below the 1928 total, and that shipments from south of the equator will diminish from now on.

Provisions were responsive to lower quotations on hogs.

Feeding The Master's Other Sheep

Feeding the Master's other sheep, about the world they go—
Those souls we send afar with love, for God commanded so—
Attending to the Master's flocks, 'mid scenes of want and woe—
Feeding the Master's other sheep—His other sheep.

Lovest thou Me—then feed my sheep; the Master once did say,
Obeying Him, the shepherds serve, wheravar flocks may stray,
Be ours the privilege to send, sustain, and bid them stay—
Feeding the Master's other sheep—His other sheep.

Other sheep have I, not of this flock; again the Master told—
And praying we shall send true souls, and send with them our gold;
That shepherds be in all the world, by ev'ry far-off fold—
Feeding the Master's other sheep—His other sheep.

Salvia

Salvia red, in scarlet lustre
Gaily flutters on the lea,
She is now the flaming flower
Sweet September's progeny.

Salvia red, September's daughter,
Grossly common though she be,
Fascinates her ardent lover,
In her scarlet lingerie.

Salvia red—and none is redder,
Flings her head and says to me,
I am now the ruling flower,
Cool September's repartee.

The local politician stormed up to the editor's home at a late hour and pounded on the door. When the editor appeared at the window above he shouted.

"I've read your foul slander on me and I've come to throw the charge back in your teeth."

"Well, be a good fellow," said the editor yawning, "and throw it in the bathroom window, I've left my teeth in there."—Boston Transcript.

In placing his position before his teammates Lockridge compromised with the understanding the team would go to Sunday school in the forenoon and play ball in the afternoon.

Seeing the Bride off in 1870
(From an old print)

"I picked a lemon in the garden of love where I thought only peaches grew" wasn't written until 30 years later. In 1870, a divorce was a scandal as well as a crying shame. Nowadays it seems an accepted part of life's lottery. "Red-hot mamma" does not now refer to a lady at the kitchen range baking a pan of fluffy biscuits.

Home-life forms the base upon which happy and successful lives are built. Cheery, comfortable furnishings that Norwich couples seem always to prefer come from the House of Quality. Purchasing furniture at Gilbert's Furniture Company helps the FINANCES, too.

VOLUNTOWN

During Pachaug grange fair, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, a large number of local people attended. In the display of fancy work, William Strange, of this village, easily led all competitors with eleven first prizes and a few second and third prizes. Thursday was children's day. The local schools were closed in the afternoon and the children were taken to the fair. A number of local people were prize winners.

Unity circle, No. 1250, Companions of the Forest of America, held a dance in Union hall on Friday evening with a large attendance.

A new store has been opened in the old store building in the Doanville section of the village. Old residents of the village remember when this store was run by Herbert Bros. and later by Deaenley & Clarke, of Jewett City. The building has been vacant for a number of years.

The Forty Hours' devotion opened at St. Thomas' church Sunday at the close of the 10 o'clock mass, with a procession of the Blessed Sacrament through the church. In the procession was a number of small boys in dark suits, an equal number of girls in white with wreaths and veils and four little flower girls who strewed flowers in the path, the censor-bearer and Rev. Father John Carey with the sacred host. Special music was rendered by the choir, under direction of Mrs. Elmer Baton. The altars were adorned with flowers and lighted tapers. The church was visited throughout the day by large numbers of parishioners. A number of visiting clergy during the devotion period, assisted the pastor in hearing confessions. The order of services was: Sunday evening at 7.30, Monday mass at 5.30 a. m. and services at 7.30 p. m., closing at the 8 o'clock mass on Tuesday morning. All services were well attended.

The town clerk, selectmen and registrars of voters are to be in session Saturday to pass on the qualifications of those who are on the list of voters to be made this year and administer to them the elector's oath so that they may vote at the town election Oct. 7th.

Sunday evening a Graham truck driven by Carl Barber, of Exeter, R. I., and a Chevrolet sedan, driven by Mike Matson, of Voluntown, came together, head-on, at the junction of the Forge Hill and Ten Rod roads. The sedan was damaged considerably and the truck slightly. None of the occupants were injured. State Officer Strand, of the Danielson barracks investigated the mixup and ordered both drivers to appear before Justice George B. Sheldon. Matson was charged with failure to keep to the right when approaching an intersection of the highway, and Barber with failure to grant right of way. Justice Sheldon fined each driver the minimum fine $5 and costs, a total of $16.75, both paid.

Monday evening, Andrew Wozniack, of Jewett City, was before Justice Sheldon's court in Union hall on a charge of speeding on the main street of the village. The accused pleaded guilty and received a fine of $10 and costs amounting to $21.75. He was represented by Attorney John T. Barry, of Jewett City. The arresting officer was State Officer James Carmody, of Danielson barracks. Grand Juror McDonald prosecuted all cases.

NEW LONDONERS BUY PIGS IN BAGS, AND WITH THE USUAL RESULT

NEW LONDON, Sept. 25. — New Londoners have been victimized once again. It became known today, when complaints were made to the police, that a man representing himself to be Frank Werner, salesman in the employ of the clothing firm of Baronfang, Inc., 228 West 42nd street, New York, had been fleecing prospective clothing purchasers. Two of the victims tendered Werner money as first payment for clothing, but the garments were never delivered. No trace of Werner was found and it is believed that he has left the city.

ANGRY WOMAN SQUEALS— SPOILS BOOTLEGGERS' TRADE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 25.— Tony Pisecki, about 25, residing in Mystic, and Joseph Pisecki, about 50, of 195 Ferry street, New Haven, were arrested tonight charged on two counts of violation of the liquor law, possession and keeping with intent to sell. Neither man was able to obtain a surety on his bond of $1000 and both were locked up. The men will be in the police court tomorrow.

The two men this week rented the tenement in the rear of 185 North Bank street where they prepared for a flourishing business in selling diluted alcohol at 25 cents per drink. Early this evening one of the men engaged in a heated quarrel with Mrs. Antoinette Dulgolinski, residing at 185 and the woman became so enraged that she made complaint to Patrolman Anthony Turello that the Pisecki's were selling booze. The officer visited the house occupied by the Pisecki's and arrested the men, for Mrs. Dulgolinski revealed the hiding place in her home of the alcohol. The alcohol was in two containers, one holding five gallons while the other contained four gallons.

Studebaker Runs Away

A Studebaker coupe was parked on the grade of Union street, between State and Masonic streets, this evening and while the owner was absent the car got in motion and started toward State street. Pedestrians attempted to enter the car to apply the brake, but the doors and windows were locked. The auo traveled across State street where it stopped on the crosswalk and after it had barely escaped hitting a woman pedestrian. When the owner is identified he will be ordered into court for driving a machine equipped with defective brakes.

The residents of Waller court have been annoyed of late by the operations of Peeping Toms, and tonight when two young men were detected roaming in back yards and peering into windows, the police were notified. Automobile Patrol Officer George Cockell was dispatched to the court, but he was unable to locate the peepers.

LOUIS DEBELLA UNABLE TO EXPLAIN CAUSE OF FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 25.— Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh has been busy throughout the day and tonight following up clues that may result in an arrest of Louis DeBella, proprietor of the shoe store, 671 Bank street, which store was damaged by fire late Tuesday night. Every indication points to the fire being of incendiary origin. DeBella has been questioned at length and has told conflicting stories. Insurance representatives are also in New London, for the company they represent recently greatly increased DeBella's insurance on his stock. Included in the statements DeBella is alleged to have made are the sale of enormous numbers of pairs of rubbers and the reception of big shipments of goods. The sales he represents having made are ridiculous, while the stock he claims to have recently received is not at the store and cannot be accounted for.

Miss Margaret Kezzie, of 288 Montauk avenue: Edward Snow, U. S. Coast Guard: Leon Kenney, Hotel Griswold, Eastern Point; Daniel Lamb, Noank; Mrs. Jeremiah Norris and infant daughter, 9 1-2 Harrison street; Stanley Faford, Gales Ferry; David Timmar, Centerbrook and Mrs. James Hardin, 50 Monument street, Groton, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

The young man was recently placed on parole for his mental condition apparently had greatly improved since he was committed a year ago. While at his home about 10 o'clock last night, Shea suddenly became violent and attacked his parent dealing the father a severe blow on the head with a water pitcher. Complaint was made to the police and Shea was taken in charge by Automobile Patrol Officer George Cockell. Later Shea was taken back to the hospital by Acting Lieutenant James D. The driver was on Howard street last midnight and when he attempted to pass a car that was preceding him, the auto of the unknown driver collided with a machine driven by Angus W. Thompson, 54 Federal street. Thompson's car got a sprung axle and a disabled steering rod, which was discovered after the hit-and-run driver disappeared. The driver continued through Howard street and on Woodbridge street the machine crashed against the parked car of George W. Watrous, 54 Howard street, the latter auto also being damaged.

Chinn's Case Nolled

The continued case of Ralph Chinn, of 7 Edwards street, Newport, R. I., was disposed of in the police court today. Chinn, who is a piano player in a colored orchestra, was charged with taking a Hudson sedan without the permission of the owner. There were no facts in the possession of the prosecutor to warrant a conviction so a nolle was requested and granted.

Elliott Tardy In Appearing

The case of William Elliott, submarine base, charged with evading payment of a taxicab bill, was continued to tomorrow for the sailor did not present himself in court until after adjournment. Elliott was ordered to be on hand when court convened Thursday and was promised a severe penalty if he failed to comply with the edict of the court. Elliott stated that as he had been under military arrest since his arrest by the New London police early Tuesday morning, that he was unable to go to court until he was sent there under guard by his superior officer. Elliott was arrested when he refused to pay a cab fare, upon complaint of Dewey Connors.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre.

All the thrills of the annual speed classic at the fast Indianapolis auto track, the fastest in the world, where world's records last only from one race to another, are faithfully reproduced, even to the terrific spills, smash-ups and fatal accidents, in William Haines' big production, "Speedway," which opens at the Broadway today. That famous smart Aleck of the screen is up to new tricks with his wise cracks and winning smile, and goes merrily on breaking the ladies' hearts and winning crap games or speed races with equal nonchalance. The annual speed classic is shown in detail, with the emergency pits, the hospitals, the excited crowds, the eager mechanics, and the wild-eyed drivers, all tense with the strain of the 500-mile grind. Comedy is arm in arm with drama and tragedy throughout the picture, and Haines gains new laurels through his sacrifice of his greatest ambition, with victory within his grasp, to please his employer-pal and ease the pain of his disqualification through illness. In this scene Haines throws away the buffoon's mask, and becomes a real actor. Anita Page, as his unwilling sweetheart, Ernest Torrence as the veteran driver, who wins even though he loses, Karl Dane as a dumb mechanic, and John Miljan, as a rival driver, with Eugenie Besserer and Polly Moran make up a supporting cast of unusual strength and ability. Hughes & Pam in "The Fall Guy," a star cast in "The 99th Amendment," and Phil Baker, musical comedian, supply the Vitaphone specialties, with the Fox Movietone News completing the program. Sunday the "first million dollar talking picture 'Broadway'" will be screened for its Connecticut premiere at the Broadway. Filmed direct from the tremendous stage success, the original prologue and tense dramatic situations have been preserved, together with added spectacular scenes far beyond the scope of a stage show.

Palace Theatre.

The spirit of modern youth, challenging, defying the conventions and standards of the ages, is flashed upon the screen in "Our Modern Maidens," Joan Crawford's starring film venture which is now playing to capacity houses at the Palace theatre.

It is in a magnificent expose of the jazz age that Joan Crawford and a host of other young stars are presented at the Palace. There is a thrill in every shot. It is a picture to send the blood leaping through the pulses, to stir the heart's deep fibre. Once seen, it cannot easily be forgotten. It clings to the mind like an old and deep-rooted memory.

Joan Crawford made her bow as a full-fledged star, and at the same time gave the screen one of the most powerful dramatic roles, not only in her own career, but perhaps in the entire history of modern drama in "Our Modern Maidens".

The new play, hailed as the epic of the jazz age, is gripping, fantastic, frothy, scintillating—and under the tinseled spectacle of modern youth there lies a dramatic theme as huge as life itself.

Miss Crawford's faultless acting, plus the masterful direction of Jack Conway, brought this huge theme to the screen in a perfectly moving piece of pure entertainment.

Miss Crawford rises to supreme heights as an actress in her scenes with Rod La Rocque and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., who play the two leading roles among the men in the play. Albert Gran as the millionaire father, Anita Page as the rival sweetheart, Josephine Dunn, Eddie Nugent, and others in the cast were ideally chosen.

Saturday brings to the Palace that queen of screen beauties, Dolores Costello, in her latest Vitaphone triumph, "Hearts in Exile," a magnificent drama played out in the Siberian wastes. As Vera Ivanova, Miss Costello is matchless. Ever wistful, ever lovely, she gives this outstanding film the vital spark that ranks it with the best that has come out of Hollywood. Don't miss Dolores Costello. She will win your heart and leave you shaken with the depth and intensity of her performance in "Hearts in Exile."

Turn the light on the Truth!

It's just naturally good tobacco—not "artificial treatment" that makes OLD GOLD gentle to the throat and better to the taste

No one cigarette-maker has any monopoly on the heat-treatment of cigarette tobaccos.

For heat-treating is neither new nor exclusive. It has been used for years by practically all cigarette-makers to "set" and sterilize their tobacco.

But OLD GOLD'S goodness does not depend on artificial treatment. It is the product of naturally good tobaccos . . . carefully selected for mildness, smoothness and flavor. Tobaccos made free of "throat scratch" by Mother Nature herself.

Try a package. You'll immediately get the thrill of this smoother and better cigarette. And you'll know then why OLD GOLD'S sales are ALREADY THREE TIMES GREATER than the combined growth of three leading cigarette brands during a like period of their existence.

Later he moved to the Greeneville section, where he has been a resident for the past 40 years.

During his residence in Taftville and Greeneville Mr. Lajeunesse was employed as a loom fixer in the Ponemah mills and the Shetucket Co., having followed this vocation up to five years ago when he retired. SUES FOR $25,000 FOR INJURIES TO HIS DAUGHTER

Through her father, Robert L. Percival of Ledyard, Audrey E. Percival, 4 years of age, has brought suit for $25,000 damages against Francis P. Sweeney of Uncasville. The suit has been brought in the superior court and the papers were filed with the clerk of the court in this city.

The complaint alleges that November 12th, last, the child while attempting to cross the Military highway at Gales Ferry, to board a bus, was struck and seriously injured by a machine owned by the defendant. Her left leg was fractured, her skull was fractured, a hand was broken and she was internally injured. Mr. Percival also sues the defendant for $2,000 for hospital bills, medicine, nursing, etc.

JUDGE AND ATTORNEYS MAKE TRIP TO SEE MILL PROPERTY AT MONTVILLE

The appeal of James C. O'Connor of Groton from the Montville board of relief went on trial in the superior court here late Wednesday afternoon, but before any testimony was taken Judge Earnest C. Simpson, Mr. O'Connor, Attorney Charles B. Whittlesey, who is counsel for the plaintiff, and Attorney Charles V. James, who is counsel for the town of Montville, made a visit to the mill property that was once operated by the Keyes Products company, and on which Mr. O'Connor, the present owner, claims the board of relief has put too large a valuation for the grand list.

Attorney Whittlesey drove the party to Montville in his automobile and upon their return here the court trial was taken up.

Mr. O'Connor put the machinery in the mill in the list at $1,000, the assessors raised it to $27,208 and the board of relief reduced that amount to $16,324.80, from which Mr. O'Connor appeals.

The entire property consisted of five dwellings, one shed, one office building, one mill, machinery and five acres of land, all of which Mr. O'Connor put in the list on Oct. 1, 1928 for $17,000, but the assessors raised this to $53,044.

Testimony by Mr. O'Connor was to the effect that he was one of the endorsers, with his brothers, of a mortgage for $25,000 to the Mariners Savings bank of New London, covering on the mill and machinery, which the bank was to foreclose. He took the mortgage June 29, 1928 to protect himself against a deficiency judgment. He told of being able to sell three pieces of machinery for $720 and getting $25 for lumber from a building, but said there is no market now for the rest of the machinery in the mill as the patent on the product has run out and it is not being made any more. This is special machinery made to manufacture a particular type of paper board which was the invention of Professor Keyes.

Mr. O'Connor told of one group of business men who put $250,000 into the enterprise of the Keyes Products company and lost it all, while a second group quit after losing $30,000 in an attempt to make the business go. The property is now standing idle.

Trial of the suit is to be continued when court comes in this (Thursday) morning.

MAKE PLANS FOR ANNUAL GIRLS' RALLY

The annual girls' rally of the Norwich Council of Girls' Workers, which is to be held Oct. 20 at Trinity Methodist church, was discussed at a meeting of the council Tuesday evening at the First Baptist church. This was the first meeting following the summer vacation and was in charge of the president, Mrs. Emery H. Davis, with the devotional exercises being led by Mrs. Sebastian of the entertaining church.

The exercises on rally night, as planned at the meeting, will start at 7:30 o'clock and the girls of each church will carry their own banner. At the rally, the processional hymn for which will be "Lead On, O King Eternal," the prizes for the best essay written by a local girl on the topic, "A Girl's Choice of a Vocation," will be awarded. The prizes, numbering four, include a first of $10 and three of $5 each.

Following the meeting, at which tentative plans were made for stunt night and it was voted to meet on the fourth Tuesday of each month with the exception of the October meeting, to be held at Taftville Oct. 28, refreshments were served by the girl council leaders of the First Baptist church.

JUDGMENT FOR BANK IN SUM OF $25,050

Judgment for $25,050 as per affidavit in favor of the Mariners Savings bank of New London against Leonard T. Saunders and S. W. C. Jones, both of New York city, was handed down here Wednesday by Judge Earnest C. Simpson in the superior court.

The affidavit showed that the two defendants obtained a loan for $15,000 from the savings bank on a demand note on Dec. 7, 1911. They put up as collateral $17,000 face value of Danbury & Bethel Street Railway Co. six per cent notes due in 1918 and $13,000 face value of five per cent first refunding mortgage bonds of the same railway company due in 1943. The bank sold the collateral on Sept. 1, 1925, for $1,500, crediting this on account of interest. Subsequently this collateral became absolutely worthless, and at the time of the judgment there was due the bank the $15,000 principal of the note and $10,050 for interest.

Allan received many nice gifts including candy, toys, clothing and money.

Tanneries in Holland are highly specialized, each tannery usually producing only one type of leather.

FORECLOSURE SUITS ON CITY AND FARM PROPERTY

Papers in three new foreclosure suits have been filed with the clerk of the superior court in this city. George Lambert of this city has brought suit for foreclosure against Conrad Gendron of this city and Petry J. Hollandersky of New London. According to the complaint, Joseph Neville, on June 8, 1927, gave the plaintiff a $1,900 note, secured by a mortgage on the premises located on Margerie street, this city. On June 19, 1929, Neville sold the property to Gendron subject to the mortgage. The Norwich Savings society has a mortgage of $2,250 on the premises and Attorney Hollandersky claims to have two mortgages, one for $600 and the other for $500 on the premises.

Stanley Besade and Mary Besade, both of this city, have been made the defendants in a $2,500 foreclosure action, filed by the Chelsea Savings bank of this city. The defendants on March 8, 1924, gave a note for $2,500 to the bank and to secure the note mortgaged property on Mt. Pleasant street. The bank also claims to hold another mortgage of $400 on the property and Schwartz Bros. claim to have a judgment lien for $160 dated May 17, 1928.

Barbara Wunderlich of Taftville has brought suit for foreclosure of a tenacre farm against Paul Postler of Sprague and Jacob R. Slosberg, engaged in business as The Shetucket Coal & Lumber Co., in this city. The complaint alleges that June 8, 1922, Postler gave a note for $1,200 secured by a mortgage on the farm, to George W. Green. By assignment the note went to Louis Wunderlich and upon his death to the plaintiff, his widow. The plaintiff also claims to hold another mortgage for $1,300 on the farm. Mr. Slosberg claims a mechanic's lien on the mortgaged premises.

NEW LONDON ZONING ACT POWERLESS OVER WATER

On the grouds that the work recently started on the extension of the pier of Clarence W. Thompson at 350 Pequot avenue, New London, is in navigable waters and that the zoning ordinance has no jurisdiction over the water, Judge Earnest C. Simpson on Wednesday dissolved the temporary injunction issued by Judge Christopher L. Avery in favor of the city recently.

Late Monday afternoon Judge Simpson, who presided over the naturalization session in New London, called Attorney C. Hadlai Hull, representing Thompson; Attorney Arthur T. Keefe, counsel for Richard C. Davidson, the contractor, and Director of Law Troland into conference.

The judge had heard the city's side of the case in the superior court here last Friday and the defendants were to put in their evidence Wednesday. The court, however, informed the attorneys that there was no need of prolonging the case as he had come to the conclusion that the pier was in navigable waters and the water was not affected by the zoning ordinance.

Wednesday morning Attorney Hull came to court here with a prepared order dissolving the city's injunction and the order was signed by the court.

Work will be resumed in the construction of the pier at once.

The present decision, according to Mr. Troland, will not stop the hearing of the city's case in the superior court next month or in November for a permanent injunction. At that time the matter will be thrashed out completely on its merits.

NATURALIZATION SESSION HANDLED RECORD NUMBER

Sixty more aliens were admitted to citizenship, 30 more applications continued in hearing and four more were dismissed at the naturalization session of the superior court in New London Tuesday afternoon, before Judge Earnest C. Simpson.

This made a total of 120 newly made citizens, 58 applications continued and five dismissed or a total of 183 applications disposed of in one day, the largest number ever to have been handled in that length of time.

D. A. R. manuals, written in various languages and including the constitution of the United States, together with small silk American flags were given the new citizens by members of Lucretia Shaw chapter, D. A. R.

GEO. W. CARROLL SUES HIS SON FOR ACCOUNTING

The papers in the suit which George W. Carroll, formerly of Norwich, now of California, has brought against his son, George Wyman Carroll, Jr., of this city for an accounting of stocks held by the latter and owned by the plaintiff, have been filed with the clerk of the superior court in this city. Mr. Carroll alleges in the complaint that July 17, 1923, he appointed his son, the defendant, his attorney under power of attorney. Claim is made that the defendant took into his possession certain stocks including shares of the Eastman Kodak Co., American Chain Co., The Fair Co., Paige-Detroit Motor Co., Armour and Co., Manhattan Railway Co., Gotham Silk Hosiery, Hudson Motor Co., American Telephone and Telegraph, Allis-Chalmers Co., Dodge Bros., Briggs Mfg. Co., U. S. Rubber Co. and the Shetucket Realty Co., United States Rubber Co., General Motors Co., N. Y. Central Railway Co., and the plaintiff's bank account in the Uncas National bank in this city, amounting to approximtely $400 and two boxes filled with paper script gold and silver of the value of $200.

The complaint further alleges that the defendant received as dividends on the stock approximately $1,500 and now has certain of the shares in his possession which he has failed to pay to his father. The plaintiff claims he has asked for an accounting from his son but that the son has refused to make an accounting and re-delivery of the property.

At the request of Philip A. Johnson, secretary of the Aspinook company of Jewett City, Chief Henry R. Taft of the fire department loaned him two oxygen tanks late Wednesday afternoon to be used with the inhalator at the Jewett City mill where an employe was reported to have been overcome while at work.

Secretary Johnson drove here and took the tanks back with him, but after over three hours work with the inhalator the man was pronounced dead.

GUEST RIDER SUES DRIVER OF AUTOMOBILE

Damages of $7,500 are asked by Elizabeth C. Barrett of Waterford in a suit she has brought in the superior court against Harry W. House of this city and Eugene E. Simons of Springfield, Mass. The plaintiff alleges that Aug. 18 last she was riding in a machine owned and driven by Mr. House, and at his invitation. Near Mossbroker's gasoline station on the Boston Post road Mr. House's machine figured in a collision with a machine owned by Mr. Simons. The plaintiff claims she was badly injured.

Your Children ... is their food safe?

YOU, as a conscientious mother, buy the best food for your children, prepare it with scrupulous care and cook it correctly. Yet, in spite of all, you may be giving your children food which is not wholesome—possibly dangerous!

For even the best food becomes unsafe to eat unless it is kept at the proper degree of cold, which medical authorities agree should be 50 degrees or less—always. Above that temperature, bacteria multiply, food is contaminated—becomes a menace to health.

There is only one way to be sure that your children's food is fresh and healthful—correct refrigeration. There is one refrigerator that assures you of scientifically perfect refrigeration at all times—the General Electric. Faithfully, quietly, day and night it maintains a temperature safely below that important border-line—50 degrees.

We endorse the National Food Preservation Program. 50° is the Safety Point for Perishable Foods.

The General Electric Refrigerator has a simple mechanism which you never need to oil, mounted on top of the cabinet and hermetically sealed in a steel casing. It has an accessible freezing regulator, makes a generous supply of ice cubes, creates no radio interference. It has the only all-steel, warp-proof cabinet—easily cleaned, sanitary. We shall be glad to help you select the model suited to your need and tell you about the spaced payment plan.

This record stands alone

There are now more than 300,000 homes enjoying the convenience, economy and protection of General Electric Refrigerators—and not one owner has spent a single dollar for repairs or service.

BISHOP CANNON'S VIEWS ON PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT

Expresses the Conviction That if Additional Enforcement is Found Necessary "the People Will Expect It to Be Promptly Forthcoming"—Is Confident That President Hoover Will Handle the Matter Effectively—Opinions Were Prompted by the Hubbub Over Prohibition Conditions in the District of Columbia.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26—(AP)—The hubbub over prohibition conditions in the District of Columbia has prompted Bishop James Cannon Jr., chairman of the board of temperance and social service of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, to express the conviction that if additional enforcement legislation is found necessary "the people will expect it to be promptly forthcoming."

This opinion is contained in a report he is sending to the church press concerning the work of the several international religious conferences which he attended recently as an official delegate. The report reads in part:

"The impression which President Hoover made upon these European leaders was the thing which struck me most forcibly in my contacts with them in the great social and religious gatherings. Their estimate is that he has a constructive mind of the first order, highly developed by study and experience. With such ability joined to his high conception of duty and patriotic purpose they expect him to make one of our greatest presidents.

"A striking example of the Hoover method of handling important subjects is found in his reply to the statement of Senator Howell on lack of prohibition enforcement in the District of Columbia. In this statement, which should receive the hearty, enthusiastic approval and active support not only of all true friends of prohibition but of all genuine supporters of constitutional government, the president most significantly declares: 'It is the intention, not only to secure the fullest enforcement in the district possible under the organization of enforcement agencies as provided by law, but to make it a model in this country.'

"This declaration is the climax of a statement bristling with facts, asserting that Senator Howell's statement seriously impugns the good faith and capacity of the district officials, calling them by name; that the president is glad the question has been raised, expressing a natural confidence that such charges would not be made on the floor of the senate unless they were based on facts, and declaring positively that if such facts are forthcoming the president himself will have the matter thoroughly investigated. With President Hoover's life record of successful achievement in whatever he has undertaken, these cannot be regarded as idle words or as an exaggerated statement issued under sudden pressure but as a thoroughly considered and carefully worked expression of the president's fixed determination to do a certain definite thing, namely to give to the country and to the world a demonstration of the kind of prohibition enforcement which is possible under existing laws and agencies as a 'model' of what can and what ought to be done in other cities and sections of the country whenever the responsible heads of government are sincere and vigorous in their purpose to enforce prohibition law.

"As the congress of the United States is the legislative body which passes all laws for the District of Columbia, the people of the country have a right to expect their representatives in congress to give sympathetic and practical cooperation to the president. And if it shall be found that additional enforcement legislation is necessary for the district, the people will expect it to be promptly forthcoming.

"Model enforcement resulting in model conditions cannot be secured in a day, but those who have followed the amazing achievements of President Hoover's career know that if he has indeed put his hand to the plow he will not turn back until, regardless of opposition and obstacles of every kind, he has plowed the furrow to the end."

JAPANESE BEETLE HAS INVADED WILLIMANTIC

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Like the cockroach, the Japanese beetle scurries to safety. Leaving all the points where he is being attacked, he has gone to Willimantic and now J. Peter Johnson, deputy of the Connecticut agricultural experiment station, who is in charge of the quarantine maintained by the state against the insect, will begin a new offensive on the Willimantic front.

Willimantic is 30 miles from the nearest town previously known to be infested—Hartford—and farther than that from the shore region, from Greenwich to East Haven, where a general quarantine is maintained because of the heavy activities of the beetle.

Deputy Johnson believes the beetle went to Willimantic by way of plants or soil carried by travelers.

Johnson says this summer more Japanese beetles appeared in the state than ever before. In Hartford alone, 800 traps had to be set. In these 863 beetles were caught. Willimantic has been given 250 traps.

During the summer, 77 men were employed in control and quarantine work. About 500,000 packages of fruit, vegetables, flowers and soil, were examined and automobiles, nursery and farm products inspected. Most of the latter work has been stopped as the pest, which appears in June, will soon hibernate.

SPLIT HAS DEVELOPED IN ZIONIST ORGANIZATION

LONDON, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Recent events in Palestine have brought to a head the long-threatened split in the Zionist organization.

The revisionist faction of the party, headed by Vladimir Jabotinsky, today set up separate headquarters here and announced that it would try to enforce a bold policy in demanding the creation of special Jewish defense units in Palestine.

Doctor Chaim Weizmann, head of the Zionist organization, has refused to make this demand on the British government. Instead he favors the policy of seeking a peaceful understanding with the Arabs in the Holy Land.

The Jabotinsky faction has issued a statement denouncing what they describe as "weak leadership" by Dr. Weizmann and announcing the creation of an independent executive.

OBITUARY
Ulysses S. Grant

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Ulysses S. Grant, 77, prominent San Diego resident and eldest son of the late President U. S. Grant, died while asleep last night at Sandberg Lodge, 70 miles north of Los Angeles, it was learned today. He apparently was in good health when he retired, friends said.

Born in Bethel, Ohio, in 1852, Grant attended Emerson institute, Phillips Exeter academy of New Hampshire and received an A.B. degree at Harvard in 1876. He completed his law course at Columbia university and was his father's secretary during the last year of his presidential term. After serving as assistant United States district attorney for the southern district of New York and practicing law from 1878 to 1889, Grant moved to San Diego, opened a law office and later built the $1,500,000 U. S. Grant hotel here.

Mr. Grant married Josephine Chaffee, daughter of Senator Jerome B. Chaffee of Colorado, on Nov. 1, 1880. Five children were born to the couple. Mrs. Grant died in 1909 and in 1913 the widower remarried. His second wife was Mrs. America Wills. Grant is survived by his widow, two sons, Chaffee Grant of San Diego, U. S. Grant, 4th, of Burlingame, and two daughters, Mrs. Jack Rice of San Diego and Mrs. Edmund King of La Jolla. The other daughter, Mrs. I. H. Purdy, died in Oakland a few years ago.

DISCOUNT RATE RAISED BY BANK OF ENGLAND

LONDON, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Finding that other means to stem the serious outflow of gold from the country was bringing about a situation that approached the danger point, the Bank of England today raised its discount rate from 5½ to 6½ per cent. This is the highest bank rate in eight years.

The government and the commercial community had been most reluctant to face a rise in the rate because of the adverse effect that it was expected to proving business position.

Recent sensational withdrawals of gold for France and America left the bank directors with little or no option. Within 15 weeks the bank has lost more than £30,000,000 in gold and for the current year its gold reserve has been reduced by £42,000,000.

Meanwhile, new gold from South Africa, which under normal circumstances would have come to England, has been diverted to other countries.

The last time that the bank rate was 6½ per cent was in April, 1921. It was reduced to 6 per cent in June of that year and was cut in July to 5½ per cent. It was generally believed that the present high rate would be similarly short-lived.

DAMAGE FROM HEAVY RAINS IN SOUTH CAROLINA

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Heavy rains, chiefly in the northwest section of the state, which have been in progress the past 36 hours, and steadily gathering momentum, tonight had wrought heavy road and crop damage in South Carolina.

The only reports of casualties caused by the floods came from Greenwood, where nearly a dozen horses were drowned. The animals, moving with the troop of the United States cavalry from Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., to Camp Jackson, Columbia, were swept off their feet by the current in Ninety-Six creek.

Fifteen members of the troop narrowly escaped drowning at the same time. The creek had been swollen by havy rains of the past 24 hours.

Official weather prognostications indicated little relief was in sight. Richard H. Sullivan, United States meteorologist here, said late today he was practically certain there would be a continuance of the heavy rains.

CONVICTED MRS. PANTAGES IN GRAVE CONDITION

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Mrs. Lois Pantages, convicted of manslaughter for the death of Juro Rokumoto following an automobile collision, today was confined to her bed and physicians reported her condition as "extremely grave." The wealthy society woman collapsed last night when the verdict, which carries a prison sentence of one to ten years, was returned.

A bulletin issued this afternoon by Alexander Pantages, multi millionaire theatrical man, said his wife was suffering from severe shock and the crisis was expected late in the day.

A staff of physicians, headed by Dr. E. C. Fishbaugh, was in attendance on the convicted woman at her home.

Sen. Borah Opposes The Flexible Tariff

Party Leaders Are Rounding Up the "Doubtfuls" on the Flexible Provision — No Party Lines.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26—(AP)—Party lines crossed in the senate today and made the issue so close over retention of the flexible principle in the pending tariff bill as to set party leaders feverishly to work in an effort to round up the "doubtfuls."

Senator Borah, of Idaho, a campaigner for President Hoover last year raged against the policy as an unwarranted delegation of congressional power and demanded that the president "go through to the end and assume full responsibility" for other sections of the republican measure.

The Idahoan voted against the flexible provisions when they were incorporated by the senate into existing law in 1922. He is one of the leaders of the republican independent group, which is expected to lineup with many democrats against the principle in the Hawley-Smoot bill, which empowers the executive to change customs duties after investigation by the tariff commission.

Borah drew a brief reply from Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, who said there was no question about the constitutionality or the wisdom of the flexible provisions. A surprise came when Senator Fletcher, a Florida democrat, aid the president's statement not only appealed to him, as "convincing" but that he favored the finance committee amendment to make the section substantially as it is in existing law.

"After all these months of study and labor," Senator Fletcher said, "you have before you now a bill which is seriously denounced as an "iniquitous bill," a 'monstrosity', an 'abomination'".

"This is the work of congress," he added. "Could the president do worse if he tried?"

He was convinced the Florida senator said, that "such injustices as the bill will carry and such changes as new conditions may warrant had better be corrected and made by the president, after investigation and report by the tariff commission, as the existing law provides."

Borah emphasized that he was not assailing the president for issuing his statement on the flexible principle, but he thought it was Mr. Hoover's duty now to "advise this body and the country in the same plain and specific way whether the industrial schedules in this bill meets with his approval."

"GRAND SHEIK" CAUSE OF GUN FIGHT IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—(AP)—A Negro fanatic's plot to seize leadership in a quasi-religious mystic society was blamed today by authorities for yesterday's gun battle that cost the lives of two policemen and one cultist.

Ira Johnson, lanky, bewhiskered Negro, who calls himself the "Grand Sheik" of the Moorish Science Temple of America, confessed that he fired the shot that killed Detective William Gallagher.

He admitted further, according to Assistant State's Attorney Harry S. Ditchburne, that he had planned to kill Charles Kirkman, whose kidnaping precipitated the shooting. Johnson, Ditchburne asserted, planned to put Kirkman to a ritualistic death, seize his credentials, and take charge of the cult.

Johnson also stood accused of another slaying. A Negro janitor pointed him out as the one who fatally stabbed Claude Greene, "International Treasurer" of the cult, two months ago.

The "Grand Sheik" was the target of an attempted attack at today's inquest when Fred Hunt, brother-in-law of Gallagher, elbowed his way past witnesses and police and rushed at the Negro, exclaiming:

"You've caused a lot of grief for our family."

Hunt was restrained by policemen.

Policeman Jesse B. Hults, wounded in the gun fight, died late today from his seven wounds. The cultist killed was John Stephenson, who was shot down when he fired in answer to an order to drop his gun.

The coroner's jury, consisting of three Negroes and three white men, adjourned this afternoon after hearing testimony of Johnson, Kirkman and police who took part in the fight. It will reconvene tomorrow, giving police time for further inquiry.

Reporter's Story Of Shearer At Geneva

Told Committee That Four Naval Experts Lounged With Shearer in Hotel Lobbies.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26—(AP)—Some of the American naval experts at the unsuccessful Geneva naval limitations conference of 1927 were named today to a senate investigating committee as associates in the Swiss city of William B. Shearer, the $25,000 "observer" employed there by American shipbuilders.

Drew Pearson, who reported the Geneva fiasco for several newspapers told the committee that four of the naval experts lounged frequently with Shearer in the hotel lobbies at Geneva —and that one of them, Rear Admiral J. M. Reeves, "frequently expressed the hope that the conference would not succeed."

Rear Admiral Frank H. Schofield, Commander H. H. Frost and Commander H. C. Train were the others named by Pearson as among those he saw "frequently" with Shearer. He said the four stopped at the same hotel as his own.

"They and Shearer expressed common views," Pearson related. "That is, anti-British views and against the success of the conference. In other words, the cards were stacked against success of the conference from the start."

Pearson was the first witness before the committee to tell of Shearer's activities at Geneva when America, Great Britain and Japan sought unsuccessfully to reach terms providing for limitations of cruiser construction.

As the newspaperman left the stand, Shearer snarled "get that bird back here to answer this question."

Pearson returned at the committee's request and answered a question propounded by Shearer's counsel, stating in the affirmative that his former wife is a cousin of McCormick Goodheart, an attache of the British embassy in Washington.

Pearson was anxious to say that Admiral Hilary P. Jones, retired, of the navy and Hugh Gibson, ambassador to Belgium, the two delegates of America to the parley, worked "sincerely for an agreement."

He said they never met Shearer.

Describing Shearer as a "lavish" spender at Geneva and the resident of a "luxurious apartment," Pearson said the "observer and reporter" for the shipbuilders attended the newspaper conferences, passed out memoranda, and was "primarily interested that the conference should not succeed."

With the story of the shipbuilders who sent Shearer to Geneva now before it, the committee adjourned tonight until Monday when Shearer will be heard.

RECOMMENDS IMPEACHMENT OF KENTUCKY OFFICIALS

FRANKFORT, Ky., Sept. 26—(AP)—The Franklin county grand jury, which already had indicted eight state officials including Governor Flem D. Sampson and 25 publishers of text books, today recommended that the state legislature at its next session impeach members of the state highway commission and the chief engineer.

Alleged instances of "corruption, fraud, favoritism, discrimination and bribery," which the grand jury reported finding in the administration of the highway department were such as could not be reached by indictment, but should be handled by impeachment proceedings and prompt trial of the offenders before the state senate, the furors stated.

The jury's report, which was filed after four weeks of investigation of state affairs, took a friendly attitude toward one highway commission—the chairman, Ben Johnson, who for more than 20 years was a member of congress. Its criticism was directed most severely against E. S. Helburn, who resigned recently to become collector of internal revenue at Louisville; W. C. Hanna and Conz W. Cruz.

Policeman Daniel J. Cosgrove, of New Britain, who made the arrest of the accused at a Clark street, New Britain, grocery store, June 20, after William had made a "wicked attack" on the officer after threatening him with an axe, was publicly commended by Judge Ells "for the handling of this arrest."

TROPICAL HURRICANE IS SWEEPING TOWARD CUBA

Barometers in Observatories in Havana Showed Abnormal Readings of 29.30 Yesterday Afternoon—Belin Observatory Reports That Cuba is at Present in Storm's Path —Key West Reports a Slowly Falling Barometer—No Word Has Come From Nassau Since Noon Wednesday and Fears Are Entertained That the Storm Has Been Severe There.

(By The Associated Press)

Having administered a furious lashing to Elethera Island in the Bahamas Wednesday night and severed Nassau, the Bahaman capital, from communication with the outside world, the tropical hurricane last night hovered somewhere off the eastern tip of Florida.

While there was no Washington weather bureau advisory late yesterday, United States Forecaster Richard W. Gray at Miami, fixed the center of the storm at 4 p. m., at a position "more than 100 miles east and somewhat south of Miami."

Mr. Gray said his observations did not indicate whether the storm would move westward or had started to do so at that time. He said that it was probable the next 24 hours would bring winds of gale intensity to the extreme lower east Florida coast.

Earlier in the day Dr. Carlos Millas of the Cuban National observatory, said the storm center apparently was moving closer to Cuba. The Belen observatory concurred in this view.

At Key West, situated at the southern tip of the Keys, there was little indication late yesterday of an approaching storm. The barometer was slowly falling but the weather was clear.

Hurricane warnings remained on display from Jupiter to Miami on the Florida coast and northwest storm warnings flew from Miami to Key West. The populace, well prepared for whatever may come, had not relaxed its vigilance to cope with possible emergency.

Storm warnings, taken down on the Cuban coast yesterday morning, were hoisted again when observations indicated that the hurricane might turn toward the island. Shipping, however, continued to ply yesterday between Havana and Key West.

No word had come out of Nassau last night since shortly after noon Wednesday and fears were entertained that the storm may have been severe there. The Tropical radio which has a station at Nassau was talking with its stations at Bimini and West End and with the British freighter Domira aground off the Great Abaco yesterday but there was no news of Nassau.

All but three of the crew of the Domira abandoned ship today when the seas subsided sufficiently to allow them to use lifeboats. A rumor was current in the Bermudas that the Italian freighter Laconia had foundered off the Bahamas with all hands lost but this was not confirmed.

HURRICANE HAS SWERVED FROM FLORIDA TOWARD CUBA

HAVANA, Sept. 26—(AP)—A storm of possibly hurricane strength which today swerved from the east coast of Florida after arousing grave fears among the people there, was this afternoon returning toward Cuba from Andros Island, Bahamas, according to reports of the Cuban national observatory and the Belen Jesuit colleges observatory in Havana.

Barometers in both observatories showed abnormal readings of 29.30 this afternoon, which indicated that the storm was steadily advancing southward. The wind was rising over Havana and waves were lashing at the seawalls.

The storm was located late this morning in the northern part of the Andros Island area, but information about it was meagre. Its exact force and direction were not known but Dr. Gutierrez Lanza, at the Belen observatory told the Associated Press that Cuba was at present approximately in its path.

"To date it is impossible to form a definite opinion because the storm is unusual," Dr. Lanza said.

He thought that the storm might pass between Cuba and Florida without great damage to either. Rain, strong winds and heavy seas were certain, however.

The latest advisory storm warnings from the national observatory said the movement of the disturbance was very slow and of unknown intensity. It was moving west southwest from the Bahamas. Navigation in the straits and in Bahama waters was extremely dangerous.

The observatory was keeping a close watch on the barometer.

Storm warnings were issued shipping to the north of Cuban ports and storm signals displayed here. The Pan-American Airways, Inc., which yesterday suspended service between Miami and Havana, today continued to refuse passage, accept air mails, or attempt to send a plane over the hundred mile water stretch to Miami.

Ten Pan-American planes brought here yesterday afternoon to escape the expected storm at Miami, were this afternoon refueled and made ready for flight to the southeastern part of Cuba should the Bahaman storm continue its advance on Cuba.

RIO GRANDE FLOOD LEFT 1,000 PERSONS HOMELESS

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Sept. 26.—(AP)—About 1,000 persons are homeless and with very limited food supplies in the Rio Grande flood district between Socorro and San Marcial, N. M., surveys made by relief workers indicated today.

First efforts for the relief of the flood refugees came with the dispatching of a party of Red Cross workers from Socorro to the people in the flood-stricken villages as far south as San Marcial. The state highway department continued work on a new temporary road through the hills over which it was expected additional supplies could be transported tomorrow.

Over a telephone set up in one of the refugee camps near San Marcial this afternoon the Albuquerque Journal learned that 200 people in the camp had very little food and were anxiously awaiting supplies from Socorro.

Santa Fe officials said today they could make no estimate of the number of miles of track washed out as crews had been unable to get below La Joya on the north or up from San Marcial on the south.

Refugees who surveyed San Marcial from their camp today said the only buildings remaining in the town were those of the Santa Fe railroad from which 54 refugees were taken and another near the railway station.

AWARDS MADE TO SCHOOLS FOR SECURING EGG-MASSES

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 26.—A total of 30,000 egg-clusters, embryos of the destructive tent caterpillars, have been secured in the 1929 campaign conducted by Earle W. Green post, No. 52, American Legion of Coventry and Mansfield. With this report received the awards have been made, mainly to the schools. There are also cash prizes to individuals turning in the largest single collection in each town. In the town of Coventry the highest school award goes to the Flanders school, and in Mansfield to The Ridges school. The Center grammar school of Coventry and Storrs Primary of Mansfield are second. Third awards go to Silver street school, Coventry and Hollow grammar school, Mansfield.

Raymond Fries, a pupil of the Flanders school, Coventry, and Wallace Weigold of the Storrs Primary, Mansfield, receive the individual awards. A small additional award will be made to the Brick school, Coventry, for its collection which was large enough to deserve a regular award if made only during the same period other schools were active. This school began collecting egg-masses in January, some time before the campaign was officially underway for the remainder of the schools.

The main awards consist of recreational or handicraft equipment while the minor awards will be in cash. There were 20 schools, out of the total of 21 in the two towns, participating in the contest, these schools representing about 500 pupils. That the annual campaigns are having a telling effect on the tent caterpillars is manifest in a comparison of the number of egg-clusters, 30,000 secured in 1929 as against 100,000 in 1925.

The campaign was directed by the legion post with the financial backing of the Babcock Hill Farmers' association, the Ladies' auxiliary of Earl W. Green post, Echo and Mansfield granges of Mansfield, and the South Coventry Men's club. There was complete cooperation on the part of teachers, pupils, parents and school supervisors.

The legion committee in charge consists of R. L. Hahn, chairman; T. A. Barrows, Willis H. Homer, G. C. Hilam, Alva A. Roys, J. F. Lynch and Fred Theim. The post boasts but 60 members but has an unusually fine record of activity.

John C. Tracy, prominent jeweler and optician here for some 40 years and mayor of Willimantic in 1926-'27, stated today that he would remove to California about November 1 with the intention of making that state his future home. Mr. Tracy has planned to move to the Pacific coast immediately after his term of office as mayor but owing to delay in disposing of his residential property and business interests was forced to postpone his departure. He has now sold his spacious residence at 125 Summit street to a local attorney. His Jewelry business was disposed of some six years ago to Ralph U. Wolmer who has been his partner for some years previously. Mr. Tracy retained the optical department, however, but expects to dispose of this branch of the business before the first of November. He came to this city from Manchester in 1886 to conduct a retail jewelry business. He met with distinctive success and the business has continued to prosper under the ownership of Mr. Wolmer.

A warning from the treasury department of a counterfeit $5 federal reserve note of the new issue has been received by local banking institutions. This counterfeit should not deceive the wary handler of money, according to the warning which gives the following description of the note: "On the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago; series 1928A; Check letter H; face plate No. 6; back plate No. 143; signatures of W. O. Woods, treasurer of the United States, and A. W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury; portrait of Lincoln." The counterfeit is a photo-mechanic production printed on poorly etched plates which fails to bring out the finely cut lines in the border lathework and portrait. The face of the counterfeit is one-eighth of an inch shorter than the genuine note. So far as is known none of these notes have been detected in circulation here.

French Dahlia Bloom

Alvin Douglass has in bloom something of a dahlia novelty, in that the bulb came from France. A few years ago among some other articles sent to his mother from "over there," was a single "toe" wrapped in a handkerchief. The flowers are small, between the pom pom, and the show types, resembling in color the American Beauty rose. There is indication that their delicate tints may have been borrowed from the sunny skies of Brittany, where they were native.

BROOKLYN FAIR CLOSES AFTER SUCCESSFUL 3 DAYS

(Special to The Bulletin)

BROOKLYN, Sept. 26.—While a very considerable number of persons attended Brooklyn fair today—closing day—the attendance was small compared to the close to record-breaking crowd that was on the grounds Thursday. Exact attendance figures for yesterday were not available today.

However, there were compensations for those who did attend today. It was easier to get about and it was possible to examine exhibits in a more comfortable and leisurely manner. Excepting for the absence of the cattle shown Wednesday, the fair was practically the same today as yesterday, with the afternoon again given over to racing, vaudeville and a band concert by the Woodstock Cornet band.

An enlivening incident of the fair about 11:30 this morning, while there were comparatively few people on the grounds, developed in the midway, where the barkers were at work in an effort to separate the crowd from any money it might have to while away the time with. At one booth where an apparently legitimate game of chance was being operated, there arose after a time the squawk of a customer who began telling the world he had been separated from $150 perfectly good dollars while playing a spindle wheel that had been operated on the level, it appears, up to this time. The stranger, who was unknown to fair officials and persisted in keeping his identity to himself, got tangled up in a "doubling up" game, in which he naturally expected to win the wheel operator's money, under a long odds proposition, and which naturally he didn't have a rabbit's chance of doing. Getting no satisfaction at the booth he hurried to the office of Secretary M. J. Frink and told his tale of woe. If there is one thing around the Brooklyn fair grounds that Secretary Frink will not tolerate it is a game of chance in which sums like this can be lost. The operator, one of a group working together, promptly denied knowing anything about the loss, but the secretary insisting on the fact that he found him back of the spindle wheel insisted that the lost money be restored. The operator and his co-workers were a talkative group about the victim and not getting much of anywhere, as to restoring the money, when two women who had arrived on the grounds with a fine, new car with Massachusetts registration a few minutes before, sought out Mr. Frink that one of them might inform him that she had been nicked for $35, about all the money she had with her, at the same wheel. Like the man, she avoided publicity by declining to identify herself. In the midst of this situation, State Officer H. Theodore Strand arrived from Danielson to do a regular tour of duty at the fair and took a hand in the proposed settlement, something that he accomplished in a very few minutes, getting back $100 for the man, who, when it came to settling, was not exactly sure of how much he had lost, and $35 for the woman. He forthwith ordered the wheel booth closed for the remainder of the fair.

W. H. Herr, who won the sweepstakes in the cattle show at the fair yesterday, said this morning that while his prize Jersey bull, Upways Owl's Floyd, was being taken back to the Herr farm on the Brooklyn-Canterbury road last evening the animal was struck by an automobile and knocked down. The crash frightened the animal and it dashed off. Two hours elapsed before the injured and frightened bull could be recaptured and placed in the Herr barn. Mr. Herr said that the bull appeared to be all right this morning, but it cannot be definitely established as yet how seriously the valuable herd sire has been hurt.

HORSE COSTING $30 WINS RACE FROM $3,500 BEAUTY

Peter Taggart won first place in the free-for-all class in the racing at the Brooklyn fair this afternoon, while Daniel Lee won first money in the first division of the 2:25 class and Czar Echo won first money in the second division of that class. In a special match race between horses owned by John Flood of Killingly and Albert Girouard of Willimantic the crowd got a thrill. Girouard with his horse, Slip Away, won the first heat over Eleanor Wilson driven by Flood. Flood took second heat and the horses were flying down the home stretch in the third heat when something happened to Slip Away, a bay horse. The animal staggered, ran into the fence on the inside of the track, flashed back into the center of the track, then went back to the inside rail and leaped it, parking his hoofs on the hood of a car that was parked there, and denting the machine quite badly. Girouard, thrown off the sulky which was wrecked, was somewhat injured about the head. Slip Away is said to have been bought for $5,500 at Syracuse, a few years ago, while Flood bought Eleanor Wilson at auction at the fairgrounds yesterday for $30. Eleanor Wilson won the race. The summary of the racing is as follows:

DANIELSON

DANIELSON BAPTIST CHURCH OBSERVES 50TH ANNIVERSARY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 26—A congregation that taxed the capacity of the church and that was representative of various Danielson churches and others in communities hereabouts attended the 50th anniversary service at the Baptist church this evening. The actual anniversary of the dedication of the church occurred the past spring, but it was deemed advisable to defer the observance until tonight, extensive improvements to the church interior having been made meanwhile.

Former pastors of the church were present this evening to join in the service of thanksgiving and letters were read from other former pastors who were unable to be in attendance.

The prelude was The Wayside Chapel (Wilson) played by Mrs. John W. Gallup, organist, and Miss Marjorie I. Gaffney, pianist. The invocation was by the pastor, Rev. Chester J. Armstrong. A solo, Open the Gates of the Temple (Knapp) was sung by Mrs. Henry H. Davenport of Brooklyn. An interesting history of the Danielson Baptist church, covering upwards of half a century, was given by Town Clerk Frank T. Preston, senior deacon. Rev. Byron U. Hatfield of Westerly, a former pastor, Rev. W. D. Swaffield, Taunton, another former pastor, and Rev. Clarence Gifford of Asonet, Mass., for years resident here, gave interesting addresses pertaining to the local church and its activities. Preceding Rev. Mr. Hatfield's talk the congregation sang a hymn.

A prophecy dealing with the future of the church was given by Rev. Mr. Armstrong and greetings from the Baptist State convention were extended by Rev. Elbert E. Gates of Hartford. The anniversary prayer was by Rev. Mr. Hatfield. Another solo by Mrs. Davenport, Still, Still With Thee (Custance) preceded the anniversary address delivered by J. Walter Houck of the Puritan church, New York and a former pastor here. Standing, the congregation at the close of Rev. Mr. Houck's address sang the Anniversary hymn to the music of The Church's One Foundation, the words used tonight having been written by Mrs. W. J. Craig of Winter street. The service closed with prayer and benediction by Rev. Mr. Armstrong and the postlude, with organ and piano.

Following the service there was a friendly hour in the vestry with music and refreshments. The church and vestry were handsomely decorated, the general color scheme of gold being carried out in the arrangements. During the friendly hour music was by Miss Emily Mann, J. Elmer Gallup and Gordon Gallup, violinists, Milton Phelan, cornetist, and Miss Grace M. Stanton, pianist.

Letters were received, and read, from Rev. Denton J. Neily, Rev. J. T. Edwards and Rev. M. J. Twomey, former pastors.

General arrangements for the golden anniversary service were made by the committee of religious education—Miss Marjorie I. Gaffney, chairman, Raymond Allen, Mrs. Emma Keach, Mrs. J. W. Gallup, Mrs. Ethel Lyon and Amasa Pierce, superintendent of the Sunday school.

The pastors of the church since 1875 have been: Rev. William C. Carr, October, 1875, to May, 1882; Rev. F. L. Knapp, January, 1884, to December, 1892; Rev. George Guiery, October, 1892, to October, 1895; Rev. B. U. Hatfield, February, 1896, to December, 1900; Rev. Francis S. Bacon, May, 1901, to April, 1903; Rev. M. J. Twomey, June, 1903, to October, 1905; Rev. D. J. Neily, November, 1905, to May, 1910; Rev. W. D. Swaffield, June, 1910, to April, 1917; Rev. J. T. Edwards, June, 1917, to September, 1920; Rev. J. W. Houck, December, 1920, to June, 1923; Rev. C. J. Armstrong, June, 1924 —.

Of this list Rev. Mr. Knapp, Rev. Mr. Guiery and Rev. Mr. Bacon are deceased.

NORTHBRIDGE MAN COMMITS SUICIDE IN LOCAL HOTEL

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 26—When one of the maids employed there entered the room of William Lejeune on the fourth floor of the Attawaugan otel this morning she found Lejeune sprawled on the bed dead and gas streaming from an open jet. The body was discovered shortly after 10 o'clock. Almost immediately thereafter it was viewed by Dr. George M. Burroughs, medical examiner, who pronounced death due to asphyxiation. Coroner Arthur G. Bill viewed the body a few minutes later and after checking up on the situation felt satisfied that the case was one of accidental death. Lejeune, also known as Young, has been employed for several weeks as a night worker at one of the Danielson plants of Powdrell and Alexander. The past week end he went to Northbridge, Mass., to visit with his wife and son. He returned here intoxicated and had since continued his spree. Last night when a maid went to make up his room, assuming he had gone to work, she found him asleep in bed. There was no odor of gas in the room at that time. However, Dr. Burroughs gave it as his opinion after examining the body that Lejeune had probably been dead since about midnight last night. The body was rigid when found. Two empty bottles were found in a drawer in a dresser of Lejeune's room. There was only 18 cents in money in Lejeune's clothing.

Coroner Bill through a telephone conversation with Merrill Keith, chief of police at Northbridge and a former state officer here succeeded in getting in touch with Lejeune's widow, she stating that she would come here some time this afternoon or evening to claim the body. Lejeune was about 54 years of age. The body was taken in charge by Undertaker L. E. Kennedy.

Raoul Levesque, a little boy resident at 10 Walnut street, Wauregan, was x-rayed at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam today to determine the nature of an injury sustained to his jaw yesterday afternoon about 4:15, when he was struck by and run over by one wheel of an automobile operated by Ruth Matthewson of Central Village. The accident happened near Schofield's filling station on the state highway between Wauregan and Central Village. Raoul had been riding with Leon Rockwell, teacher at the Wauregan school, and another child when Raoul's hat blew off and went out into the highway. It was while the boy was retrieving the hat that the accident happened. The affair was checked up by State Officer Royal Scranton of the Danielson barracks. Raoul's jaw, it was said this afternoon, is not broken, though this was at first reported to be the case.

Floyd Ennis, 31, of Brooklyn, died just before 5 o'clock tonight at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam. Last winter at a time when his mother became so seriously ill that she died Mr. Ennis was stricken with pneumonia and was a patient at the hospital in Putnam for many weeks. During the past summer he was apparently recovered, but his condition again grew worse about a week ago and practically no hope has been held out for his recovery for the past two or three days.

He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ennis, both now dead, and a native of the town of Brooklyn. He leaves one brother, Archie G. Ennis of Brooklyn. He was unmarried.

Following funeral services in Providence this afternoon the body of Mrs. D. Della Pond, widow of T. D. Pond, was brought to Brooklyn for burial in the South cemetery where the committal services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Gallup, pastor of a Providence Baptist church. A delegation of members of McGregor Corps, W. R. C., of Danielson attended the service at the cemetery. The funeral arrangements were in charge of L. E. Kennedy.

Mrs. Thomas Sargent and Miss Edith Sargent of Hartford were visitors today with William Sargent.

September made something of a heat record today when some thermometers in Danielson showed readings as high as 89 degrees.

Your chance—Most attractive, well located residence in center—exceptionally planned, hard wood floors, steam heat, open and sun porches, every improvement; fine fixtures, landscaped gardens. Priced right for quick sale. See Reimer, 16 Furnace street, Danielson.—Adv.

F. X. Mailhot, Abel L. Reeves, Edgar Bernier and Joseph Halle are the delegates from the local council of the Union St. John Baptist to attend the general convention of the order to open in Burlington, Vt., October 14. Lafayette Forcier will be the delegate from Goodyear, and Alma Forcier, Goodyear, a supreme director, also will be in attendance.

Nishan Sarkisian of Providence was taken over to the county jail in Brooklyn today to work out fines imposed upon him by Judge W. Fenner Woodward in the town court this morning. Sarkisan was fined $25 and costs for a violation of the motor vehicle laws—speeding—and $10 for evading payment of a bill he incurred at a local garage for repairs to his car. He said he had no money to pay the fines, so went to jail.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Bassett of Broad street left this morning for a motor tour into Maine and through the White Mountains.

$500 will buy an 8-room house with all modern improvements, located in Dayville on the state road and bus line. The balance is payable in rent. Apply to S. Kaminsky, 205 Main street, Putnam. Tel. 982 or 937.—Adv.

State landscape workers are planting small pines along the crests and sides of cuts bordering the state highway between Danielson and Brooklyn, near the old brick yard property.

The street railway company of Duesseldorf has announced that it has employed a number of conductors who can speak English, Dutch and French, for the benefit of visitors from the United States, England, Holland and France who, in growing numbers, are using the Duesseldorf street car lines. The conductors will wear armbands to show what language or languages they speak. A few of them are studying Esperanto also, this artificial tongue having a considerable currency in Europe.

PUTNAM

PERRILI GIVEN PRISON SENTENCE OF 3 TO 6 YEARS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 26. — Pasquale "Patsy" Perilli of Main street, within a few days will be committed for the second time within a period of five years to the state prison at Wethersfield to serve a sentence of not less than three years nor more than six. This penalty will be imposed by the state for his alleged assault upon his eight-year-old daughter, to which charge he entered a plea of guilty in superior court in this city this morning at nine o'clock. Perilli on Tuesday, through Public Defender Harry E. Back, of Danielson, entered a plea of not guilty and elected trial by a jury. Following a two-day deliberation he decided to withdraw his first plea. State's Attorney Howard C. Bradford in a recommendation to the court said that Perilli held a long police record, is an ex-convict, and in many ways proved to the court that the Italian resident of Putnam was undesirable in society. Judge Yeomans acting upon the recommendation of the attorney, imposed the stiff sentence.

Perrilli was arrested a few weeks ago by local police on a complaint of his wife, who alleged that on Sunday morning, August 20, her husband, while in a drunken condition, assaulted his daughter who was asleep. Records at local police station show that Perrilli has been before police court on ten occasions and in each instance has been convicted. On Sept. 3, 1921, Perrilli was arrested and charged with assault upon Railroad Detective John Murray, former Putnam police captain. He was taken into custody in Lawrence, Mass., following investigations by former Police Captain John Bulger and Detective Charles Satti, of railroad police. Eight years ago today, Perrilli, in superior court, was sentenced to state's prison when found guilty of assault with intent to kill.

Willimantic Case Opens

Judge Edward M. Yeomans, in superior court this morning, following the imposition of sentence upon Pasquale Perilli, opened the case of the state vs. Phillippe Geaudreault of Willimantic, 18-year-old youth, who is facing a charge of rape. The girl in question is Miss Clara Blanchard, of 12 Hives street, Willimantic, who the state charges is at present in a serious physical condition, as the result of an assault upon her, alleged to have been committed by Geaudreault on the night of April 5, during a wild party staged at her home on Hives street in Willimantic, which both the defendant and the complainant attended. Following the impanelling of a jury, composed of Frank Arnold and Lionel H. Charron, of Putnam; Henry M. Evans and Nelis T. Anderson, of Brooklyn; Milo Appley and Robinson Dean, of Canterbury; Joseph E. Stoddard and Alfred Bryden, of Pomfret; Everett Kimball, of Scotland; William Hawes, of Sterling; Lucien Lambson, of Thompson, and Wallace Frink, of Woodstock, the state opened the trial represented by State's Attorney Howard C. Bradford and the defense counsel being Attorney Arthur T. Kelly, of Willimantic.

The allegations of the state led up to forcing of affections upon the fourteen and a half year old girl by Geaudreault which resulted in the development of her present physical predicament. Dr. S. J. Turcott, of Willimantic, who examined Miss Blanchard several weeks after the assault is alleged to have taken place, contributed valuable testimony out of which both counsel exacted factors to strengthen their causes. The hearing involved the examination of many witnesses for both sides and kept court in session throughout the day, the only adjournments coming when Judge Yeomans ordered short recesses.

At the completion of rebuttals by opposing attorneys at five o'clock this afternoon Judge Yeomans instructed the jurymen to remain in seclusion and refrain from any discussions of the case until Friday morning at 10:45 a. m., when the hearing will be resumed and the charge of the presiding justice will be made.

Charles Seder, local realtor and owner of the condemned Central block on Main street, who for the past four months has been holding people of the city in suspense relative to the date when work on the proposed new Main street business block will be started, today divulged his plans by stating that the work of razing the structure will commence on next Monday morning. Two blocks are to be built, Seder said. The first is to be erected on the southerly side of the lot and will have a frontage of fifty feet on Main street and a depth extending through to Canal street. When completed, the building is to be occupied exclusively by the mail order firm of Montgomery and Ward of Chicago. Work on the project is to be rushed and completion is expected to take place about the first of April. A Danielson contractor has been awarded the construction contract.

Following the completion of the first block a second will be erected adjoining the new building and will have a frontage of 45 feet on Main street to extend through to Canal street. The style of architecture will, it is said, conform to that of the first building. When work is completed on both buildings Main street in Putnam will be in appearances on par with the central thoroughfare of any of its neighboring Connecticut cities and incidentally will mark the construction by Mr. Seder of four modern business blocks on this street.

State Officer John T. Murphy, of Danielson barracks, has taken up investigation of an automobile accident that occurred Sunday on the Providence-Putnam highway in which police believe liquor was being transported in the damaged car. Officer Murphy previously traced the ownership of the smashed auto to Frank Nyack of Willimantic, who informed him that the vehicle was stolen from a garage Saturday evening. Empty liquor kegs were salvaged from the wreckage and investigation may result in the undoing of a liquor smuggling organization operating between Providence and Willimantic. Nyack denied knowing anything of the whereabouts of the car registered in his name which was found wrecked and abandoned on the Providence road near Putnam.

Walter Dinsdale, seven-year-old boy injured a few weeks ago in an auto mishap near his home on Main street, is making a satisfactory recovery from the effects of a fractured skull, it was learned today from his parents.

Irving W. Davis, of Danielson, and Arthur F. Hughes of this city, appraisers in the settlement of the estate of the late Dr. Marguerite J. Bullard, Putnam physician who died in the Phillips house in Boston last July, have filed a valuation of the estate of Dr. Bullard in the office of the probate judge, ambunting to $90,-542.27. The bulk of the estate is contained in valuable bonds and stocks. The appraisers account was placed on file last Saturday.

Officials of the local fire department today were of the opinion that a wood fire which originated in a lumber pile on Arch street Tuesday evening was the work of mischievous boys. Fire Chief Ralph E. Thurston has estimated the damage by fire to the lot of salable wood at $30.00.

Edward White Foster, who was in his 95th year, and a Providence resident many years, died yesterday at the Home for Aged Men in Providence. Up to three years ago he had continued employment as an upholsterer, having for more than 12 years had charge of repairing the upholstery of city hall furniture. He was a familiar figure in the city hall and his retirement three years ago because of failing health was marked with expressions of regret.

Born at Killingly, Conn., in 1835, a son of William and Sarah B. Foster, he lived at Putnam, Conn., for years, learning the wheelwright's trade. At about the time of the close of the Civil war he went to Providence and was employed by the Flint Furniture company, whose store then stood on the site of the present Narragansett hotel. Next, he operated a market at Elmwood avenue and Public street, after some years turning to the upholstery business in which his son, George E. Foster, was associated with him.

Mr. Foster lived with Rev. Henry Bassett, on Elmwood avenue for some time after his retirement, and last March was admitted to the Home for Aged Men. He was a member of the Church of the Epiphany. He is survived by the son and by five grandchildren.

DECORATING THE HIGHWAYS

In five counties of the state, the landscape division of the highway department will soon begin planting 1,300 trees at points along the highways where it is believed they will contribute much to the beautification of those localities.

This means that in the course of time we can expect to see the highways greatly improved in appearance because of this attention. It may be at points where some magnificent trees have been removed in order to construct the new road according to the surveyor's straight line. It may be at places where sunbaked stretches of the road need some shade. It may be where the landscap will be made more attractive for the passing motorists. In each instance it gives recognition to the value of trees.

What the highway department is doing in the way of beautification with trees is in accord with the practice in certain cities of setting out a certain number of new trees every year as a provision for the future. These may or may not be at points where other trees have had to come down for various reasons. They may be along new avenues or at points where trees are desirable, but in all instances they are provisions for the future of the community and represent a policy that has much to commend it.

In the planting of trees along the highways of the state there is involved only a part of the beautification that the department is doing. Landscaping has been done at many points to the apparent improvement of previous conditions, but while this work is going on and being admired there are those who are contributing to it and living on roads which have not as yet received any attention in the way of improvement who feel that this beautification and landscape work ought to be delayed until such a time as the highway needs have been met. Instead of putting the money into this kind of work they feel that it should be employed first in giving good roads to sections which are entitled to them.

This belief that there are still greater needs than landscaping, however commendable that is by itself, is not simply held by a few. They feel that the more important should come before the less important work.

THE FLEXIBLE TARIFF

When it became evident that an expression was necessary from the president concerning what he regarded as an important feature of the tariff bill he was not prevented in giving it because it had been said that he would have nothing to say about the tariff until congress was through with it.

President Hoover isn't now telling congress what it should do in regard to the rates in the new bill but he does set forth what he believes to be strong reasons for the retention of the flexible provision of the tariff. This, it is to be remembered, is not something new. It already exists and has been employed for the last half dozen years. There is a move to have congress rather than the president make the decision if the tariff commission finds conditions warrant an increase or a decrease in the rates.

When congress gets through its wrangling over the tariff it is not difficult to understand that there are likely to be some mistakes. Rates could easily be left too high or too low. On the other hand, it has been shown that because of changing conditions the rates which were established when the tariff bill was enacted fail to meet requirements some time later. For unjustified conditions of this kind to be retained until congress got around to further tariff revision would be a hardship. It is to meet such situations that the tariff commission is favored and through such a study of the facts as it makes and the recommendations it presents, the president is expected to apply the correction through raising or lowering the rates in keeping therewith.

President Hoover has shown that the flexible tariff works both ways. There have been more increases than decreases but that was because of the conditions which required such changes and it is apparent that if the need exists and can be shown, proper adjustment can be expected only if action is taken in accord with the facts. It is believed that the president is justified in urging the retention of the flexible clause in the tariff bill.

THE PRICE OF CARELESSNESS

Even though much is said concerning them, and efforts are made to prevent them, accidents in this country continue to cause a huge number of needless deaths. It was always so that many lost their lives through accidents but since the automobile has become so popular the number has experienced a big increase.

According to the record which has been kept by the National Safety council there is a death every five minutes in this country from accidents and there is no country that equals it. This, in spite of the various organizations and efforts that are put forth in behalf of safety, is not a record to be proud of. It is a record that has been reached in full knowledge of what was going on, but either because we have become hardened to the accidental deaths, or are unwilling to take the necessary but simple preventive measures, they continue in increasing numbers.

There will be no surprise when it is shown that the automobile is responsible for more deaths from accidents than any other agency. It is told by the news of the day until the killing of a person in the highway becomes a matter of frequent occurrence when it almost never happened before. Statistics show that there were 27,500 automobile fatalities in the last year and that the deaths from this cause had jumped from 22 for every 100,000 of population to 195 in 16 years. And the worst of it is that it shows no sign of decreasing.

All the accidental deaths are not due to the auto, but it caused more than 25 per cent of the 96,000 in 1928. There were 24,000 cases where industrial accidents resulted in deaths and the same number of cases where death followed accidents in the homes.

When we stop to realize that a large percentage of these deaths might have been prevented it represents a frightful sacrifice of human life. While we understand what has been the cause of them there doesn't appear to be sufficient interest to put an end to the causes. In a great number of cases it represents the price of carelessness and yet, even though it is an easy matter to adopt simple precautions and we are constantly being urged to do so, the safety appeals get far less consideration than they deserve. Even though human life is at stake it is difficult to place an effective curb upon recklessness.

WASTE PREVENTION

What stands out as an important bit of cooperation on the part of the operators of the oil fields in the Kettleman hills region in California is the agreement which has been reached with the federal oil conservation board to suspend production for the remainder of the year. This being done in two localities in that field with the probability that a third will be included means that a valuable effort will be made to decrease the surplus production.

It rests with any of the producers to check their output if they desire, but more often there is disclosed the disposition to participate in the competition and by throwing so much more oil onto the market than is needed bring about a wastage of an important natural resource.

This example in California is bound to be watched with keen interest by many other than oil producers. It is action taken under the law for the conservation of oil and gas in that state after the importance of such a step has been set forth by the federal commission. It shows that there has been recognition of the soundness of the arguments put forth in behalf of conservation, and it is evident that the producers believe that it will be advantageous to refrain from flooding the country with an ever-increasing surplus. Whatever goes to waste simply means a depletion of the supply which is going to be needed later on.

The stoppage of production by these producers may not eliminate the surplus but it should have a bearing upon the point which the conservation board has been stressing. The results should mean the keeping of the oil and gas in reserve until there is a greater need for it than prevails today.

WHAT PUBLIC SENTIMENT DOES

Some few months ago the country was astonished to learn that certain newspapers had been acquired in whole or in part by the International Paper & Power Co. It was regarded as an effort to control and influence the press, although it was insisted by the company that it was simply a move for the securing of the paper business of these particular newspapers.

Even though that was the only reason for the entrance into the newspaper field, it soon became evident to both the purchasers and to the newspapers involved that it did not represent a healthy situation. The public had not swallowed the explanation and the result was that the purchaser has been gradually disposing of its newspaper property. This was urged by those who had regarded the company as an easy and quick source for loans, and the disposition of such acquisitions and the transferring of loans have been steadily going on, culminating this week with the sale to a syndicate of the Boston newspaper properties.

Such is the power of public sentiment. The president of the International explains the turn about face on the part of the company when he declares that public sentiment was not favorable and he recognized that the simpler way to avoid the criticism that was being encountered on all sides was to dispose of the properties instead of trying to explain without having the explanation accepted.

This will long stand as evidence of the reception that can be expected when any powerful interest in one line undertakes to tie up with it a string of newspapers in various parts of the country. However much it may be above board it is certain to be subjected to criticism that would be more harmful than the tie-up would be beneficial.

EDITORIAL NOTES

From all the reports it looks as if Shearer was trimming his employers most of the time.

What are you going to do with that extra hour over the week end when you cease saving daylight?

The man on the corner says: He may think so, but Mr. Ringling hasn't merged all the shows on earth.

The testimony concerning Shearer is such that he will experience some difficulty getting another such job as a reporter.

Seeking a divorce a New York woman claimed her husband's table manners were atrocious. Perhaps he wasn't given a fork?

How old are sidewalks? is a question that has been asked. From appearances, if their condition is due to age, some of them would hate to have their age revealed.

ON THE OTHER FOOT

The wheels of the afternoon train beat a rapid tattoo on the tracks, while in one of the chair cars Sally Cunningham listened to them, and to the beating of her heart, which was as rapid as the noise of the wheels but less regular.

Those last short miles! Already the first houses of the little college town had come into view. At the end of these miles John Painter was waiting —John, whom she had met during Christmas vacation: John, who had invited her up for the prom; John, for whose benefit she had saved and planned for the gorgeous evening gown that rested, with all its brilliant accessories, in the bag at her feet.

All of Sally's future happiness was bound up in the hours that were waiting at the end of this ride. If all went well, who could tell what might not be the result? If all did not go well, John might be lost, Sally shuddered at the very thought.

The porter came with his brush. In a daze she submitted to his ministrations, then saw him pick up her bag and bear it to the platform. As the train slowed down for the station she suddenly sank into the chair. She was positively weak from excitement.

Somehow she reached the door of the car and got down the steps. And there was John, beaming with a smile of welcome. He came forward with outstretched hand, but as she took it he laughed and drew her against the shaggy softness of his luxurious topcoat. Sally finally managed to free herself enough to utter a tremulous laughing greeting.

She pointed out her bag to him, and a few minutes later she was sitting beside him in his roadster, being whisked away toward the hotel where she was to stay.

"I suppose you'll want to slick up a bit for dinner," he said as they drew up in front of the hotel. "I'll wait for you and then take you over to the house."

"Yes, and I must get my gown hung up, and I'll probably have to press it," she replied, finding her normal voice at last. "But I won't be long."

A bellboy conducted her to her room while John settled down to wait in the lobby. When the boy had been dismissed and Sally was alone she placed her bag on a chair and inserted the key in the lock.

She was surprised to find that she had not locked the bag, for she distinctly remembered doing so. Hastily she lifted the lid. And then the room spun around her and she sank upon the bed with absolute panic clutching at her heart. This bag was not hers!

For minutes she lay on the bed, her whole world tumbling about her ears, unable to think and conscious only that all was lost! Then somehow she found her way to the lobby and in a broken-hearted voice explained to John what had happened. He immediately hurried to a telephone and called the railway station. Nobody else had reported a similar error, and they had no extra bag there.

"We'll hurry around to one of the shops here," said John, "and pick out another dress. They can have it ready for you if I urge them a little." But Sally shook her head hopelessly. She had no money for another dress, and girls did not accept things like that from men. Unless they were married to them, she added to herself.

For a moment John was silent. Then he grinned and led Sally to a telephone booth.

"We can both get in here with a little co-operation," he said. "Now listen carefully to everything I say, and if you don't like what I'm doing just stop me." He thumbed through the telephone directory and called a number.

"Hello," he said. "Mr. Jacques? John Painter speaking. How's chances of getting a marriage license tonight? Right away? Great! I will be right over."

The wall of the booth supported Sally, which was a fortunate thing. Then John twisted his head around in the cramped space and said with a grin, "Guess I can buy my own wife a dress! Now I'll have to call one of the stores and fix it up so we can get the clothes. And then it's us for the license and a minister."

Loungers in the hotel lobby were amazed at the extraordinary spectacle of a young man embracing a girl in a telephone booth, meanwhile trying to thumb through the directory to find a number.—Chicago News.

YOUR HEALTH

Personality—Plus or Minus?

By Helen L. Myrick, Executive Sec'y Illinois Society for Mental Hygiene
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Have you "personality"? Do you meet people easily without self conscious awkwardness? Or are you shy, afraid to talk, clumsy and uncertain of yourself? If you are, what do you do about it? Do you try to cover it up with bravado, a false aggressiveness and cynicism which seems to repel others or do you avoid people as much as possible and withdraw into a world of your own?

Let us examine this thing called "personality" which is the goal of all who wish to be a success in their work and play, in marriage, motherhood throughout life.

Personality as such is the inner self, one's feelings, thoughts, desires and attitudes. When we say "she has personality" we really mean that she is able to express her inner self in a pleasant way that attracts others. Often this ability to express one's self easily is confused with physical beauty. However when we cast our eyes over our friends and acquaintances, we discover that many pretty to behold have no charm of personality and others who are popular are not in the least beautiful.

How is it done, this personality stuff? Be yourself—the good old slang phrase of the present moment has a lot to do with it. The ability to forget oneself in the thing or the person of the moment is one secret. In other words a real enjoyment of people and incidents, interest in things outside of oneself to the extent of blotting out all thought of self. Are you able to do that? If you can't you should try to cultivate it. There are many ways of doing so.

In the first place, learn to do things well which you already are doing or are interested in. Then experiment with new interests; you may have hidden talents which merely need a chance. Give them a chance, but don't be overwhelmed if you strike a false lead, continue to experiment until you find your line. Then use it freely whatever it is. It may only be interest in something rather than ability to do it.

That brings up another question. You would not try to discuss a show with someone who is sick with a cold would you? But do you consider the other fellow's point of view at all times when he is well? Just talking about things that interest you regardless of others isn't going to add to your popularity. So we might add to the phrase "be yourself" another one, "at the same time think of the other fellow, his ideas and mood of the moment." Sympathetic imagination, some people call it, not sloppy sentimentality which is often confused with the term sympathy, but simply an ability to adapt your own self expression to those around you.

What about your sense of humor, have you one really, or do you merely make fun of other people's mistakes and misfortunes? Study someone who has "personality," doesn't she have a real sense of humor which she uses to point out the funny side of things in a way that cheers you all up and gets you laughing? Does yours wear through thick and thin? Can you pick out the humorous side of dull situations on your way to work or in the office or factory and brighten up the whole place by showing it? Can you laugh at yourself instead of at other people? That is a saving grace and can easily be cultivated. That takes courage and a sense of real values.

What about these real values? The really well liked person has them, hasn't she? She does not paralyze herself by always thinking that she is inferior or superior to other people. She develops her abilities insofar as possible, tries to discover new ones, recognizes her limitations and accepts herself fairly. Much of our difficulty in expressing our personality lies in trying to be like someone else instead of being ourselves.

Many times we show our dissatisfaction with our failure to come up to an ideal of behavior by being irritable over petty things which in themselves are not especially annoying. All sorts of resentments and disappointments are indirectly expressed this way which prevent us from showing up our good qualities. Besides trying to accept our limitations, how else can we overcome unhappiness over anything? Well, how do you? A good spell of crying sometimes does it, rather to the detriment of one's appearance, but lots of times that isn't possible to indulge in or doesn't relieve one. Religion is a great solace, of course. So is music. Diversion of any kind usually helps one to regain one's poise, either through a good hard game of volley ball, a swimming race or a thrilling show. The thing is to let it serve to change your mood, not merely to distract you for the moment.

Keep well. So much is written about the importance of good health as a prevention of illness that we get rather bored by it. But the relation of health to personality has not been pointed out so frequently. Headaches, indigestion, fatigue, do affect one's mood a lot. Even though one says nothing about these physical ailments, one can't be bubbling over with fun and keen interest in work, play and people when one doesn't feel up to the mark. Most of these conditions can be avoided by following the ordinary rules of hygiene and diet, and by having a yearly physical examination. You will be surprised how much easier life is by doing so.

This all may sound like old stuff to you, just what you do every day; but suppose you stop and think over your contacts with other people at home, at work and with your friends and see whether you really are successful as a person—then try a few of these suggestions. They are of as much importance to your mental poise, mental health, and social well being as physical hygiene is to your physical health.

CHILD TRAINING

What Ails That Child!

Lorena Daniel Solberg

Ordinarily, Patty Lou is such a happy, contented, affectionate child, so when all-of-a-sudden she became illhumored, bellicose, antagonistic to everyone and everything, we couldn't understand what the trouble was.

We had been away for a six weeks' visit and she had been so delighted to be home again, so happy to see her daddy and little neighbor-playmates. And she had had such fun telling all about the cows and chickens and about sleeping on the train! Everyone was so glad to see her! She was the happiest little three-year-old anyone could imagine. Even after being at home for more than two weeks, she was still repeating, "Let's not ever go away any more."

Then suddenly, she started whining, a thing unusual for her. I immediately attempted to correct that, but, instead of responding, she became positively belligerent. She was hostile even toward her daddy whom she adores. Discipline had no effect whatsoever. So, Daddy and I held a consultation.

"Spoiled. Utterly spoiled. Too much attention while away. Got to conquer her." These were Daddy's convictions.

Having been a teacher of the wee people for a number of years, I knew the value of analysis. Perhaps she was spoiled—that certainly was the way she acted—but why the sudden attack?

So I answered, "Well—perhaps. Let's check up on other likely causes.

"Daily habits? Good. Stomach? No apparent reason for trouble. Sleep? Normal. Clothing? Comfortable. Shoes (so often the cause of irritability)? O. K. Spoiled?—Perhaps.

"Could anything have happened to irritate her seriously? Have you crossed her or perhaps wounded her the last day or so?" I asked. "Little people are sensitive and you know how broken-hearted she is when you scold. Sometimes she even takes play-spanks seriously."

"That shouldn't cause a two days' demonstration," he replied. "Besides, I have been so busy in the garden this week-end that I have hardly seen her."

"Same with me," I answered. "I've been so busy I've scarcely said a word to her except when she required discipline. Perhaps she is 'at outs' with her playmates."

"No, the Crawleys and the Roberts are all away for a few days."

"Oh! I have it!" I exclaimed. "She was petted and fussed over while we were away and petted and loved when we got back. She was radiantly happy to be home and everyone just as happy to have her. Then came the anti-climax. Suddenly, her beloved Daddy doesn't even see her, the children go away and Mother doesn't say a word to her except to scold. I've been scolding and punishing her because she was lonesome!"

The next day, Patty Lou "helped" Mother with the dishes and pulled the clothes out of the wringer when Mother washed; there was a wonderful romp, then songs and a story and time for "just lovin'". The remedy was more effective than castor-oil for tummy-aches and when Daddy came home that night it was a shiny-eyed, happy Patty Lou who ran to meet him and tell him confidentially that "Mother was a nice lady, a vera, vera nice lady."

IN DAY'S NEWS

Cartagena.

Recent dispatches from Cartagena relative to a new political situation in Colombia, bring Colombia's chief naval station into the news limelight. Cartagena, with its four hundred years of stirring history, is still the most Spanish of all the former Spanish towns in Central and South America.

The city lies on Colombia's Caribbean coast on a peninsula joined to the mainland by a causeway," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society. "Its grey and ivory stone and brick houses with their corrugated red roofs contrast with the green hills that rise in the background and form a pleasant picture from the water.

"Lying parallel to the mainland is Tierra Bomba island which must be skirted by vessels entering the harbor of Cartagena. Of the two entrances, the Boca Grande (Large Mouth) is nearest the city; but it is too shallow for shipping to pass through, so the lower entrance or Boca Chica (Small Mouth) which lies eight miles distant, is utilized.

"Walls in some places forty feet thick encircle the old town and recall the days when the city was one of the strongest defenses on the Spanish Main. Although they are now dismantled, several well-preserved fortresses, which dot the walls, present a military aspect.

"Arches, balconies and grills give Cartagena as Moorish an air as any city of southern Spain. Crumbling arches and faded plaster structures attest the city's age. Many of the balconies exhibit fanciful carving in stone and the grills are often of wrought iron in arabesque designs. The doors and windows which front on the narrow, dark, cobble-stoned streets, are heavily grilled. Most of the older houses are built in square shapes around a patio or courtyard where a grass-grown plot, a well or fountain, plants, a tree or two and usually a gorgeously coloured tropical bird, make a delightful spot in this always warm city. The mean annual temperature is 82 degrees F.

"Burros and automobiles pass through the chief gate of Cartagena, a venerable structure of yellow stone surmounted by a steeple. Electric lights brighten the streets that once echoed to the footsteps of Sir Francis Drake's plundering crew. Tramways roll along under overhanging balconies of lilac or orange plaster. Women in Parisian dresses shop in the tiny stores with their stocks of brilliant shawls, jewels, or luscious tropical fruit, which nestle in the colonnades surrounding the Plaza de Los Coches. The marble pulpit of the Jesuit church of Saint John of God is celebrated throughout South America.

"At present Cartagena is secondary in commercial importance to Barranquilla, which is also a Caribbean seaport. Nevertheless it does a thriving trade and two-masted schooners as well as large merchant steamers line the waterfront. The bulk of the exports which pass through the town consist of coffee, chicle, ipecac, hides, gold, platinum, balsam and cacao. Negroes in canoes carry on traffic with natives in the many small towns bordering the mainland.

"The larger part of Cartagena's population is Negro, while mestizos or mixed Indians and whites form the comparatively small middle class, and pure whites of Spanish descent form only about a tenth. About half the business in Cartagena is carried on by Syrians. They have agents throughout the town and country and no hamlet in the interior is free from a visit from a Syrian peddler with his omnipresent pack. The railroad out of Cartagena extends only to Calamar about 85 miles distant, but the intrepid peddlers pierce the interior afoot or by canoe. Much of the profits of the Syrian merchants are invested in Colombian mines and real estate.

"Before the war, Cartagena's imports came largely from Europe because the average Cartagena business man had traveled in Europe, was familiar with European wares and felt a racial compatibility with Europeans. During the war when trans-Atlantic commercial shipping was tied up, he was forced to become acquainted with American products. Since then commerce between the United States and Colombia has grown by leaps and bounds. The proximity of the two countries and the rapid delivery of goods has largely been responsible for this growth."

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26—Who is to be the master mind—the Charles Evans Hughes—of Mr. Hoover's projected five-power naval conference?

That is, of course, if there is such a conference, and its American delegation dominates. The Bystander is not going to feel at all sure that there will be a five-power parley until Paris and Rome are heard from much more particularly.

But assuming that a five-way naval talkfest does gather in London in December or January, who will compose the American delegation? Will its composition follow the original Washington conference precedent?

Will Mr. Henry L. Stimson, secretary of state, be delegation field marshal as was Secretary Hughes; and will the next ranking member be Mr. William E. Borah, senator from Idaho and chairman of the foreign relations committee?

That would be in order, for the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, then foreign relations committee head, stood second in the Washington conference delegation list. And how would Stimson and Borah hit it off?

The non-partisan character of the Washington delegation makeup was secured by assigning the late Senator Oscar Underwood of Alabama, then minority leader in the senate, to the group.

Senator Joe Robinson of Arkansas now holds that job, so he rates the democratic appointment to the new naval delegation, if any.

The G. O. P. Dean.

There were four members of the Washington conference delegation, the fourth being that elder statesman of the Grand Old Party, Hon. Elihu Root of New York.

No other man in contemporary American life then or now combined in his public service experience so much to make him the logical selection for such an assignment.

As a former war secretary, former secretary of state, former senator and a man pre-eminent in both corporation and international law, Root stood and stands in a class almost by himself. Yet his age makes it virtually certain he could not again be drafted.

And there is another thing about the new conference. Important as it may be in the eyes of President Hoover or Prime Minister MacDonald, it will cover nowhere near the scope of the Washington gathering. That, it will be recalled, was far more than a naval limitations conference. It was a double barreled affair to deal with Pacific and Far Eastern questions as well as naval limitations.

Double-Edged.

That was the very genius of the Harding-Hughes frontal attack on the possible war problem. The naval treaty was most in the public eye, to be sure, but the actual basis for it was the agreements made in the nine-power Pacific treaty.

The Washington conference was not merely a question of naval ratios or yardsticks of fighting relativities at sea, as the new conference bids fair to be.

It was for these international political purposes the wit and wisdom of Root were especially needed. You can trace not much of Root in the naval limitations formulae. Those were from Hughes and the naval experts.

Root's handiwork appears in the other treaties and especially in the attempted limitations upon use of submarines as commerce raiders in war. Security of innocent neutral commerce at sea in war time has been a hobby with Root since his first contact with national affairs.

Those who drive through the country see many interesting things that have a touch not always caught locally.

Vicious

Eight year old Barbara had spent a happy afternoon on the shores of the bay gathering live mussels from the rocks, hitherto unknown to her. She took them up to her room with pride and evidently the night light that was left burning when she went to bed stimulated the captives to action, for her mother heard her calling in great alarm. "Oh, mother, come here! Those shells opened their mouths at me!"

DESIRE FEDERAL LAW DEFINING SWEET CORN

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP)—The sweet corn industry is menaced by lack of a federal law defining the trade meaning of sweet corn and regulating the marketing of this commodity in interstate commerce, say Ohio and Michigan truck gardeners.

Common field corn, they say, has been shipped to the big markets and wherever it is sold as sweet corn consumer demand for the product has fallen off.

Growers contend there is a marked difference in the sugar content of common field corn and the leading varieties of sweet corn.

Falling Hair The Result of Nervous Scalp

9 Out of 10 Men and Women Have Nervous Scalp, Probably the Commonest Cause of Dandruff and Thin, Faded, Brittle, Falling Hair.

Nervous scalp is commonly the condition causing a too oily, too dry, tight, tender, itchy dandruff-caked scalp, and thin, sickly-looking hair.

To correct and prevent nervous scalp and the harm it does to even naturally fine heads of hair, Parisian Sage was scientifically developed.

From the very first application, Parisian Sage has a wonderfully soothing, relaxing effect on the scalp nerves, increases the blood supply to the dying hair-roots, insures them the nourishment they so badly need for vigorous new hair growth.

Parisian Sage is easy to use, perfectly harmless, and not the least bit sticky or greasy.

If you want a clean, cool scalp, free from every trace of dandruff—if you want a fine, thick head of live, attractive hair—hair that looks well all the time—get a bottle of Parisian Sage today at Lee and Osgood's or any drugstore, and use it according to the simple directions.

LAW SUIT ARISES FROM ROSE STREET DRAIN

Residents on Rose street have reached the superior court in a dispute that has arisen over a drain there in a suit that has been brought by William Kurdziel and Sophie Sierdnicki against Helen Sakowich, Felix and Julia Makuta.

The drain or pipe has been in existence for many years and is necessary for the use and enjoyment of the plaintiffs' property as it provides the only method for carrying sewage from their houses, it is alleged.

The complaint recites that on or about May 1, of this year, Helen Sakowich, by herself, her agents and servants dug up the drain or pipe and broke it and blocked up its end so that no sewage or other matter could pass through it and ever since has continued to keep the drain so blocked and broken and has prevented the plaintiffs from entering upon her premises for the purposes of repairing the drain and restoring it to its proper use.

By reason of these acts of Helen Sakowich, it is alleged the plaintiffs have been deprived of the use of the drain so as to impair the health of themselves and their families; the value of their property has been depreciated; and they have been put to a large expense for disposing of sewage and waste matter from their premises and will be put to a further expense for the repair of the drain.

From the Sakowich woman, the plaintiffs claim $1,000 damages and an injunction preventing and restraining her, her agents and servants from any further interference with the use and enjoyment of said drain by the plaintiffs.

Against the Mikutas is sought a judgment compelling them to pay their proportionate share of the costs and charges of this suit and of the necessary repairs of said drain.

WANTS COURT TO RULE COLCHESTER MORTGAGE INVALID

Suit has been brought in the superior court by Louis Bernstein of Colchester to have a mortgage on property he owns on the Exeter road declared invalid. The defendants named in the action are the heirs, representatives and creditors of the late William A. Williams.

According to the claim made in the suit a man named Daniel Leary mortgaged the property on Dec. 1, 1887, to William M. Williams, who has since died, and Bernstein alleges that he has been in undisturbed possession of the land since April 7, 1912, and for more than 17 years next preceding the commencement of this action. Bernstein claims that he had no knowledge of the existence of this mortgage until recently.

The court is asked to give judgment in favor of Bernstein, declaring the mortgage invalid as alien against the property and such other and further equitable relief as may be necessary and proper under the circumstances.

SEEKS FORECLOSURE ON GIANT'S NECK PROPERTY

Four new foreclosure actions have been brought in the superior court for New London county and the papers in the actions have been filed with the court clerk. The Savings Bank of New London asks foreclosure of a $1,600 mortgage in a suit against Clarence L. Brockett of New London, Edna Brousseau Watkins and Adam L. Fensley of East Lyme and William W. Palmer of Lebanon. According to the complaint Mr. Brockett is alleged to have given the bank his note for $1,600 April 4, 1925, and property at Giant's Neck, East Lyme, was mortgaged to secure the note. Edna Brousseau Watkins has possession of the property. Adam Fensley has an attachment for $60 on the property and Mr. Palmer has a $1,154 mortgage on the property.

The Savings Bank of New London has also brought a foreclosure suit against Francis D. and May Birtch of Stonington and the Union Bank of New London. It is claimed that on March 8, 1925, Francis D. and May Birtch gave a note for $5,500 to the Savings bank and mortgaged property in Stonington to secure the note. The Union Bank and Trust Co., claims to hold two mortgages on the property, one for $4,400 and the other for $800.

Foreclosure of property at Black Point beach in East Lyme is also asked by the Savings Bank of New London in a suit the bank has brought against Arthur S. Thourin of East Hampton. The bank claims to hold a mortgage of $1,400 on the property and James Jay Smith claims to hold a mortgage of $330.19 on the property.

In a suit brought by Martha W. Brugger Thoren of Newburgh, N. Y., against her former husband, Arthur Brugger, alias Adolph Brugger and Lillian Brugger, both of Stonington, the plaintiff asks foreclosure by sale of a judgment lien of $3,267.25 and costs of $69.69. The plaintiff alleges that on July 9, 1927, she obtained the judgment against her former husband following which a judgment lien was placed on property owned by Mr. Brugger in Stonington. Luker claims that the alleged slanderous remarks damaged his business.

It is further charged in the complaint that Mandrofsky sold bread to persons in Griswold, Canterbury, Plainfield and Voluntown, that the bread was not of a high quality and that Mandrofsky represented to the purchasers that the bread was made by Luker. The purchasers bought the bread believing that Luker made it. Luker claims this has also damaged his business.

BACKUS HOSPITAL AUXILIARY

Next Tuesday evening, at eight o'clock in Slater hall, the fifth annual meeting of the Women's auxiliary of the Backus hospital will be held. While over 1,700 postcards have been sent out announcing the distinguished speaker, Judge Arthur P. Ells of the superior court of Connecticut who will speak on the relations between a city and its hospital, anyone who is interested is cordially invited. The change in time and place has been made this year for one purpose: to elicit the interest of the men of the community, as well as the women, in the work of the local hospital—an institution so vital to the life of our city.

The work of the auxiliary has gone quietly on its way during the summer months. Flowers have brightened the wards; magazines and books have found their way each week into hands strong enough to hold them; holidays have been celebrated by some cheerful remembrance, and through the nurses' recreation committee the nurses have had the use of two double bathhouses at Ocean Beach which proved an exhilerating diversion for them.

As always, there is great need for old soft, clean linen and cotton cloth at the hospital. As this is housecleaning time in many homes, housekeepers are urged to remember the empty hospital shelves which must be filled. All pieces, large or small, whether from sheets, pillow slips, towels, table linens or from cotton underwear, night gowns, etc., can be used to advantage. Mrs. Charles A. Saxton, who will be glad to call for any bundles, can be reached by a post card sent to her address, 329 Washington street or by telephone, 2043-5. The ways of using this cloth are manifold and whoever can send that to the hospital is doing it a real service.

Already work has begun on surgical dressings by the various groups of church women. This was a very successful venture last year. Every church sent a delegation of its women to work for the hospital two successive Thursdays during the year. They met at the room loaned by the Central Baptist church. This program is meeting with an enthusiastic response this fall—large numbers of dressings being made each week. By this means the nurses are relieved for other service and the women of the community are given a chance to do real and definite practical work.

The donations since May include toys, games, puzzles, old linen and jars, books and magazines, a crate of oranges, flowers, rubber sheeting, and a gift of diapers for the maternity ward. The following is the list of the donors: Mrs. Wallace S. Allis, Mrs. George Grant, Mrs. G. L. Randall, Mrs. Maynard, Mrs. Charles Riordan, Rev. G. F. Bailey, Miss Porteous, Mrs. J. C. Morgan, Mrs. H. B. Larrabee, B. P. Bishop, Don Houghton, Mrs. Charles S. Holbrook, Mrs. David Sussler, the Women's auxiliary, the Grace Chapter of King's Daughters, Mrs. Charles B. Lee, Mrs. O. B. CHILDREN SURPRISE ELDERS WITH BIG FAIR

GREENLEY, Colo., —(AP)— An adage that decreed children should be seen and not heard was given a severe jolt by the rising generation of Weld county this month.

For years they have vied for junior honors at the county fair conducted by their parents and were disturbed this year when their timorous elders decided not to tackle a fair, haunted by the lurking fear it would not prove successful.

For a time it seemed that the children must accept the edict of their parents with the customary meekness expected of adolescents, but then things began to happen. The hours they had labored with their livestock and farm crops must not go for naught, they told the county superintendent of schools and the county agricultural agent and the two officials agreed.

The appeals set the wheels in motion for an organization that conducted a successful junior fair September 10 and 11 on the island grove fairgrounds. It drew 4,000 children from the county with exhibits of their agricultural prowess that excited the admiration of their elders. Admission was free.

It was a field day for the children, who created a world of their own where they reveled in their accomplishments. Agricultural exhibits were brought by the truckload from distances as great as 100 miles. They ranged from purebred livestock to sugar beets.

Victory in competition brought a reward in the form of premiums and prizes given by local merchants and citizens.

As definite evidence of the success of the fair the children had the request that they show the winning exhibits in the state fair.

EELWORMS MAKE INROADS ON STRAWBERRY INDUSTRY

GAINESVILLE, Fla., — (AP) — Eelworms, or mematodes, are responsible for an annual loss of two per cent. of the strawberry crop in this country, says Dr. A. N. Brooks, associate plant pathologist at the Florida experiment station.

Dr. Brooks says the eelworms are responsible for a disease called "crimps" in Florida, the "dwarf disease" in Louisiana and "red plant" in Great Britain. They are not the same variety as those that cause root knot, as they can only be seen under a microscope.

Mematodes remain in the soil year after year, and are washed into the plant bud by rain or irrigation. They travel slowly in moist fields and rapidly where the ground is inundated, and are also spread by removal and resetting of diseased runners from nursery beds.

Dr. Brooks said the eelworms were hard to detect because affected plants do not show immediate symptoms. His suggestion for combatting the disease they cause involves frequent inspection of fields with removal of the crimped plants, and a crop rotation to reduce the number of worms in the soil.

AMERICAN EAGLE RISKS EXTINCTION

NEW YORK (AP)—The American bald eagle, whose likeness appears on the coat of arms and the coins of the United States, is said to be in danger of extinction.

This report is part of a pamphlet about "serious danger of extinction of many North American birds" signed by two associate curators of the American Museum of Natural History and by a New York business man.

The curators are W. DeWitt Miller and Dr. Willard G. Van Name, and the business man is Davis Quinn. Miller, whose field is ornithology, said that the museum has no connection with the pamphlet.

The publication says that there has been an "estimated total destruction of at least 70,000" American bald eagles in Alaska since the Alaska eagle bounty law went into effect in 1917. It says that bounties have been paid on 41,812 eagles.

Nine birds are listed as "beyond saving," including the trumpeter swan, whooping crane, California condor and flamingo. In the class of the bald eagle, "those possibly within the realm of saving," are 16 other birds, among them the wild turkey and the woodcock.

SOUND AND TELEVISION MAY BE SYNCHRONIZED

BOSTON, (AP)—A new television station is expected to be in operation in Boston early in October.

Under a construction permit granted by the Federal Radio Commission, A. M. Morgan, head of the Shortwave and Television Laboratories of Boston, is beginning the erection of a 500-watt station. The station is to undertake experimental broadcasts on the 2,000 to 2,100 kilocycle band.

Plans are under consideration, Mr. Morgan says, for effecting a tieup of the television broadcasts with sound broadcasts so that programs may become visible as well as audible.

AUSTRALIA ROUNDS UP UNLICENSED LISTENERS

SYDNEY (AP)—The postal department of the Australian government has instituted a campaign against unlicensed radio listeners. About 1,700 listeners have been convicted.

Australia has 1,289,000 listeners and the license fee amounts to $5.84 per set.

USE MAGNETIC CURRENT TO STIMULATE PEACHES

CONWAY, Ark. —(AP)— Russell Cole, grocer and truck farmer, has persuaded the owners of Highland orchards to harness the earth's magnetic current in an experiment to grow more and finer peaches.

Cole says he found that galvanized wire buried between rows of vegetables and connected with an aerial strung 15 feet in the air, resulted in a marked increase in yield and quality.

SHARKEY MAKES SHORT WORK OF LOUGHRAN, STOPPING HIM IN THIRD

(By Edward J. Neil, Associated Press Sports Writer)

YANKEE STADIUM, N. Y., Sept. 26—(AP)—Jack Sharkey, Boston sailor, jumped to the top of the heavyweight brigade tonight with a sensational three-round victory over Tommy Loughran.

A crowd of 45,000, drawn to the spacious American league ball park by the lure of the final heavyweight spectacle of the outdoor season, were astonished when the Tar crushed Loughran from the picture in just 27 seconds of the third session.

The crowd that paid approximately $300,000 saw one of the most amazing endings of modern fistic battles as Loughran, rendered helpless by a vicious left hook to the body and a right that crashed full on his chin, took a count of five, rose to his feet, and stood dazed in a neutral corner as Referee Lou Magnolia counted him out.

Seldom has Sharkey appeared to better advantage. From the opening gong, Loughran, a slight favorite, was nearly helpless before the vicious Gob's power and confidence.

Sailor John outboxed the former master of light heavyweights, outspeeded him with sharp left jabs, and handled him with ease in the clinches.

The fast, careful milling of the first two rounds turned into a slaughter in the third. The echoes of the gong still were ringing in the huge ball yard when Sharkey dove across the ring, rammed his left to Loughran's body and before Tom could raise his guard, smashed home a swinging right to the chin. The blow caught the Philadelphian a glancing crack on the chin and he toppled backwards to the floor, his head resting across the lower rope in his own corner.

Tommy didn't seem to be greatly hurt, for he looked about him and climbed to his feet at the count of five.

Almost sedately, the white skinned youngster, his face composed and eyes open, walked along the ropes to a neutral corner, one hand raised to his cheek.

Loughran turned his back to his foe and gazed out into the audience, oblivious of his surroundings. Sharkey, almost climbed Tommy's back when Magnolia released him and waved Loughran back to his corner.

For several minutes, Tommy sat in his chair as his handlers threw water upon him and sought to bring him back to consciousness. Finally he woke up, wrapped a towel about his face, and left the ring, beaten for the first time in four years and knocked out for the first time in his career.

Almost from the opening gong, it appeared that Sharkey, would prove the master of the recent graduate from the 175 pound ranks. Sharkey was burned a deep tan in contrast to Loughran's fair skin.

At the start, Sharkey carried the fight to Tommy, who despite his 186 1-2 pounds, appeared almost small before the bull-like rushes of the 196-pound sailor. Every decisive blow in the first two sessions was struck by Sharkey and in each of these sessions he hurt Tommy with left hooks and an occasional right to the chin.

For a few moments in the first round Loughran speared Sharkey's face with left jabs, dodged swiftly as Sailor John charged forward, and pushed him about on the ropes. There were few decisive punches, however, and little evidence of the quick ending.

Sharkey's triumph, the first of importance he has scored since blasting Jimmy Maloney from the front ranks to earn a bout with Jack Dempsey in 1927, tossed him right back in the van of contenders for the heavyweight throne Gene Tunney left vacant. It gave Sharkey one of the nominations for the second battle on the Miami sands, when the title probably will be awarded next winter.

The Round by Round Detail

Round One—Carefully with the deepest respect for each other the big clean limbed fellows sparred in the center of the ring. Sharkey growled, buried his head, and smashed into Tommy's body with both hands. Loughran grunted a bit and locked up the Boston gob carefully. Tommy bounced over a left hook to the chin but Sharkey reached him with a long left hook as he dove forward again and bounced his right full on Tommy's chin. To the surprise of all Sharkey made the fancy Loughran miss with his neat left jabs and they bounced together to swap at close quarters. This time Tommy had things under control and he tied up Sharkey nicely as the bell rang.

Round Two—Sharkey's wild lunge went amiss as Tommy speared the sailor's head with a left and pushed him into the ropes. A bit peeved at such treatment, Sharkey dove in with a long right that missed by two feet and Loughran neatly hooked his left to the chin. They fenced in the center, trying to make each other lead, until Tommy grimly accepted the challenge and rattled three lefts off Sharkey's scowling face. Sharkey drove the dancing master to the ropes with a left hook to the body, bounced his right full on Loughran's chin and banged home two lefts to the head as they came away. Tommy was boxing studiously at the gong.

Round Third—Only after a few seconds after the gong sounded Sharkey sent a right hand to Loughran's chin that dropped him in his own corner, his head over the ropes. Tommy came up at the count of five but walked dazed to a neutral corner, turned his back on Sharkey and hung there helplessly. The referee held off Sharkey and awarded him the fight on a technical knockout.

The Preliminaries

In the preliminaries Joe Banovic, Binghamton, N. Y., heavyweight, stepped into the Loughran-Sharkey card as a substitute tonight and won a six round decision over Lou Barba, of New York, in an early preliminary. Banovic weighed 178 pounds, Barba 187.

Banovic, who came into the picture through the injury of Armand Emanuel San Francisco heavyweight, turned in an aggressive performance, hurling Barba about with a head attack that piled up a large margin.

In the opening four round match, Bill Darling 181, of the U. S. Navy, won the decision over Bob Carvill, 183, of England. Carvill took counts of nine in both the second and fourth rounds.

Tom Heeney, New Zealand veteran, who closed the 1928 season with an unsuccessful bid for Gene Tunney's title, stepped down many notches to whip George Hoffman, New York youngster, in the first ten round go. Heeney scaled 207, Hoffman 193 1-2.

The youngster finished strong, cutting Heeney's eye in the final round, but the Hard Rocks experience proved too much for him. The crowd booed the decision after several times showing their displeasure of the rough, close, slow milling during the bout.

Jack Gagnon, Boston heavyweight, won from Jimmy Maloney, a fellow townsman, on a foul after two minutes and six rounds of fighting in the seventh round of the semi-final, but on after the main bout. Although Gagnon was booed several times, once shortly before the disqualification, Maloney threw away the victory with several low blows.

Jimmy was warned once earlier in the battle to keep his punches above the beltline. The final punch was a left hook that again glanced low and Gagnon was awarded the decision. He weighed 190 1-2, pounds, Maloney 204.

HALL MAKES CLEAR THREE PUZZLING FOOTBALL RULES

NEW YORK, Sept. 26—(AP)—Three questions on interpretations of the football code, raised by coaches and officials during a series of conferences throughout New England and the middle Atlantic states, were announced and explained today by Edward K. Hall, chairman of the intercollegiate rules committee.

The mixup in the wording of section 8, was remedied by changing the first four lines to read:

"If a foul that does not involve possession of the ball is committed behind its goal line by the side which did not put the ball in play," etc. The incorrect rule read at the start: "x x x is committed behind the opponent's goal line by the side which put the ball in play," etc.

A fumbled kick under the new rules is dead where recovered by the kicking side. Ruling was asked on a play wherein the receiver of the kick, gains full possession and control of the ball but subsequently fumbles and the ball is recovered by the opposition before touching the ground.

Mr. Hall ruled that the ball is a recovered kick and that therefore a dead ball at the point of recovery. Mr. Hall also said:

"The forward pass is one of the most powerful weapons of the offense. Until the ball is actually passed, the members of the defensive team can have no definite knowledge as to its ultimate destination. The only defense against the pass after it has crossed the scrimmage line is to intercept it and either recover it or bat it to the ground. This opportunity of the defense which is their only opportunity to protect themselves must not be impaired. Players of the passing team who are eligible to recover the pass may interfere with opponents only in an actual attempt to recover it themselves. Ineligible players under the conditions described in the rule must not interfere in any way whatsoever."

ATHLETICS WIN FROM RED SOX, SIMMONS GETS HOMER

BOSTON, Sept. 26—(AP)—The Athletics opened their final trip to Boston this season with a 5 to 3 victory over the Red Sox, here today. The game really was won in the first inning when Al Simmons hit his 32nd homer with two mates aboard. Additional runs in the fourth and the fifth however, proved to be the ultimate margin.

George Earnshaw pitched six innings, earning his 22rd victory of the season but retired to give Rube Walberg a warm-up. The Rube permitted the Red Sox to get to him for three runs in the eighth, but throttled the rally before it had become really dangerous.

Earnshaw allowed only four hits in the six innings he worked. His mark of 22 victories is the high winning record for the two major leagues. Pat Malone of the Cubs is next best, with 22 games won. The score:

Walker Signs With Hudkins

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Mickey Walker, middleweight champion of the world, today signed a contract to meet Ace Hudkins, Nebraska contender in a ten round bout at Wrigley field, here, October 29.

Well, we picked a loser last night.

But we were not alone and there's absolutely no alibi but who imagined Sharkey would make such short work of it.

Even those who were on the right side of the fence and picked Sharkey were surprised at the suddenness of it. Well, it showed that the bout wasn't in the bag as some local boxing experts intimated.

When you put your predictions down in black and white there's no alibing yourself out of it. You folks who did not go on record can find a loophole but the others can't.

Now I suppose there'll be a lotta folks who take particular delight in saying "I told you so." And there'll be plenty who bring up the moth-eaten crack about a good big man always being better than a good little man.

And say, they tell me plenty of local Loughran men are slated to eat beans for a few days at least, while some of the Sharkey supporters are feasting on chicken at their expense. The largest wager we heard of was a $200 one that Sharkey would win by a K. O. Even money at that.

But can you imagine a local man who thought the bout was in the bag going down to New York to see it? When I heard it I thought I was being taken for a ride but they tell me it's a fact.

And now to the person that sent me the clipping from a New York paper saying that Johnny Kop was knocked out last night I'll say that the New York paper sure was wrong. Johnny did a neat job of knocking on his own hook.

It's mighty easy to confuse boxers in the ring unless you know them personally, which was what the New York sports writer did. No matter how big the paper it's always easy to make mistakes.

Anyway I thank the person who sent in the clipping; it shows that at least one person reads this column.

And now comes the world's series. Our guess is the Cubs, what's yours?

GROVE LETS HIS RECORD SPEAK FOR ITSELF

(By Brian Bell, Associated Press Sports Writer)

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26—(AP)—Robert Moses Grove, whose sinewy left arm may carry the fate of the Athletics in the word series, is the most taciturn White Elephant of the herd as well as its leading pitcher.

However, the southpaw of the tall, thin pitcher speaks an eloquent language. For three seasons in succession, he has won 20 or more ball games for Connie Mack, for three months of 1928 he seemed well on the way to 30.

When the A's had played 77 ball games, the half way mark, Grove had won 15 games and lost two. In the second half of the season, his momentum was considerably slowed, his record today of 20 victories and five defeats representing a dull performance in comparison to the earlier brilliant achievement.

Grove's contract was sold by Baltimore to the Athletics at the close of the 1924 season when he had completed five brilliant years with the Orioles. Transfer of the right to use Grove's left cost Connie Mack and his associates $100,000.

The lanky lefthander did not declare dividends in his first two years, but he made up for lost time later.

Grove rings up his quota of strikeouts, leading the league by a comfortable margin but he does not try to throw every ball past the batsman. The change has made him a better pitcher.

"Grove studies the batters now and pitches to their weaknesses, instead of just relying on his stuff," said Connie Mack.

PHILLIES BEAT OUT DODGERS FOR FIFTH PLACE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26—(AP)—The Phillies made it four in a row over Brooklyn here today, winning the get-away game by 12 to 3 and hurdling over the Robins into fifth place by half a game. It is the first time since 1917 that the Phils have been so high at this stage of the season.

Frank O'Doul and Babe Herman remained practically motionless in their race for the National league batting championship. O'Doul retained all but one point of his lead by getting two out of six as Herman got one of three. Johnny Frederick hit a homer. Dazzy Vance again failed to go the route, giving way to Moore and Blethen. The score:

BIRMINGHAM WINS SECOND GAME IN DIXIE SERIES

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 26—(AP)—Birmingham beat out a 7 to 6 victory over Dallas to win their second straight game of the Dixie series here today. The game was loosely played and five Steer pitchers were used in withstanding the Baron attack.

The Barons scored single tallies in each of the first four innings and three in the fifth. A Steer batting rampage in the second was good for four runs.

Three Steer errors were costly while the Barons failed to make good all their chances to score. The score by innings:

COAST GUARD TO PLAY CANISUS AT BUFFALO SUNDAY

NEW LONDON, Sept. 26—(AP)—The U. S. coast guard football team which is holding daily practice here under the direction of Lieut. Irving E. Baker, will play Canisus college at Buffalo, N. Y., Sunday.

The coast guard team is regarded as a strong contender for the president's cup awarded annually to the service team compiling the best record. Last Saturday it defeated a team representing the army. It will play the marines at Washington, D. C., on November 2 and the Navy on November 16 at Newport, R. I.

FIRST GAME OF MARTIN-SOCONY SERIES TO BE PLAYED ON SUNDAY

For the week end attraction the J. B. Martin club will stack up against the fast Socony nine of New London. This will be their first appearance with the Velvetmen in a series of three games and as usual when oil meets velvet there will be another smooth contest. The Oilmen at present have laid claim to the title of New London county champions by defeating the Smoke Shop of Norwich Industrial league and claim that after Sunday will have a better hold of this title.

Just who the Socony club will start in the box is uncertain but from rumors spreading they will probably give Tillie Daniels the assignment. Daniels is no stranger to the fans in this territory, many having seen this lad perform for Bulkeley high school and winning several championships during his stay at school. Daniels has put on considerable weight during the past season which gives him added power on the mound.

Manager Erlbeck would not announce his lineup last night but as per known as the Little Church ford will toe the slab against the Oilcans. Both clubs are out to take the first game which in all series gives that club a large advantage. On account of the time changing this game will start at 2:45 p. m. (Standard time.)

HUGGINS' FUNERAL TO BE HELD THIS AFTERNOON

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon for Miller Huggins, the biggest little man in baseball, and immediately after the last prayers are said, the body of the Yankees' manager will start "back home" to Circinnati. Huggins was born in the Ohio city and won his first measure of major league baseball fame there.

The body of the great baseball leader was taken this afternoon to the Church of the Transfiguration, better as known "Buse" Fisher of Hart-Around the Corner, 1 East 29th street, where several hundred persons were waiting. One by one they filed through the mortuary chapel to pay a final tribute. The chapel was open to the public until 9 o'clock tonight and will remain open until the funeral services at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Acting as pallbearers at the services tomorrow will be members of the Yankees, who, with Huggins at the helm, once won three straight American league championships.

The two coaches who planned with him, Arthur Fletcher and Charles O'Leary, and four active players, Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Tony Lazzeri and Earle Combs will be the pallbearers. The baseball game scheduled for tomorrow between the Yankees and Senators at Washington was postponed to permit the players to pay their last tribute.

Soon after the services, New York's last tribute will be paid to the man who brought world's championsnip pennants to the Yankee stadium and his body will start west to rest beside his father and mother in the city of his birth. Services will be held at the First Presbyterian church Cincinnati, Sunday afternoon.

In addition to members of the immediate family the body will be accompanied to Cincinnati by Charles McManus, representing the Yankee club, Bob Coopersmith, Huggins' associate in the ownership of the St. Paul club of the American association, and a committee from the New York chapter of the Baseball Writers Association of America, consisting of William Slocum, Ford Frick, Marshall Hunt and Charles Segar.

PRACTICE CROSS-COUNTRY RUN ON SATURDAY

A cross-country run between the varsity and junior varsity teams of the Academy will be staged Saturday at the campus between the halves of the N. F. A.-Chapman Tech football game. Coach John P. Murphy is doing this to get a good line on his candidates, regarding the test of a real race as far better than any practice drill.

The following teams have been selected: Varsity, Weisgraber, Navick, Johnson, Richardson, Cyaca and Lyons; Junior Varsity, Lambert, Levitsky, Nadelson, Constandi, Lewis and Yanolowsky.

The football team is practically on edge for its opening edge, against what looks like a very good Chapman Tech team. Coach Whitney in a little more than two weeks has rounded his squad into good shape and although Tech has been drilling for about a month the Wildcats expect to discount this once the battle starts. The team has fared quite well as regards physicial condition.

Tech has had a few injuries but none serious enough to impair her chances for Saturday's tilt, the opening one of the Eastern Connecticut-Western Rhode Island conference race. Coach Jack Conway will present practically his 1928 team intact on the campus Saturday and when it is remembered that the Academy was only able to nose out this team, 2 to 0, and that, in the bargain, the Red and White has lost seven members for 1928, then Saturday's tussle presents no cream-puff affair.

Workouts this afternoon at both schools will be of a light nature with signal drills and probably a few setting up exercises to top off things. A large delegation is coming from New London to root for Chapman and everything points to one of the largest opening day crowds in years.

KOZELUH AND RICHARDS REACH THE SEMI-FINALS

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 26—(AP)—Karel Kozeluh, had his troubles today at the hands of a comparatively obscure young American tennis professional, Charles M. Wood, of the Fairview Country club, Elmsford, N. Y.

Kozeluh won by scores of 6-0, 6-2, 7-5, reaching the semi-final round of the National Pro championship singles, but the match was harder fought than the figures indicate.

Using the favorite weapons of Vincent Richards, the volley and smash, Wood came up from 2-5 in the final set to even matters at 5-all. For the first time in the tournament Kozeluh was faced with possible loss of a set.

In the semi-finals tomorrow Kozeluh will encounter the former amateur star, Howard Kinsey, of San Francisco, and Vinney Richards, the defending champion, will meet Paul Heston, private coach of young Jack McLean, of Washington. Heston reached the semi-final round by beating John Cardegna, Ardsley, N. Y., at 6-3, 6-4, 6-2.

JIMMY QUINN RECEIVES TROPHY WON LAST MAY

Jimmy Quinn, local amateur featherweight boxer, who won the Edward Foster boxing cup last May at Providence has just received the trophy from the donors at Providence. The cup will be on exhibition in the window of Jack's Sport Shop today.

SAD YANKEES SLAUGHTER THREE SENATOR PITCHERS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26—(AP)—Playing their first game in more than a decade without Miller Huggins as their manager, the saddened New York Yankees lambasted three of Walter Johnson's pitching aces today for a 10 to 3 victory.

Wells started for the Yankees but was relieved when the Senators threatened in the eighth and Moore pitched the last two innings.

Ward and Dickey each got three hits, one of the Yankee catcher's raps being good for three bases. The score:

VICTORY LOOSENS SHARKEY'S TONGUE ONCE AGAIN

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, Sept. 26.—(AP)—If Jack Sharkey was a wild man in the ring tonight he was a wilder man after he had punched his way to his dressing room.

The big Boston gob licked every member of his managerial staff and then began picking on the onlookers.

Johnny Buckley, Jack's manager, finally headed for a neutral corner and tried to reason with his hilarious protege who had just put some badly needed hits back into the heavyweight business.

Jack quieted down after a few minutes and began broadcasting "the lick that won that fight," he shouted "was the left hook that I buried in Loughran's stomach in the first minute of fighting. I knew I had him then.

"This was the fight I wanted to win more than any other. I told you I was in the best shape I had ever been in. How did I feel? Man I knew that he couldn't hurt me so I just piled in and let him have it."

Loughran was still wondering what had happened ten minutes after he reached his quarters.

"What did they do? Did they stop the fight?" he asked.

"Where did he hit me?" the vanquished battler continued.

All of this time Tommy was stretched out on a dressing table. His face was not badly disfigured. There was a slight cut on the bridge of his nose where the knockout blow landed. A physician said there was no fracture.

"I'm glad Magnolia was there to stop it," spoke one of his handlers soothingly.

Tommy pulled both of his taped hands to his face and cried.

PLAY FOR CANADIAN WOMEN'S TITLE REACHES SEMI-FINALS

LANCASTER, Ont., Sept. 26—(AP)—Play in the Canadian Women's open golf championship reached the semi-final round today with players from the United States occupying all four places.

Tomorrow Miss Collett, United States champion, will meet Helen Hicks of Hewletts, N. Y., in one semi-final round match while Edith Quier of Reading, Pa., is battling Mrs. Stewart Hanley of Detroit in the other.

Today's play saw the elimination of all three Canadian entrants surviving after the first two rounds of match tests.

Mrs. Hanley started the Canadian route by defeating Mrs. R. B. Pellenz of Winnipeg, 3 and 2. Miss Hicks, who eliminated the defending titleholder, Virginia Wilson of Chicago yesterday, put out Mrs. E. W. Whittington of Toronto, 3 and 1. Miss Quier eliminated the outstanding dominion player, Mrs. F. J. Mulqueen of Toronto, 5 and 4. Miss Collett reached the semi-finals at the expense of a fellow-countrywoman, Mrs. H. C. Higbit of Detroit, 5 and 3.

SHIELDS BEATS MERCUR IN PACIFIC COAST TENNIS

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Rising to unexpected heights to conquer Fritz Mercur, of Harrisburg, Pa., who was seeded No 2 in the draw, Frank Shields of New York, holder of the national junior title last year, blasted his way into the semi-final round of the men's singles of the Pacific southwest tennis championships here today.

Shields, seeded No. 6, provided an unexpected supply of fireworks with his victory over Mercur, who holds the national clay court doubles title along with J. Gilbert Hall, Mercur's early tournament matches had been played in faultless form and he had been expected to be one of the finalists. The scores were 6-1, 6-2, 9-7.

Favorites passed through with flying colors in the other three quarter final men's singles matches.

Johnny Van Ryn of East Orange, N. J., former Princeton star, defeated Sidney Wood, sandy haired lad from Pasadena, Ca., 6-1, 6-2, 9-7.

Wilmer Allison of Texas, Van Ryn's partner in the world's doubles crown, conquered Berkeley Bell, also from Texas, 7-5, 7-5, 1-6, 7-5.

Johnny Doeg, Stanford university player, fought a courageous battle to eliminate Norman Farquharson of South Africa, in the most thrilling match of the day, 6-2, 6-1, 2-6, 2-6, 10-8.

COCHRANE GIVEN BANQUET BY HOME TOWN FOLKS

BRIDGEWATER, Mass., Sept. 26.—(AP)—Gordon Cochrane, star catcher of the Philadelphia Athletics, returned to his home town here tonight and was the guest of honor at a reception and bnaquet held by the Bridgewater chamber of commerce. About 350 of his townspeople were on hand to greet the young backstop who had a large share in the success of the American league champions. Cochrane was presented with a 20 calibre repeating rifle in a leather case. He spoke briefly as did 13 of his teammates who were also present.

Boomer Wins French Title

FOURQUEX, France, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Aubrey Boomer, British golf professional attached to a French club, today won the French open championship for the fourth time. Boomer defeated Archie Compston by one stroke in a 36-holes playoff after the two Britons had finished the 72-hole competition all even.

To Inquirer

The Jack Dempsey-Tom Gibbons bout at Shelby, Mont., on July 4, 1923 was a championship bout. Gibbons was supposed to have received as his share 50 per cent. of the gross gate receipts over $310,000. As the total gate receipts were only $201,485 you can figure for yourself how much he got out of the bout.

101 RANCH COWBOYS NOW SLOP PORKERS

PONCA, CITY, Okla., Sept. 26—(AP)—The cowboy still is king on the illustrious 101 ranch, but he no longer is the cattle-raising rider of yore. Hogherding is his latest forte.

One of the nation's leading examples of large scale diversified farming, the ranch is raising what may be the largest herd of pure-bred hogs in the country. A "crop" of 20,000 Duroc-Jerseys is this year's goal.

Thousands of hogs now roam fields where cattle once grazed. The ranch pig program has become so large that the cowboys automatically have fallen into new jobs.

Hogs of every age have special feed. "Living tepees" of trees, an acre in area, have been planted as shady pasture. That idea was borrowed from the Indians. Dairy cattle and chickens have been eliminated to make room for more hogs.

Zack Miller, sole survivor of three brothers who made 101 famous, has planted most of the ranch in crops valuable as hog feed. Wheat has been displaced by corn and alfalfa. Unbroken range now is fenced off for the first time.

While the ranch management intends to market most of its hogs, enough will be reserved from each year's herd to supply meat for the 101 packing plant, which sells at both wholesale and retail.

VOLUNTEERS FLOCK FOR BRAILLE WORK

WASHINGTON (AP)— Painstakingly, with hand stylus, Red Cross volunteer workers pricked out 175,000 pages of Braille for the blind during the last fiscal year.

Other Red Cross volunteer workers of the United States and possessions shellacked the pages and bound them in 1,349 volumes under 422 titles to be distributed to public libraries and schools for the blind.

The story of the busy little Red Cross stylus, which has supplanted the knitting needle as a spare time task for those who feel moved "to do something for some one" was told in the annual report of Adelia M. Hoyt, director of Braille, to Miss Mabel T. Boardman, secretary of the American Red Cross.

The work began in post-war days. In 1929, Miss Hoyt reported, the number of transcribers totalled 1,155.

CHURCH RESOLUTIONS ON DEATH OF ANGUS PARK

At the morning service Sunday last, the pastor, Rev. Dwight C. Stone, read a list of resolutions in which the church expressed heartfelt appreciation of the sincere and most generous attitude which Mr. Park had always maintained since coming into its fellowship, 30 years ago, and the deep sense of loss which it sustains in the death of so worthy a member. The sermon delivered by the pastor dealt with the wisdom, foresight, and active efforts of Nehemiah as a builder, in its influence upon the religious and social life of Palestine several hundred years before the coming of Christ.

Fall Days

Sleepful nights, and cold dawns,
And days whose every noon
Is sweeter than a draught of wine,
And like a breath of June;
And every dawn we look to see
If sweetgum leaves are red,
And every noon's a cloudless arch
Of glory overhead.

Sleepful nights, and cool dawns,
And children in the street
At eventide, and watching for
Fathers to run and meet;
And in the morning-gloried doors
Young mothers watch them run
And listen to their glee, and watch
Their curls fly in the sun.

Sleepful nights, and cool dawns,
And lovers holding hands
Walking across a blossomed field;
And roads to distant lands;
And fish which leap into the sun
Where'er a stream appears,
And a wish in each soul to live
At least a million years.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

DAIRY COWS ON SHORT PASTURE NEEDS SUPPLEMENTARY FEEDS

Much has been said and written about supplementary feeding of dairy cows when pastures are short. Further evidence of the necessity of such feeding has recently been obtained by the bureau of dairy industry of the United States department of agriculture at its dairy experiment farm at Beltsville, Md. A half-acre plot of pasture grass was mowed at 10-day intervals and the grass weighed. In May, when conditions were most favorable for the growth of grass, 420 pounds were obtained in one 10-day period; in August, during a dry spell, the field for a similar period was only 11 pounds. It is evident, therefore, that under such short-pasture conditions, cows should be fed as heavily as during the winter.

MAKING THE MOST OF THE COLD FRAMES

The convenience and necessity of a cold frame for an early start in the spring is well known to all gardeners but its use in the fall and early winter is often neglected. In addition to its value in wintering plants not quite hardy or which are sensitive to winter wet, it is an excellent place to start bulbs for winter bloom in the house. The method is to pot up the bulbs, hyacinths, daffodils, the smaller bulbs such a scillas, crocuses and grape hyacinths and lilies of the valley, bury them in the cold frame to make roots and then, when desired in the house, dig them out of the frame and take them indoors.

This is a more convenient method than storing them in dark closets or basements as usually recommended because there is less danger of forgetting to see that the pots are watered when they need it. The moisture in the soil will be sufficient to avoid any such danger in the cold frame! They make the roots necessary for top growth under more natural conditions and come quickly into growth when taken into warmth in the house.

Plants which are not quite hardy in the open ground such as pentstemons, buddleias and snapdragons may be wintered in a cold frame and moved to their permanent quarters in the spring. Favorite colors in the annual pinks may be wintered in the same manner. With the protection of the glass they will come into early growth and give much quicker results in the garden.

The handsome poppy anemones and the Mariposa tulips of California may be grown successfully in a cold frame. The anemones will then come into bloom next April and provide beautiful material for cutting and continue blooming for a month. The St. Brigid strain, stocked by nearly all seed houses, is a fine type of anemone. The beautiful ranunculus may be grown in the same manner. This plant is a novelty to most gardeners although in cultivation for many years. It is an excellent plant to try as an experiment in the frame. It is a curious root somewhat resembling a miniature dahlia. Plant the claws down about an inch below the soil.

The anemones should be down about two inches. Both these plants like rich soil and the prohibition against manure which should be enforced strictly against the Dutch bulbs does not apply to these plants. The anemone in particular luxuriates in rich fare.

The native tulips of California make beautiful frame material and are not hardy outside.

GREATER PROFITS IN SWINE THROUGH SANITATION

Hog producers of Indiana who have tried raising their pigs, according to the sanitation system of hog production developed by the bureau of animal industry of the U. S. department of agriculture, are enthusiastic over the increase in their profits which the system made possible, says Dr. J. E. Gibson, federal inspector in charge of hog-cholera control work in Indiana. Doctor Gibson reports that the increase in returns resulting from the use of the system, over the returns received by the same producers under their former methods, has been about $6 per pig, on an average. The system involves the farrowing and raising of pigs under such conditions that they do not have parasites, especially roundworms, which if not controlled retard growth and cause death in many instances.

The plan of getting the system into practice was to go to the farmer in a township who had been the least successful in raising hogs and induce him to try out the system. So many farmers applied for supervision that all could not be served.

One farmer who had become greatly discouraged was about ready to quit hog raising. He took up the sanitation plan. He had to buy all the feed used except pasture. He formerly had not been able to make the hogs average 200 pounds under 8 or 9 months. This year, under the new system, he had 39 shotes which average exactly 210 pounds at 5 months and 5 days. They sold for $11.50 per hundredweight, bringing a total of $397, or $374 more than the cost of feed.

Another farmer who had been able to raise, on an average, only 4 or 5 pigs to the sow, raised 7 pigs per sow this year and attributed the results to the sanitation system. Altogether, in Indiana his year more than 6,000 hogs were raised under the plan with benefits amounting to $36,000. There was an average increase of two pigs saved per sow on farms where the sanitation was used.

POTATO STORAGE ESSENTIAL FOR PROFITABLE MARKETING

Every grower of potatoes on a commercial scale should provide storage capacity for at least 75 per cent. of his annual crop. Potato specialists of the United States department of agriculture point out that it would be a physical impossibility as well as disastrous economically to try to market the full crop in the autumn. Often it happens that the individual grower may find it profitable to put all his crop in storage and wait for a more favorable market.

Requirements for successful storage of potatoes as summarized by William Stuart of the bureau of plant industry include protection from extreme temperatures, with a range from 35 to 40 degrees Fahrenheit being the most satisfactory; sufficient ventilation to remove foul air and moisture; and provision for excluding light. The tubers should be dry and reasonably free from dirt. All diseased, badly cut, or bruised tubers should be removed from the crop.

"It is not advisable," says Mr. Stuart, "to store potatoes to a depth of more than 5 or 6 feet in the bin. The bin should not be larger than 12 feet square unless it is provided with a series of ventilating shafts for the escape of moisture and heat. Division walls and floors providing ventilation are desirable."

It is common for growers and dealers to store potatoes in bins to a depth of 10 or 15 feet. It is poor policy, however, and often accounts for shrinkage and loss. Deep piles generate more heat, and decay and disease are likely to take heavier toll. Also the weight of the piled-up potatoes is likely to cause cracking and bruising of the tubers in the lower layers.

HINTS FOR THE FARM.

If lambs are sold at from 3 to 5 months of age they may run with the ewes until that time. The lambs to be kept for breeding purposes should be weaned at the same time and put on fresh pastures where there is less danger of stomach worms.

Well cured, fully matured sorghum fodder will maintain livestock in good condition through the winter with little or no supplementary grain ration. Sorghum which has matured, or at least headed, makes a better quality fodder and there is less danger of poisoning. A long period for curing in the shock is necessary to produce good sorghum fodder.

It is possible to make good corn silage that will keep well simply by blowing the cut corn into the silo and letting it fall where it will. When the filling is nearly done, one or two men may be put into the silo to level off the corn. No tramping is necessary.

The age at which to breed domestic rabbits varies according to the length of time it takes for them to attain full size. In the utility breeds this usually is seven or eight months. In small breeds it may be five or six months. Old does generally are mated with young bucks and young does with old bucks to increase the vigor of the progeny. It is not advisable to use them as breeders after they are four years old.

ASHFORD

UNION SERVICE HELD— REPAIRING THE CHURCH

There were more people in Ashford church Sunday evening than have been present at a religious service there for many a day. Delegations from Phoenixville and Warrenville came and took part in the services. Rev. Walter H. Lanphear, of Eastford, the pastor of this church, and Rev. Eliot B. Verney, of Warrenville, his associate, were in charge of the meeting. Some of the children from Warrenville repeated the Rally Day recitations which they had used in their Sunday school and the Phoenixville children contributed scripture recitations and music. On the whole it was a very enjoyable service and one well calculated to inspire the people to a renewed interest in the activities of this little church.

Franklin Bennett of Phoenixville has started work on the church building which he is to shingle and paint. Some repairs will also be made on that portion of the old sheds which were found to be worth saving when the wreckage of the collapsed portion was removed. Nearly enough money is on hand to pay for these repairs and contributions for the balance are being solicited.

GETTING AT THE REAL MALADY.

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce at Washington, recently estimated that the American people lose from eight to ten billion dollars every year through inefficient selling and distributing methods.

Of course an estimate is more or less of a guess. But Secretary Klein happens to be in a position and to have command of various facts which make his guess vastly more likely to be right than any you or I could make.

When he says "from eight to ten billions," he means that he practically knows where eight billions are wasted, and that he has fairly good reason to suspect that he could find where a couple of billions more are lost, if he should sweep closer into all the dark corners.

Billions. Not millions, you'll observe. And each billion means a round thousand millions. Taking his lowest estimate, that of eight billions, or eight thousand millions—$8,000,000,000—is enough to make the hair of any real economist stand on end with both horror and fright.

Horror, because of the shocking waste involved in time and labor and money; fright because of the tremendous fall we shall have to take from the precipice we are building on our own stupidity.

It isn't just we farmers who are at fault in this. Indeed, our share of the blame is trivially small compared with that which rests on the shoulders of the so-called "business men" of the land.

Once—and not so long ago, either, the tendency, when there was any shortage with consequent high prices, was to lay the blame on the producers for not having grown or made enough to supply public needs.

Those were the days when comparatively simple-minded and credulous political economists preached the doctrine that demands regulated supply, and that the inter-action of the two, supply and demand, governed prices.

The spectacle recently exhibited on many occasions of supply far outstripping demand, of production largely exceeding consumption, with no corresponding fluctuations in prices, has cast discredit on this former theory.

If the market were left to itself and free to rise or fall as natural conditions indicated, the old supply-and-demand doctrine would probably work out its own salvation.

But

The markets of today are not free to rise and fall, according as production ebbs or flows. They are largely manipulated markets, cribbed, cabined and confined by "big business" for the primary purpose of insuring profit to the manipulators.

Not service to the producers and consumers. Lord, no, that would be old-fogyish, indeed, and quite out of tune with what the great ones see fit to call "progress". Our business overlords are much less concerned about seeing that producers can get a fair price for their products or that consumers can buy them at a fair cost than they are in assuring themselves of substantial profits off both producer and consumer.

Of course, in the beginnings of trade, it was simply barter. Farmer A had more potatoes than he needed but no apples. Farmer B had apples to burn but no potatoes. So Farmer A swapped a load of spuds with Farmer B for a load of the latter's apples. Which was very simple and perfectly fair to both sides. But it sometimes happened that neither farmer had as many potatoes or apples, either, as both wanted. They couldn't "swap" with each other. That's where Speculator C came in. In the course of his vagabondish ramblings over the countryside he had learned that Farmer D, over in the next county, had a surplus of potatoes and apples. So he bought up that surplus and, later, re-sold it to Farmers A and B, adding a little as profit to himself. There was nothing criminal or even immoral in this, provided Speculator C didn't lie to any of those he did business with, or otherwise take unfair advantage of them.

But all that was in simpler and cruder times. Now, if Farmers A and B happen to fall short, they are likely to buy potatoes from Maine and apples from Oregon to make up their deficiencies. Such supplies, imported from far-off and unknown sources, come to them laden, not only with the price paid to the producer, but with a dozen or fifteen supercharges imposed by transportation companies and jobbers and wholesalers, etc., about not one of which either producer or consumer has had a single word to say.

As a matter of practical fact, the producer was usually given his choice of taking any price offered or getting nothing. Equally as a matter of practical fact, the various handlers in between producer and consumer added such tolls as they thought best, and the consumer could pay them, or leave them.

No fair-minded man supposes that there is any plot, carefully pre-meditated and filchingly worked out and deliberately agreed upon, according to which the in-between handlers work as conspirators to rob their fellow countrymen and women. They are probably about as honest and patriotic as the average and hardly more greedy.

It isn't the rapacity or the rascality of big business which we must blame, but its crass stupidity. Its devotees didn't make the temptation to which they have fallen; on the contrary, it looked, at the outset, like a smooth and easy way to make some profit out of rendering a real service to the other fellow. Having entered on the road big business has followed it, regardless of its grades and its crookedness, and apparently with the sole idea of "sittin' thar," with little if any thought as to what the destination might be.

One step has followed another; one trick has developed out of another; one "grab" has made another easier; till now our whole system of marketing and distribution has got into such a snarl and tangle of cross-purposes and conflicting methods that it costs the country, according to Dr. Klein's estimate, at least eight billion dollars a year to make up the deficiency due to its inefficiency.

Some years ago it was brought out that the cost of getting a barrel of flour across the Hudson river, from Jersey City to a New York store, was greater than the cost of getting that same barrel from Minneapolis to Jersey City. Why? Simply because the trans-continental railroads were operated with at least reasonable efficiency, while the business barons of New York city hadn't the ability or the desire to provide equal efficiency at their end.

There is duplication of labor all along the distributing route, and duplication of labor, now-a-days, means quadruplication of cost. There are too many men wanting big profits and too many wanting big wages, struggling in more or less confused melee, ostensibly against each other, but actually against both producers and consumers.

For it is always one or the other of these classes, many times both, which they despoil.

Just as a very minor and unimportant instance: There are in the distinctively rural town in which I now live five separate grocery stores. Two of them are little more than stands, kept by single women to eke out their own support. But three carry comparatively full stocks and collect and deliver orders. Each has its truck, which costs money to buy and to run. Each has its telephone wherewith to receive special orders. Each has to keep its separate set of books, since competition compels all to give credit or lose trade. Each has its separate force of employes. Each must overcharge paying customers to make up for its bad debts. It is perfectly self-evident that a single centrally located store, with one truck, one telephone and one set of clerks, doing business solely for cash down and hence with no bad debts to take care of, could carry a fuller assortment of goods, keep its stock fresher, deliver just as satisfactorily, and sell at markedly lower prices, with no diminution of reasonable profits.

That situation is reproduced in 10,000 other rural communities. In the cities it is even worse. There the confusion is yet worse confounded, and the complications still more costly and harmful.

Not so long ago but that most of us can remember it, the cry was that farmers should adopt better methods and speed up their work so as to promote larger production. That time has passed. The farmer's greatest danger, now, is not under-production but over-production. He is turning out more food supplies than his home market demands.

Yet he is getting, on the whole, less than a fair price for his harvests, and the consumers are being charged more than a fair price for what they need. Both his losses and the consumers' overcosts are being dumped into the yawning pit of distribution inefficiency, at the rate of eight or ten billion dollars a year, to pay for—what? Just the failure of big business to see clear and think sensibly and act straight.

If the farm board devotes its efforts to a coddling credit scheme, or the development of an easier exportation plan, or any similar emergency measures, it will be treating symptoms, not applying a cure to the disease.

The real malady is deeper-seated and calls for more searching medicaments. The wash which may alleviate a skin disease and the cure which will remove its causes are two very different things.

Yet either one is preferable to the surgeon's knife, which is often the sole remaining alternative.

THE FARMER.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Peter Plays the Game of In-and-Out.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

He plays indeed a sorry part,
Who, showing off, becomes too smart.
—Old Mother Nature.

Peter Rabbit was having a good time. Yes, sir, he was having a good time. He was teasing Flip the Terrier and he was enjoying it. He was hopping around inside the dear Old Briar Patch where Flip could see him and Flip was doing his best to get into the dear Old Briar Patch, but the brambles prevented him. Every time he came to one of the openings to Peter's private little paths, he would try to force his way in. Peter would wait until Flip had crawled in part way and then Peter would hop off. Flip would back out, yelping from the scratches he had received, and rush around the edge of the Briar Patch until he could again see Peter. Yes, it was great fun for Peter.

At last Flip came to an opening that was a little bigger than the others and this time he managed to get through the brambles and really inside the Old Briar Patch. Peter promptly took to his heels along the nearest little path that led outside and a moment later was out of the dear Old Briar Patch, while Flip was in it. Peter scampered along to the other end of the dear Old Briar Patch and there sat down and waited. Flip came out the same way he went in and promptly raced around after Peter. As soon as Peter saw him coming he kicked up those long heels of his and away he went, flipperty-flipperty-flip, until he came to the entrance to one of his private little paths. In he popped.

Flip poked his head in, found that he couldn't get through the brambles, then raced around to the opening where he could get in. Once more he crawled through and was inside the dear Old Briar Patch. Then Peter played the same trick again. It was a regular game of in and out. It was a long time since Peter had had so much fun.

Meanwhile little Mrs. Peter had been anxiously sitting under some branches well hidden in the middle of the dear Old Briar Patch. She wasn't enjoying this performance at all. She was provoked with Peter.

"If only Peter had kept perfectly still in the first place that dog never would have discovered him and wouldn't have tried to get in here," said she to herself. "My goodness, I do hope he will not find me! Peter does the craziest things. Sometimes I think he hasn't a bit of sense. Oh dear! Here comes that dog this way now!"

It was true. Flip had suddenly decided that while he was inside the dear Old Briar Patch he might as well explore it. While he couldn't move about freely there were some open places where there were no brambles. So it was that presently he came up to the little bramble tangle in which little Mrs. Peter was hidden. He saw the little opening which led into it and peeped in. Little Mrs. Peter was sitting perfectly still, so at first Flip didn't see her. But just as he was about to turn away he did see her.

Instantly he was all excitement. He knew it wasn't Peter, for this Rabbit was smaller. He yelped as the brambles scratched him, but he kept on trying to force his way in. Little Mrs. Peter could stand it no longer. She darted out the farther side. Instantly Flip withdrew his head from under the brambles and was after her. Little Mrs. Peter heard Peter thumping outside the Old Briar Patch. She darted along one of the little paths that led outside and in a moment was out where Peter was waiting for her.

"Oh!" she panted. "This is dreadful!"

"No, it isn't, my dear, it's fun," said Peter.

NEIL COYLE FALLS IN TANK AND IS BADLY INJURED

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 26.—Neil Coyle, 21, of New York, a boilermaker for the Standard Oil Co. of New York, received serious injuries in a 40-foot fall from an oil tank in construction at the Mechanic street plant of the Standard Oil Co. in Pawcatuck, about 4:50 a. m., Thursday. He is a patient on the danger list at the Westerly hospital and has been attended by Drs. John Champlin, Sr., and Jr.

While at work on a staging on the inside of the iron tank he pitched headlong inside the tank to the 40-foot iron bottom. In falling he turned over to strike on his side and shoulder, causing injury to the back of his head and arm, also internal injuries. The ambulance of the Westerly Sanitary corps was called to take the injured man to the hospital.

A force of 18 to 20 men has been at work for two months on the construction of the tank, in the employ of the Standard Oil Co.

Boy Rang In Alarm

In response to Pawcatuck fire alarm whistle, No. 53, sounded from the box, corner of Moss and Palmer streets, at 11:00 a. m., Thursday, two pieces of apparatus with Engineer Joseph Furtill and men made a quick though unnecessary trip. The firemen looked in vain for any fire or sign of smoke. A woman residing in the neighborhood gave the information that she had seen a 5-year-old boy on his way home from school climbing up the pole and then the whistle had sounded for the fire box number. The last observed of the youngster he was making tracks up Palmer street. Engineer Furtill immediately sounded the recall from the box.

A POWERFUL BULL DEMONSTRATION IN THE STOCK MARKET YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 26—(AP)—Operators for the advance felt that they could afford to indulge in a powerful bullish demonstration on the stock market today, with most of the calamity howling rumors which sorely tried traders nerves yesterday definitely branded as groundless and ever absurd. The increase in the Bank of England rediscount rate was actually received with relief, as Wall street had been expecting it for weeks. Trading was largely professional however, with the days turnover barely exceeding 4,000,000 shares, as contrasted to nearly 5,000,000 yesterday.

The credit situation, remained definitely adverse although it did not appear in its gloomiest aspects until after the close of the market, when the weekly federal reserve brokerage loan figures disclosed an increase of $192,000,000. This is the largest upturn since early last January, making an addition of more than $800,000,000 to the total of loans in the past six weeks, carrying it to the unprecedented figure of $3,-847,000,000. The week's increase was provided entirely by corporations and individuals, the account for others rising $274,000,000. While both local and out of town banks reduced their loans moderately, the federal reserve conditions statements disclosed little change.

This increase in loans was regarded unreservedly not only in view of the tight money conditions but particularly in view of the intermittently declining markets over the period covered by the figures. While heavy new financing this week was expected to take up fully as much funds as might be released by stock liquidation, the huge increase in loans was in most circles not even dreamed of. Many traders were inclined to regard it as definitely indicating that stock has been passing from strong to weak hands. The upturn in loans for others was regarded as a possible indication that investment trusts have been selling and putting their funds into call loans. Another theory advanced was that the recent upturn in several stocks, notably utilities of New Jersey, may have broken out investment holdings from their strong boxes.

Call money held at 9 per cent all day, and time money was very scarce between 9 and 9 1-4 per cent. Bankers were inclined to the belief that the higher rate in London will not withdraw sufficient funds from New York to make any essential change in the already tight situation, but that it will tend to keep money high. In some quarters it was felt that the increase in the rate came too late, and that a further increase may be necessary. There was little in the days business news to influence the market. Walter Chrysler stated that he considered motor stocks too low, but they continued to sag. Several more favorable August railway earnings reports appeared.

Utilities, chemicals, office equipment and several other industrial stocks were rushed upward violently. Columbian Carbon soared 28 points to another new peak, at 299, and Standard Gas and Electric jumped about 22 points to a new peak at 222 1-2, both closing near these tops. American Water Works jumped 15 points, General Electric rallied 10 points, and American Telephone 7.

Eastman Kodak, National Cash Register, Underwood Elliott Fisher, Burroughs Adding Machine, Simmons, United Carbon, and Pacific Lighting sold up 5 to more than 10 points, most of them new high records. General American Tank, Atlantic Gulf and West Indies and Myers Bros. were other issues reaching new high ground. U. S. Steel closed about a point higher. Oils were firm.

Radio failed to make heavy selling, off about 3 points for a time, and closing virtually unchanged. Chrysler Motors slipped off a couple of points to a new low below 60, and General Motors sagged. Marmon, dropped about 13 points to a new low at 53. Anaconda also encountered some disappointed selling in response to the unchanged dividend rate, although interests close to the company had been predicting no change to this time. Rails were generally sluggish.

Commodities were irregular, with grains rallying sharply. Wheat futures sold up about 3 cents a bushel in response to better foreign demand and bearish weather reports. Corn mounted about 1 to 3 cents in response to a better cash demand. Cotton futures declined 30 to 90 cents a bale, as it appeared that the tropical hurricane, which sent prices up yesterday, would avoid the belt.

Foreign exchanges firmed up markedly in response to the higher discount rate at London. Sterling cables rose 5-16 of a cent to $4.85 7-16, which is well above the incoming gold point. The Canadian dollar moved up to 99 23-32 cents.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—(AP)—Nearly 6c per bushel upturn in wheat prices today above yesterday's lowest figures accompanied much enlarged speculative buying of wheat future deliveries here. Meanwhile, export business in North American wheat took on bigger volume, aggregating 1,250,000 bu. for the day, with Argentina offerings of wheat at Liverpool apparently being withdrawn. Another outstanding feature was reported slashing reduction of estimates of the 1929 wheat yield in Australia.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were strong, 2 1-2c to 3 3-4c a bu. higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1c to 3 1-2c up, oats 1 1-4c to 2 1-2c advanced, and provisions ranging from 5c decline to a rise of 2c.

Giving special momentum to the upward swing of the Chicago wheat market today was word of a steep jump in wheat prices at Liverpool, with news also that the wheat crop in the main areas of West Australia is deteriorating fast, and that the probable yield is 60,000,000 bu. below last year, rainfalls of late having effected no benefit. In this connection, it was asserted by trade and authorities here that a striking aspect of 1929 wheat yields the world over is the manner in which actual crop results fall below preharvest estimates, the figures on the Polish crop for example being now 4,000,000 bu. reduced from the latest previous forecast, with the crop in Algeria 20,000,000 bu. less. Despite recent large arrivals of Argentina wheat at Liverpool, assertions were made today that stocks of foreign wheat in Great Britain are greatly below normal. Another surprising development was that included in today's purchases of North American wheat is 370,000 bu. of durum wheat from the United States to go to Calcutta, India, and that Japan has taken about 2,000,000 bu of wheat from Pacific coast ports of the United States in the last few weeks. Announcemet was also made that primary domestic receipts of wheat today were smaller than either a week or a year ago, and that Canadian country marketings were less than half as much as last year.

Corn and oats derived much of their upward impetus today from the fact that month-end offerings of both cereals were scanty, and that shipping demand here was better. Besides, weather conditions today were rather adverse for corn movement.

Provisions were steadied by grain strength, notwithstanding downturns in the value of hogs.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(AP)— The development of a better undertone in the rail group gave the bond market a steadier appearance today. However, trading was the lightest of the week and the support given to representative carriers was offset to a degree by the softness of the utilities. Time money was unchanged at 9 to 5 1-4 per cent for all maturities.

The small volume was due to the scant attention paid to the convertibles, for only the American Telephone 4 1-2s traded in more than nominal amount. These debentures moved within a 9 point range, closing at 218 1-2, or near the day's top, for a net gain of 5 points. American International 5 1-2s and International Telephone 4 1-2s scored advances of a point each, while American I. G. Chemical 5 1-2s, after dipping to 112, managed to finish at 114, or 1 7-8 above the Wednesday close. Reading Coal & Iron 6s, which have been in favor all week, continued their show of strength, moving up 3-8.

Gains of half a point or more developed in Atchison General 4s, Baltimore & Ohio first 5s, Canadian Pacific 4s, Chesapeake & Ohio 4 1-2s, Chicago Great Western 4s, Erie 5s, Missouri Pacific 5s, Nickel Plate 5 1-2s and Texas & Pacific 5s, while smaller advances in the rail section were numerous.

Selling in the utilities brought out losses in Detroit Edison 5s, Cincinnati Gas & Electric 4s, Federal Light & Traction 5s, New England Telephone 5s, North American Edison 5 1-2s, Utah Light & Traction 5s and New Orleans Public Service 5s, the last named touching the new low of 81 on a decline of 3 points. Liquidation in this section of the list was of minor importance, however.

Industrials made mostly small changes in an irregular market. Chile Copper 5s and United Biscuit 6s moved up about a point. In the specialty division, Pathe 7s, ex warrants, gained 1 1-8 and Shubert Theater 6s lost 1, the former showing some accumulation. These two companies are reported to be nearing a merger agreement.

Foreign bonds and securities of the United States traded irregularly lower, but small turnovers were the rule.

One item in the day's financial news afforded a sidelight on the current condition of the bond market. It was announced that the city of St. Louis received no bids on a $6,000,000 issue of 4 1-2 per cent bonds. The municipality had stipulated that its securities were not to be sold below par. Recent offerings of municipals of similar coupon rates have been marketed at a discount.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(AP)—The first 31 railroads to report for August showed an aggregate net operating income of $39,474,000 compared with $35,065,000 in August, 1928, or an increase of 7.7 per cent. Figures for July were $32,905,000.

Wall street heard today that General Motors corporation and the Radio Corporation of America are forming a new radio subsidiary with a capitalization of approximately $10,000,000. The report, however, could not be confirmed. Fifty-one per cent of the stock, it was said, will be owned by General Motors and the balance by the Radio corporation. General Motors recently acquired the Dayfan Electric Co., of Dayton, Ohio, manufacturers of radio receivers.

As a result of demonstrations of its new four-motor 32-passenger airplane made several days ago, the Fokker Aircraft corporation announced today it had received orders in excess of $1,000,000. Five of the new planes have been ordered by the Universal Aviation Corp., and six by Western Air Express.

Gold movements at the port of New York for the week ending Feb. 25, comprised imports of $4,016,000, of which $3,961,000 was from England and $55,000 from Latin-American countries, and exports of $123,000 to Mexico. There was no net change in the stock of earmarked gold held for foreign account.

AVIATION CORPORATION BUYS ALASKAN CONCERNS

NEW YORK (AP)—Two of the aviation companies whose planes have cut travel time from weeks to hours in remote Alaska have been merged as the Alaska Airways, Inc., and become a part of the $200,000,000 aviation corporation.

Lieut. Carl Ben Eielson, noted Arctic flier, has been employed as executive vice president in charge of the Alaskan company.

"Through Alaska Airways, Inc.," said Graham B. Grosvenor, president of Aviation corporation, "the activities of our new Alaska air companies will be extended forthwith.

"Their development no doubt eventually will include connections with the United States, bringing the most remote points within hours instead of weeks of our principal cities."

The two companies involved in the purchase were the Wein Alaska airways and the Rodebaugh Airplane company.

HUMIDITY AFFECTS MOTOR CAR'S POWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—The belief of many motorists that an automobile gives smoother performance in wet weather is given some basis by the United States bureau of standards.

Although the impression doubtless is largely due to psychological factors and an absence of squeaks, caused by the lubrication of springs by water, the bureau reported, recent tests indicate that it may result partly from mechanical factors.

The tests showed that increased atmospheric humidity or "wetness" reduces the maximum power obtainable and slows up combustion, the effect of both of which would be to give a smoother flow of power.

"One result of these tests," the bureau concluded, "will be to add to the troubles of automotive engineers, since it is obvious that in accurate comparisons of engine power, humidity also must be measured and allowance made for its effect on power."

GIRL GUIDES WATER FLOW TO AID CRIPPLED FATHER

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP)—A 17-year-old high school girl irrigates 800 acres of farm lands in the Spokane valley every day, substituting for her crippled father.

Dorothy Shelley has the complicated task of remembering which farmer is entitled to water, at what hour and how much. At designated hours she turns the wheels that send the head of water to its proper destination.

Wagon Lasts Longest

AMES, Iowa (AP)—The wagon lasts the longest of any farm implement, investigations by Iowa state college reveal. Its average life is 24 years. The spring toothed harrow, lasting eight years, is the shortest lived. A surprising discovery is the fact that failure to house machinery does not appreciably shorten the life of the machines.

Marker Honors Newspaperman

BUCYRUS, Ohio (AP)—A stone from the historic town wall of Southampton, England, through the gates of which passed the Pilgrims en route to America, is a part of the monument erected here to the late John E. Hopley, newspaperman and diplomat. The monument was erected on the Lincoln highway, to the development of which Hopley devoted many years. Hopley was consul at Southampton under McKinley.

Plan Commodity Center

NEW YORK — (AP) — Commission houses operating on several different commodity exchanges in New York are endeavoring to hasten plans for a central exchange building. At present the plan centers around the prospect of the New York coffee and sugar exchange erecting a new building to provide quarters for other commodity exchanges under the same roof.

The man who talks the loudest on the street corner is apt to be dumb as an oyster when at home.

SPEEDY HAY "COMBINE" MAKES 1,000 BALES DAILY

EL RENO, Okla. — (AP) —A hay "combine" that works almost twice as fast as the ordinary baler has been invented by John Lorenzen, youthful farmer of central Oklahoma.

At a cost of $300 he devised a hay baling machine that dispenses with four men and four horses he formerly used with a regular baler. In work it compares with the combine employed in wheat harvests.

Lorenzen's old baler turned out 600 bales a day, while his new machine, aided by four men, a small auto engine and a tractor, makes 1,000 easily.

His invention consists of an ordinary baler set on higher, heavier wheels. A large, sloping platform is built at its side. A hay loader is attached so it picks up hay and dumps it on the platform. It then slides down the platform into the baler's maw, with one man feeding.

LABORITES MAY VOTE NEW RULES FOR PARTY

BRIGHTON, England—(AP)—Consideration of a new constitution for the British labor party will occupy the attention of party leaders and delegates at a conference opening here Sept. 30.

New membership regulations to be submitted create a new category of "national associate members," who need not be members of trade unions or constituency labor parties. Qualification thus is simplified for former liberals and other representatives of the middle classes who find themselves in sympathy with the aims of the party.

Restrictions aimed at communists are emphatically strengthened.

The section dealing with party conferences excludes members of the communist party from eligibility as delegates, and individual members of the labor party are defined as persons not less than 15 years of age who subscribe to the conditions of membership, "provided they are not members" of political parties or other organizations "ineligible for affiliation with the labor party."

Affiliated members, it should be explained, consist of trade unions, socialist societies, professional organizations and constituency labor parties.

Horse and Buggy Stay

WASHINGTON (AP)—"Thanks for the buggy ride" isn't a wise crack to 458 out of 2,886 representative farm families in America. Of that number only 1,904 have automobiles, a department of agriculture survey shows. The remaining 524 presumably have neither conveyance.

Cuba's "Henry Ford" to Fly

HAVANA (AP)—Aquino Munero, a Camaguey mechanic known to his familiars as "el Enry Eford de Cuba" (Henry Ford of Cuba) is the first Cuban to build an airplane in Cuba, of Cuban materials. Senor Munero will take a ride in it as soon as he completes a flying course.

SYNTHETIC LEPROSY DRUG IS SAID TO SHOW RESULTS

URBANA, Ill. (AP)—Effective results obtained in a two year test of a synthetic remedy for leprosy are reported here.

The test was made at the Culion leprosy hospital in the Philippines and the report was sent here to Prof. Roger Adams, professor of chemistry, who developed the synthetic drug. It is chaulmoogra oil, a product similar to the natural oil of the chaulmoogra tree of India, which has been announced a number of times in the last 20 years as effective in relieving many cases of leprosy.

New German Transmitter.

KOENIGSWUSTERHAUSEN (AP) —A new short wave transmitter installed at the Eesken station enables widespread broadcasting of all German programs. This innovation is considered significant in view of the coming exchange of programs with America.

HARRY HOLLOWAY, BOND-JUMPER, IS AT LAST IN NEW LONDON JAIL

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 26.—Harry Holloway, formerly of New London and Groton, wanted a long time for jumping his bond, was arrested yesterday at Greenwich and is now a prisoner at the county jail on Franklin street pending trial at the next term of the criminal superior court. Holloway was formerly employed as a salesman by the H. L. Handy Co., Springfield, Mass. During the latter part of the time he was so employed Holloway collected money due his employers and appropriated it to his own use, making the collections from merchants to whom he sold goods, in New London, Groton, Niantic, Montville, Mystic and Noank. He was arrested on a charge of embezzlement and when he was supposed to appear in court it was discovered that Holloway had jumped his bond of $1,000, which had been furnished by his father, Lincoln Holloway, Groton, and which had been secured by an insurance company. Since Holloway disappeared, the insurance company has had officers working to locate him and yesterday on finding Holloway working in a market at Greenwich, he was arrested and brought back to New London.

New London will be represented at the annual meeting of the Connecticut Council of Catholic Women at Hartford, Saturday, by Mrs. Clarence A. Carr, Mrs. Frank E. Douglass, Miss Mary R. HULL MANWARRING MAY BE THE NEW TAX COLLECTOR

The New London city election brings but one new member into it, A. T. Minor succeeding Lucis E. Whitton. It is understood that there will be a change in tax collector and that City Manager Holt will appoint Hull Manwarring to succeed Hibbard N. Alexander, who has served during the past year, the term of his appointment, and who has collected overdue taxes in a large sum. Mr. Alexander has been paid on a commission basis, a method that is said to have netted him a very handsome year's compensation. The compensation of Mr. Manwarring will not be as generous, for labor-saving apparatus has been placed in the office and the work has been systemized so that the tax collection and the bookkeeping has been simplified, so that the work has been greatly lightened. Mr. Manwarring has been an assistant in the tax office during the incumbency of Mr. Alexander, so to have full charge of the work will not be a new experience for him. The city manager makes the appointment, but the city council fixes the compensation so in the latter respect the change in compensation is understood to be contemplated. Labor-saving machines have been put into the office since Mr. Alexander has been in charge. Whether they will reduce the number of employes in the tax collector's department is not stated by the members of the council, but it is known that they have been considering that matter. Mayor Twomey will not become head of the council till the meeting of October 7 and not until then will any changes be made, it is said. This is the dullest season of the year in the tax collector's office for payments are few and consist chiefly of taxes long overdue.

THE LAW COMPELS GIRI TO SUPPORT CHILDREN

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 26.— Juliano Giri, Smith street, a machinist, was in the police court today charged with non-support of his two minor children, aged 14 and 16. Giri was given the alternative of paying $9 weekly toward the support of the children or going to jail for a stay of 60 days. He accepted the former and posted a bond of $350 to assure the court that he would keep his promise to properly provide for the children. The children were committed to a state institution several weeks ago and he agreed to pay $4.50 weekly for their support. This he has failed to do. When complaint was made to the New London prosecutor that Giri had not made payments in two months, the father was arrested.

DUPLICATING WIVES GETS WILLIAM HECK IN BAD

NEW LONDON, Sept. 26.— Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith and his prisoner, William Heck, alias William J. Ringins, a former member of the United States Coast Guard, charged with bigamy, arrived in New London from Cleveland, Ohio, this evening. Heck will be presented in the police court tomorrow. Heck was arrested at his employment at the Hotel Statler, Cleveland, a week ago, at the request of the New London police. I. December, 1926, Heck married Anna Van Heest at Brooklyn, N. DENY ALCOHOL OWNERSHIP— THE PISECKIS' CASES NOLLED

Tony Pisecki, Mystic and his uncle Joseph Pisecki, 195 Ferry street, New Haven, were in the police court today charged with violation of the liquor law on two counts, possession and keeping with intent to sell. In both cases the charges were nolled for it could not be proven that the nine gallons of alcohol which the police seized in making the arrests of the Piseckis, was the property of the two men, especially as they denied ownership of the alcohol, claiming that it was owned by Mrs. Antoinette Dulzolinski, 185 Bank street and in whose home the alcohol was found. The men were arrested last night by Patrolman Anthony Turello, when Mrs. Dulzolinski complained to the officer that Joseph Pisecki had beaten her. Not only did the woman complain because of the alleged assault, but she asserted that the two men had started selling liquor in the building rear 185 and used the diluted alcohol which was sold for 25 cents per glass. The woman then led the officers to her home where she revealed the hiding place of the alcohol.

When presented in court the same day Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer was in the act of effecting an adjustment of the taxi bill with the driver and while doing so Elliott was allowed to remain in the squad room. During a few minutes that Elliott was left unguarded, he opened a window leading to the roof of the police garage and jumped to the ground, escaping through Potter street. ANNOUNCEMENTS

Real Estate Sold

Clarence Sholes, real estate agent, sold for Frederick F. Cook, of Montville, on the road to Shantok Park, his 10-acre farm to Mrs. Agnes M. Frink, who is making improvements for her future home.

Indian Jewelry

American Indian jewelry hand made by the Navajos, of silver and turquoise —this is the unique collection that is being shown at Charles Dowsett's House o' Gifts, tomorrow.

The silver is Mexican coin silver, which contains less alloy than regular U. S. currency; the turquoise is dug by the Red Man himself from the mines of New Mexico, which produce some of the finest turquoises in the world. Three hundred years ago the Spanish conquerors taught the Indians of the southwest the silversmith's art, and today they fashion by hand remarkably beautiful objects. It is not an uncommon sight at Indian ceremonials to see a buck or his squaw laden with $2,000 worth of finery. Many of the pieces are stamped with religious symbols (everyone is familiar with the swastika for good luck). There are the sun and rain symbols of prosperity, the Hopi water snake, the thunderbird, the plumed serpent of the Yaquis in Mexico. A few table runners woven by the Navajo women are included in the collection.

Palace Theatre

Russia in the last days of the Czarist regime—That is the setting for Dolores Costello's latest Vitaphone production, "Hearts in Exile," which opens Saturday at the Palace. Fresh from a beautiful honeymoon trip into the tropics with John Barrymore, the lovely Dolores returned to find that she must step into a Siberian role for her next picture.

As a Russian peasant girl, Miss Costello brings to her part the same wistful, winsome grace that has won her the love of millions of theatregoers throughout the world. There is nobody quite like Dolores Costello, no star who quite combines the beauty of face and figure and the grace of art as does she. In this film she is cast with Grant Withers, the new "Wally Reid" of the screen, and between them they give a poignant and romantic performance.

Beautiful are the words and music of "Hearts in Exile." Beautiful are the costumes. Beautiful the broad stretches of scenery, the bleak tundras on which hearts break and bodies waste away. There is terror and panic in this film; there is haunting loneliness—the awful loneliness of the Steppes. But in the end there is peace and happiness and the triumph of a great love.

The best Russian types in Hollywood are not Russians—they're Americans! This was the startling discovery made by Michael Curtiz, Hungarian motion picture director, during the preliminary preparations for filming "Hearts in Exile."

Several hundred extras were engaged for the picture, and a large proportion of these were necessarily native Russians, since the Vitaphone records much of their speech as a background to the main action in crowded streets and other places where many people congregate.

Supporting Miss Costello in "Hearts in Exile" are Grant Withers, James Kirkwood, George Fawcett, David Torrence, Olive Tell, Tom Dugan and William Irving. Michael Curtiz directed.

Today, for the last time, the Palace is presenting that vivid saga of the Jazz Age, "Our Modern Maidens," starring Joan Crawford and a host of younger Hollywood stars.

Breed Theatre

The screen surprise of 1929!

Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell are lovers again—reunited under the direction of Frank Borzage in their first talking picture, "Lucky Star," which makes its local premiere Sunday at the Breed theatre.

The trio who gave you "Seventh Heaven" and "Street Angel" are said to surpass their previous triumphs in this spoken drama of a couple that wins regeneration through suffering.

Hear the voices of filmdom's beloved sweethearts as they enact the most tender love scenes they have ever played together. You'll be enthralled.

The directorial genius of Frank Borzage has undoubtedly reached an artistic zenith in "Lucky Star," Fox Movietone talking picture based on Tristram Tupper's story. Guinn Williams and Hedwiga Reicher have speaking parts in support of Farrell and Miss Gaynor.

Broadway Theatre

A "fresh" youth, bubbling over with pep and unborn deviltry, laughing at the world and the people in it—even at himself if no other victim is handy—and suddenly brought face to face with the greatest decision of his life—the sacrifice of his highest ambition to assure the happiness of his employer-pal-that's, briefly, William Haines in his newest and greatest sound picture "Speedway," which opened yesterday at the Broadway. "Speedway" is the right name, too, for with this ubiquitous kid, it was speed in everything—speed in "making" the girl of his dreams—a speedy airplane and a speedier drop when the plane cracks up in midair—and then the ultimate speed of all, in the annual auto classic at the Indianapolis, when the world sends its class in cars and drivers to compete for the Grand Prix and title. In the filming of this race, which is in truth the 1929 Memorial Day classic, which was won by the ill-fated Ray Keech in spectacular fashion, not one detail of the race was missed by the eye of the camera—cars overturn in skidding the dangerous curves, others crash the fence, and in one scene, one of the racers turns over three times, with a sickening thud and crash each time. The racing is not limited to the regular profession-als, either, for in the picture Haines, Ernest Torrence, John Miljan and Karl Dane put on as pretty a speed circus as has ever been shown on the screen. Dainty Anita Page in "Bill's" sweetheart, and Polly Moran is great as a typical hard-boiled railroad cafe waitress. Hughes and Pam furnish a roaring comedy skit in "The Fall Guy," Phil Baker is "a bad boy from a good family," and the awful consequences of "The 99th Amendment" are shown in another comedy skit, with a new idea. The latest Fox Movietone newsreel shows some up-to-the-minute shots from the headlines. Norwich movie fans are in for a treat Sunday when the Connecticut premiere of "Broadway" is presented on the Broadway screen. This picture, which is filmed direct from the big stage success, which held New York spellbound for two solid seasons, preserve the original terse dialog of the stage play, and three of the players in the stage production are in the film cast in their own important roles. Moving and smoothness never before achieved in a film production, and on a scale of massiveness and beauty never before attempted, "Broadway" reaches the peak of talking screen entertainment.

The contest in the Sunday school started out with the Blues under Barbara Buck of Westford, in the lead. But the sides are evenly matched numerically and with an opportunity this year to make up for lack of numbers by having better lessons the Reds, under John Bills, Jr., have a good chance of winning. One of the best things about last year's contest was the spirit of fair, clean-cut good natured rivalry which it developed among the participants.

STRANGE CONDITION OF THE LAKE AT PRESENT

The lake presents a strange appearance, having been drawn down nine feet, which leaves some of the cottages high and dry. However, as most of the cottagers having closed up for the season, it does not make so much difference to them. Special music was provided by Misses Ila and Mildred Hamilton, of Andover, and Mrs. John Howell, Miss Margaret Hutchins and Miss Harle Field, of Columbia.

Samples from their canned fruit display were taken by Miss Grover, (assistant to Mr. Whaples) to Stonington Grange fair. Among the exhibitors were Alice, Ruby, and Mabel Faulkner, Olive Cox and Eleanor Thomas. Club songs and recitations completed the fine program.

DIVORCES FOR NORWICH WOMAN AND NEW LONDON ORCHESTRA LEADER

Judge Earnest C. Simpson granted two divorce petitions in the superior court here Thursday afternoon, one of which was contested and the other was heard as an uncontested suit although it had been on the contested list.

Mrs. Victoria Fura, alias Bezdel, of 33 St. Regis avenue, secured a divorce on the grounds of intolerable cruelty from Jacob Fura, 56, of Oakdale, Montville, who contested the suit. Attorney Edwin W. Higgins was counsel for the petitioner and Attorney M. W. Meyer for the defendant.

The marriage of the couple took place in 1901 and there was testimony to the effect that in January, 1915, Fura was given a sentence of from 12 to 15 years in Wethersfield for assault with intent to kill. After he had been in prison about three years, she was successful in getting him out on parole, spending about $300 in order to do so, and he came back to the St. Regis avenue house. She got him out, she said, in order that he might go to work, but he is crippled in one foot and he refused to work. She went to work in a mill and she claimed that her husband called her bad names, threatened her with his fist and brandished a chair over her head as she set in a rocking chair. She was in fear of him, she said, and after three months she told a lawyer about it and Fura was taken back to Wethersfield.

He was again released from state prison in 1924 and this time he came to the St. Regis street house just before Christmas and got his wife arrested when he told the Norwich police that she was in the moonshine business. Mrs. Fura testified that her husband went out and bought some whiskey which he brought to the house and told the police she was selling it. She was discharged in the Norwich city court.

Hector MacQuarrie, a resident of St. Regis avenue, told of Mrs. Fura calling to him to come over to her house, because Fura was going to hang himself in the hayloft. MacQuarrie said Fura had gone upstairs in the barn with a rope but when they went after him, he jumped out of a window and MacQuarrie helped pick him up and carry him into the house. At that time, Fura was intoxicated.

Mrs. Eugenie Mott, another St. Regis avenue neighbor, was another witness, telling of Mrs. Fura being sick in bed and how much worse she was after Fura came to see her and spoke to her in the Polish language.

John Zawelja, who has worked for Mrs. Fura ever since her husband was in prison and lives in the four-room bungalow on St. Regis avenue, testified to Fura threatening to stab him with a pen knife.

Testimony was also given by Archibald Torrance and Michael J. Panek was interpreter when Mrs. Fura was on the stand.

When Fura came to the stand he claimed that Zawelja drove him out of the house and he denied threatening Zawelja with a knife or his wife with a chair. The time that he went into the barn to hang himself, he said, was just after his wife had threatened to stab him with a bread knife and he had thrown open his coat and told her to go ahead. He charged his wife and Zawelja with being in the bootleg business.

After the Fura case had been disposed of, Attorney G. C. Morgan presented the suit of Frederick R. Swanson, a well known New London musician, for divorce from Lillian Brown Swanson of New York city. He alleged desertion on April 3, 1925. They were married Sept. 16, 1913.

The suit was uncontested and Mr. Swanson told the court that after his wife left him he asked her at times to come back but she responded that she was better satisfied and happier to be in New York. She had refused to consider coming back.

George Thatcher Shepard, partner with Swanson for the last seven years, and Edmond Sloan Brown, both of New London, both testified that they knew Swanson had been living alone all the time his wife has been gone.

Judge Simpson inquired of Swanson as to the reasons why Mrs. Swanson left and the petitioner's answer indicated that the irregular and late hours which resulted from his musical profession and orchestra engagements had something to do with it.

The divorce was granted for desertion.

MAKING PLANS FOR DR. WORKS' INAUGURATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Sept. 26. —The committee on the inauguration of Dr. George Allan Works as the new president of the Connecticut Agricultural college has announced that the formal ceremonies, at which leading educators of the country will officiate, will be held in Hawley armory, November 8.

The programme as tentatively arranged includes a reception by the trustees to Dr. and Mrs. Works on Thursday, November 7. On the following morning, Friday, November 8, the plans call for a military drill by the student R. O. T. C. unit, and luncheon for the invited guests. In the afternoon the inaugural exercises will take place followed by a banquet in the evening.

Saturday, November 9, is featured as "Homecoming day," with a football game with New Hampshire.

Dr. Works has been at the state college since August 1, when he came to take up his executive duties. Previous to that he was dean of the graduate library school at the University of Chicago. Dr. Works is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, in the class of 1904. Since then he has had a wide experience as an educator. He was, for several years following his graduation, a superintendent of schools in the smaller cities of Wisconsin, going to the University of Minnesota in 1913, and to Cornell in 1914. While at Cornell as professor of rural education, he conducted two extensive surveys of rural schools, one in New York state, and the other in Texas, which are regarded as the best reports ever made on this subject.

Dr. Works went to the University of Chicago, as dean of the graduate library school, in 1927, after conducting a survey of college libraries for the Carnegie Foundation which attracted national attention. He received his master of science degree at Cornell university and his doctor of education degree at Harvard in 1925.

Dr. Works was married in 1904, and has five children, three girls, and two boys. He is a member of the National Society for Vocational Education, American Association of University Professors, American Association for the Advancement of Science, Delta Epsilon, Phi Beta Kappa, Alpha Zeta, Phi Delta Kappa, and the Masons.

NEW HAVEN SCHEDULE UPON STANDARD TIME

With the ending of daylight saving next Sunday, the New Haven railroad will put its fall timetable into effect, with many changes in schedules, and passengers should provide themselves with the new timetables, which were in the hands of agents on Thursday.

Another Hell Gate bridge route train is added under the new schedules, to be known as the Penn State of Maine, which will carry through sleeping cars between Portland and Washington and Concord, N. H. and Washington in both directions.

There will be a new train from New York to Boston via Hartford and Willimantic, leaving Pennsylvania station at 10:15 a. m., due Boston 4:00 p. m., which will make only one stop between Hartford and Boston, making the run in two hours and 50 minutes, the fastest train on the schedule between those points.

The Gilt Edge from New York to Boston, which has been leaving Grand Central at 5:00 p. m., will leave at 5:00 p. m., meeting a demand for a six o'clock service New York to Boston. Its time will be shortened 15 minutes, the new schedule providing for a run of five hours and 25 minutes.

The Everglades Limited will be placed in service this year on November 1, a full month earlier than heretofore, and will have five hours clipped off its schedule southbound.

Another new feature is improved steamer service between New Bedford-Woods Hole and Nantucket and Marthas Vineyard, with connecting rail service to and from Boston during the month of October. The New England Steamship company also announces a year-round Sunday service between these points, which is an entirely new departure.

IOWA PLATES NEXT YEAR SIMILAR TO CONNECTICUT'S

Thirty-one states will change the color combination for automobile license plates in 1930 and 16 different motifs will be used throughout the country, indicating that there is a tendency on the part of the states to standardize the color schemes, according to a survey by the American Automobile association. Connecticut will use white on blue; Massachusetts white on red; Iowa with white on dark blue is the only state to choose color scheme similar to Connecticut's for next year.

There were 39 states to change the color combinations in 1929 and a total of 23 different color motifs were used. The national motoring body pointed out that 13 states and the District of Columbia will retain the 1929 color combinations, reversing them as to background and lettering. Only nine states and the District of Columbia retained the 1928 combinations last year. At the same time, the changes are marked by a desire for darker combinations.

The A. A. A. survey reveals that first rank will be divided between three color combinations, with black on orange, white on black and yellow on black each being adopted by six states. These color schemes will therefore predominate in 1930, dividing honors with yellow letters and numerals on a black background, which led last year.

Second honor will go to the white on red and black on gray combinations, which will each be used in five states. Beyond these more standard schemes, will be found a variety of other hues represented in identifying the units in the nation's rubber-tired transportation system.

Alabama, white on red; Arizona, black on light gray; Arkansas, gold on bright blue; California, black on orange; Colorado, deep yellow on black; Connecticut, white on blue; Delaware, gold on blue; District of Columbia, black on chrome yellow; Florida, white on dark green; Georgia, black on gray; Idaho, black on orange; Illinois, white on black; Indiana, yellow on blue; Iowa, white on dark blue; Kansas, white on black; Kentucky, red on yellow; Louisiana, yellow on green; Maine, white on red; Maryland, white on green; Massachusetts, white on red; Michigan, black on yellow; Minnesota, black on aluminum; Mississippi, red on blue; Missouri, not selected; Montana, black on orange.

Nebraska, cream on cobalt blue; Nevada, orange on black; New Hampshire, white on dark green; New Jersey, white on gray; New Mexico, gold on black; New York, yellow on black; North Carolina, white on maroon; North Dakota, green on orange; Ohio, white on maroon; Oklahoma, black on yellow; Oregon, not selected; Pennsylvania, blue on gold; Rhode Island, white on black; South Carolina, white on black; South Dakota, black on yellow; Tennessee, blue on silver; Texas, blue on yellow; Utah, white on black; Vermont, maroon on old gold; Virginia, orange on black; Washington, green on white; West Virginia, black on gray; Wisconsin, black on gray; Wyoming, white on black.

WHAT SCOUTING MEANS TO THE FARMER BOY

"Some people have an idea that scouting is for city boys only," says E. D. Larrabee, chairman of the territorial committee of the local Scout council, "that boys who live in the country are out-of-doors a great deal of the time anyway, and don't need any program of outdoor activities. Now a country boy needs scouting, more than the city boy does, because, since he is further away from the advantages and educational opportunities offered by the city, he needs a program that will help him to get the most out of the out-of-doors, and will give him interesting and worthwhile things to do.

"He needs something that will give him adventure and challenge his routine of farm work," said Mr. Larrabee. "Sheep raising, gardening, soil management, beef and pork raising may be all in the day's work. But suppose he wins merit badges for doing them! Then they become something exceedingly interesting and stimulating. Camp cooking, basketry, knifecraft and farm mechanics—these are but a few of the fine handicraft activities that the Scout program offers to keep him interested during the long winter evening. Safety and first aid help him to be prepared to serve home, farm, nation.

"Then think of the inspiration of being one of a club with a membership of two million boys, all the way around the world! And think of the advantages of following a program that has been praised by experts and great men of all nations, because it does build character and train for citizenship! Scouting can make your boy the kind of man you want him to be.

"There are hundreds of activities such as reading, nature work crafts and the merit badges so designed that farm boys may have their heads, hearts and their hands fully occupied while their tired bodies are at rest.

"A Lone Scout is a boy who follows the Scout program as an individual under the leadership of an adult friend or counselor. He carries on the program by correspondence, meets the same requirements as the boy in a troop and has the advantages of the Scout program. A number of Long Scouts may organize a tribe and have an adult leader, a chance to team and cooperate with other boys.

"Suppose three or four boys in your community want to get together and follow the Scout program under a leader—what can they do? They can organize a farm or home patrol. This may be organized with from two to eight boys. The scoutmaster of the patrol is a man of high character endorsed by three of the fathers of the boys. The patrol meets out-of-doors or at the homes of the Scouts or any convenient place. They follow the Scout program with many farm interests and applications.

"Should there be boys in the country around Norwich, who would like to be Scouts, they should write in to the local headquarters and find out where the nearest troop is or for information how to start a Lone Scout tribe."

Attended Lighting Course

Earl G. Taggart of the Norwich gas and electric department, attended the Fundamental Illumination course given at the Westinghouse Lighting institute, Grand Central Palace, New York city, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week. He was part of a group of over 75 men and women from every part of the country meeting in New York for a three-day program consistinr of a remarkable series of lectures and practical demonstrations relating to up-to-date practice in all branches of commercial, artistic and home illumination. The Lighting institute is admirably adapted for these demonstrations, as it is a great experimental laboratory where everything new and and useful in lighting is exhibited and tested.

The average man puts a greater value upon a favor he bestows than upon one he receives.

VOL. LXXI—No. 233 POPULATION 35,893 NORWICH, CONN., SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1929. TWELVE PAGES — 96 COLUMNS PRICE TWO CENTS

FIRST BUDGET ESTIMATES WILL TOTAL $656,571,234

For 1931 Expenditures For the Executive and Independent Establishments—The Total Left Available For Other Independent Establishments is $657,189,000—The Independent Establishments Include 31 Commissions, Boards and Bureaus Not Attached to Any Department.

WASHINGTON Sept. 27—(AP)—First budget estimates for 1931 showing that expenditures for the executive and independent establishments totalling $656,571,000 had been approved were made public today at the white house.

This represents a decrease of less than $1,000,000 as compared with 1930, excluding an appropriation for the federal farm board of $151,500,000 which brought the expenditures for the current fiscal year to $808,689,123. The total left available for other independent establishments was $657,189,000.

An excess for the current year over the amount spent in 1929 of approximately $6,000,000 was ascribed to an increase in expenditures of the veterans bureau.

The budget bureau did not include the expenses of the farm board in its estimates for next year because the board has been unable to determine how much money it will need. It still has approximately $350,000,000 already authorized by congress but not yet appropriated.

The independent establishments include 31 commissions, boards and bureaus, not attached to any department. Estimate for these were the first approved by the budget bureau which now is preparing the 1931 budget for submission to the next regular session of congress in December.

BREWERY OPERATED WHILE IN HANDS OF U. S. MARSHAL

NEW YORK, Sept. 27—(AP)—A former deputized custodian of a brewery on Staten Island today testified in federal court in Brooklyn that the brewery was "in full operation" from August 16, 1926, to February 19, 1927, while it was in the hands of United States Marshal Jesse D. Moore.

Testifying in a suit in which he and another plaintiff claim $250,000 for false arrest, the former custodian, Albert Johnson, said that all the employes of the Manor Brewery had keys to "the building "and I was instructed by the marshal not to interfere with them." He said the owners shut down on Feb. 19 of their own volition.

Johnson was arrested April 14, 1927 with William Fitzgerald on a charge of conspiracy in a theft of beer from the brewery, but the charge was later dropped. Subsequently they filed suit against Moore, his two sons, a deputy United States marshal and a prohibition agent.

Fitzgerald testified that on several occasions he encountered people at the brewery drinking beer. He said he once saw "a marshal named Smith" drinking.

The brewery was placed in Moore's hands after the government seized it and arrested twenty men on charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law, a charge on which they were freed.

GEORGES CLEMENCEAU REACHES HIS 88TH YEAR

PARIS, Sept. 27—(AP)—Georges Clemenceau will be 88 tomorrow.

The Tiger hasn't changed his spots, and no one expects he ever will. His mustache still flourishes formidably, his eyebrows still sweep out fiercely from his broad forehead, he wears his skullcap and his gloves indoors all day, and his tongue remains as sharp as a rapier, but he uses it less and less as the years roll by.

He does much writing and reading and receives visitors only rarely.

France and America, to name only two countries, eagerly await the publication of what Clemenceau has been writing these past few months.

On April 17 the Tiger told The Associated Press he had begun a book to reply to some of the statements made about his relations with Marshal Foch and General Pershing during the war. These statements were embraced in a book by Raymond Recouly called "The Memorial of Foch."

The Tiger hinted that his reply probably would be printed this autumn.

PEACOX FOUND GUILTY OF SECOND DEGREE MURDER

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 27—(AP)—Earl Peacox, 21-year-old radio instructor, was convicted tonight of murder in the second degree for killing his wife on the first anniversary of their marriage.

This verdict carries with it a sentence of imprisonment from 20 years to life.

The jury took the case late this afternoon and had been deliberating for more than six hours when it brought in its verdict tonight.

Peacox's defense had been that he struck his wife on the head with his pistol and choked her to death during a moment of insanity induced by his wife's infidelity and brought to a head by a quarrel on their wedding anniversary. He admitted that after killing her he put the body in his automobile and drove it to some nearby woods where he hid it and six days later he poured kerosene over it and set it afire.

GOEBEL WINS MEXICO CITY-KANSAS CITY AIR DERBY

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 27—(AP)—Colonel Art Goebel, who won the Dole air race from California to Hawaii, winged his way to another long distance victory here today, finishing ahead of other entries in the Mexico City-Kansas City air derby.

Official compilations will not be announced until later but Goebel's known elapsed flying time between control points assures him of $3,000 first prize money. He arrived here at 3:13 p. m., from Springfield, Mo., last night's control point.

Other contestants, all Mexican army fliers, arrived here as follows:

Colonel Roberto Fierro 3:15 p. m.

Captain Luis Verdeja, 3:19 p. m.

Captain Feliciano Flores, 3:23 p. m.

BRITISH PRIME MINISTER HAS SAILED FOR AMERICA

LONDON, Sept. 27—(AP)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald tonight started on his historic mission to the United States with a parting warm handclasp from United States Ambassador Charles G. Dawes to speed him on his way.

General Dawes, meticulously clad in evening dress with a shiny silk hat, elbowed his way through the huge workaday crowd which had gathered at Waterloo station and energetically cheered "Good old Mac. Good old Ramsay." He found the prime minister standing at Pullman door on the boat train, surrounded by friends and with his three pretty daughters hovering in the background.

"I am off in the hope of being able to do something to narrow the Atlantic," Mr. MacDonald said.

As the time neared for the train to depart, Isabel MacDonald, who alone of the three girls was accompanying her father to the United States, reached from the door of the car and nervously plucked him once or twice by the sleeve, urging him to step aboard. Her flushed face betrayed excitement, her eyes sparkled in anticipation.

The prime minister is scheduled to arrive in New York next Friday.

The committee expects to receive a request for a hearing by the naval experts on the staff of the American delegation to Geneva, who were named yesterday as associates of Shearer during that conference by Drew Pearson, newspaper reporter at the Geneva meeting.

He was discovered today by a posse of residents from this town and taken to Mays Landing for medical treatment. He suffered considerably from exposure but was otherwise unharmed.

Dirocco, together with three companions, went shooting in a wooded section near here. Aiming at a low-flying hawk, Dirocco shot wild. A figure in a battered hat and waving arms was seen to fall and lay motionless.

The boys fled, all returning to their homes except Dirocco. His companions today told their parents of what had taken place and a hunt was started for the boy.

MAN CAUGHT ON BRIDGE, KILLED BY TROLLEY CAR

CROMWELL, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Terrified by the approach of a double-header trolley car as he was crossing the bridge over Little river, Charles Porter, 64, a carpenter of West Cromwell, threw himself on his hands and knees in front of it late today, and was struck down to his death. Porter, who yesterday celebrated his fortieth wedding anniversary, was badly mutilated in the accident and died a few moments after the crew of the trolley, Daniel Kane, of Portland, operator, and William Nellis, of Middletown, conductor, ran to his aid.

Kane said that his car, which was going from Hartford to Middletown and which had just left the Cromwell station, was approaching the one-track trestle when he saw the old man coming along. Porter, who had been walking cautiously over the ties, was nearing the road on the Cromwell side, when the car came toward him. He immediately flung himself on his hands and knees, apparently fearing that flight would cause him to slip and fall into the river. Kane applied the brakes but he had seen Porter too late. The front car dragged the man thirty feet. The carpenter's right leg was severed below the knee and he suffered innumerable gashes and bruises on his body. He died without regaining consciousness.

The accident occurred on the Valley railroad tracks, used by a subsidiary of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad.

Coroner Loundes A. Smith began an investigation soon after the accident.

SEES LITTLE HARM IN WEEK END TRIPS FOR STUDENTS

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Sept. 27.—(AP)—President Henry N. MacCracken, of Vassar college today replied to a statement by President James Rowland Angell, of Yale, that week end trips of students to New York and to women's colleges are "harmful, physically and mentally."

President MacCracken said he would not conceive of such trips being as harmful as they had been depicted by Dr. Angell. He said:

"Students off on a holiday are not so apt to take proper care of themselves. If they are allowed motors they may stop at roadside stands and eat sandwiches in place of good wholesome food and are apt to keep most irregular hours.

"Here, we allow the students to go away for one week end a month. I consider that sufficient. I believe that Yale university or any other university, either for men or women, would do well to follow such a plan."

Gov. Moody Of Texas May Call Out Troops

To Deal With an Organized and Entrenched Crime Ring in Borger.

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 27—Governor Dan Moody, tonight ordered to send state troops to Borger, Hutchinson county oil town where District Attorney John A. Holmes recently was assassinated, to dislodge what he called an "organized and entrenched criminal ring." The only thing likely to avert martial law was resignation of certain county officers.

"The peace officers are for some reason failing to suppress crime and bring criminals to justice," Governor Moody said. His opinion was deduced from reports on the situation submitted to him by his investigators.

Information gathered by the investigators, the executive said, indicated the assassination of District Attorney Holmes "was brought about by a conspiracy among the peace officers."

The governor said conditions in Borger were not the fault of the judiciary but of the peace officers and that information convinced him that the "law abiding citizenship had been intimidated and is living under a menace which prevented their giving information on law violators."

Governor Moody said his investigators had determined there exists a conspiracy between certain officers and the criminal element.

"We have affidavits showing that money has passed to peace officers for protection from enforcement of the law."

Witnesses who had been questioned regarding law violations had been threatened and in some cases run out of the county," he said.

One man who had attempted to help the officers in their investigation of the Holmes slaying was threatened by a policeman and told that "it would take only one bullet" to finish him, Governor Moody said.

General Jacob Wolters of the Texas National Guard, and Clem Calhoun, acting district attorney in Holmes' district, were in conference with the governor today.

Five of the children were in their beds on the second floor and one was in the kitchen when Mrs. Munsey left the house. Neighbors believed they had been smothered soon after the fire started as no outcries were heard. Their charred bodies were taken from the debris after the ashes had cooled.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 27.—(AP)—John Philip Sousa, famous bandmaster, lay ill in his suite at the Syracuse hotel tonight under the care of a physician. While he was in a weakened condition, the attending physician indicated that the illness was not critical.

Commander Sousa was stricken with nausea a short time after his arrival in this city early this afternoon for two concert appearances.

Associates said the band leader had suffered from a cold since his recent experience in Colorado when the special train carrying the Sousa band was derailed, causing injury to several members.

The belief was expressed that the cold had settled in his stomach.

Tonight Banton also disclosed that Richard Enright, former police commissioner and mayoralty candidate of the square deal party, will be called before the grand jury for a "show down" of what he actually knows about the Rothstein case. Enright has charged that high public officials in city hall and Tammany hall had borrowed money from Rothstein and that a number of judges including some of the supreme court, had enjoyed Rothstein's favor.

While political observers were digesting this announcement, F. LaGuardia, republican candidate for mayor, who had uttered charges that Rothstein made loans to public officials, became more specific.

He charged that Magistrate Albert H. Vitale gave Rothstein his note for $20,000 and received in return Rothstein's check for $19,940.

LaGuardia, who had been "dared" by District Attorney Banton to make public information the republican candidate previously said he had, declared Rothstein's papers would show the loan.

"Judge Vitale is at this time very actively campaigning for Mayor Walker, (Tammany candidate for re-election) in the Bronx", LaGuardia said. "has made several speeches for him, and announced the formation of the Italian-American citizens in behalf of Mayor Walker.

"I now ask Mr. Walker to repudiate Mr. Vitale or to stand by him. Of course I am sure the mayor will ask a city magistrate to explain a $20,000 note and a $19,940 check from Mr. Rothstein, who, Mr. Banton states, was a notorious gambler."

Mr. Banton, in announcing that he would move Monday for a special jury panel for the trial of McManus, said he would open the prosecution as soon thereafter as possible.

Change Wrought by Advertising.

It was only a generation or two ago that the purchase of groceries and dry goods was conducted in an atmosphere of distrust. With so many fraudulent articles on the market one could never be sure.

Why is it that women—and men—do their buying today with a calm confidence?

What has become of the shams?

The simple fact is that advertising has made it difficult for dishonest goods to live. People buy advertised products and know that they will be as represented. Their makers and distributors have put themselves on record.

When you use the advertising columns as a buying directory and ask for advertised goods by name you are assured of your money's worth.

Banton in the form of an announcement that he would move Monday for the trial of George "Hump" McManus, accused of killing the Broadway racketeer who was once his friend.

AUGUSTA, GA., FLOOD BOUND HIGHWAYS ARE UNDER WATER

Heavy Rains Through Central and Eastern Georgia During the Past 24 Hours Have Damaged Crops and Put Highways Out of Commission—Several Towns Have Been Isolated by Flooded Streams That Have Carried Away Bridges and Washed Out Both Railroads and Highways.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Sept. 27—(AP)—Torrential rains during the past 24 hours tonight had sent streams in eastern and central Georgia on a rampage that isolated this city and half a dozen or more towns in this section from both rail and highway communications, as the floods swept over the country side.

Augusta, a city of 60,000 inhabitants, remained safe behind its new nine mile levee, however, while the greatest flood in its history flowed past its doors in the Savannah river. The gauge this afternoon showed a stage of nearly 45 feet with the river still rising slowly and expected to crest at about 47 feet near midnight.

Across the river at Hamburg, S. C., conditions were the reverse, as the many currents flowed through the streets of the often flooded mill town and even over the roofs of some of the houses.

There had been no loss of life, however, as the residents of the South Carolina mill town had reached safety on the ridges.

Appling, Millen, Wadley and Midville, like Augusta, were cut off from rail and highway communication by rampaging streams that carried away bridges and washed out both railroads and highways.

A murder trial was halted at Appling because of high water that marooned the judge and jury in the court house, while the solicitor general was water bound in another section of town. The defendant, Burley Adams charged with slaying Walter L. Tolbert, a prohibition agent, was in jail in another section of town.

An undetermined number of passengers on a Georgia railroad train were marooned at Thomason, Ga., where they were being fed in the town and sleeping on the train. Several trains were marooned at other points.

Food supplies were sent to a central of Georgia train marooned near Almira by airplane.

WATER IN SAVANNAH RIVER THE HIGHEST IN HISTORY

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 27 —(AP)— Northwestern South Carolina tonight continued to be menaced by flood rains, which during the past 48 hours have done great damage to crops and put state and county highways out of commission.

While there were some signs of a let-up of the almost continuous downpour in the Piedmont region, the rains were unabated farther west and distressing reports came from the banks of the Savannah river. The highest water in history was reported at the Savannah river crossing north of Augusta, Ga.

Transportation from South Carolina into Augusta was entirely cut off, that city being floodbound with all of its highways underwater. Traffic was at a complete standstill as neither by train nor motor could the city be reached.

In South Carolina a washout on the Little river at the outskirts of Laurens prevented railway traffic between Greenville and that town.

Conditions were reported improved at Spartanburg, although one cotton mill, The Enoree, had been forced to suspend operations when the Enoree river flooded the engine room.

The sixth United States cavalry, after a disastrous experience in ninety six creek yesterday when nearly a dozen horses were drowned and several soldiers escaped only by th heroic efforts of companions, was able to proceed to Columbia by a round about route.

The Savannah river was said to be highest level in history.

CUBA WILL ESCAPE THE BAHAMA HURRICANE

HAVANA, Sept. 27—(AP)— Weather reports issued this afternoon by the national observatory, assured Cuba that it would not be visited by the Bahama hurricane. The vortex was 55 miles southeast of Key West, today, and swerving away from Cuba shores.

The only danger that exists for Cuba was seen by Dr. Carlos Millas, head of the national observatory, to be in possibly complete recurving of the storm to form a loop back to Nassau. That danger, he said, would depond upon the size of the loop.

Local weather conditions remained unchanged this afternoon. Barometer readings were 29.81 with an 18 mile northwest wind. Skies continued murky and rain squalls were forecast.

The gulf of Mexico waters were lashed to a fury. Throughout the forenoon exceptionally high waves broke over the Havana seawall, forcing traffic to back streets. Coastwise shipping was stopped. Fishing fleets did not dare venture out in the choppy waters.

Few weather observations came from the storm center and no reports from Nassau, which it is feared, has been hit by the storm. So the national and Belen observatories were handicapped in forecasting. Their labors were further increased by calls from thousands of anxious persons seeking reports.

GALE SWEEPING COAST OF LOWER EAST FLORIDA

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 27—(AP)—While metterologists chased the elusive center of the tropical storm in the Bahama Islands tonight, the group nearest the lower east Florida coast were swept by gale winds. Ships found the going heavy.

Barometers were falling rapidly during the early evening at West End and Bimini opposite Palm Beach and Miami, respectively, and barometric pressures on the mainland had lowering tendency. Some rain squalls with gusty winds were experienced at Palm Beach and Miami but were of brief duration.

The steamship Lake Gaither, ten miles off Miami at 3:20 p. m. radioed the wireless station W O E at Palm Beach that she was ploughing through a high wind and confusing seas, with the barometer at 29.57 and falling slowly.

The weather bureau advisory at 8 p. m. said the center of the storm at that time apparently was "a short distance west and south of yesterday's position." The center yesterday was indicated off Andros Island. The bureau continued its northwest storm warnings south of Miami to Key West, stating that north winds were likely to reach gale force within the next 24 hours.

NASSAU REPORTS WIND STILL BLOWING HARD

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 27—(AP)—The tropical radio station here announced at 7 o'clock tonight that it had communicated with Nassau, capital of Bahamas for the first time since Wednesday.

A footnote said the Nassau radio station was using a gasoline engine to generate power with which to operate.

The communication gave no details regarding the fate of the Montague's crew.

The Princess Montague is a British steamer operating between Miami and Nassau. It is said to be a ship of 388 tons.

The message telling of the wreck was addressed to G. H. Rogers, manager of the tropical station here, and was signed "Burns, 27 Nassau, superintendent government telegraph."

PROGRESS OF RUSSIAN PLANE, "LAND OF THE SOVIETS"

DUTCH HARBOR, Alaska, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The Russian plane, "Land of the Soviets" which took off from here at 9:46 a. m., (Pacific time) for Seward, 700 miles away, was believed nearing the end of the last leg of its flight over the story north Pacific ocean late today.

Seward will be their first stop on the Alaska mainland, but the third in American territory.

The four Russian aviators started after a delay of two days because of a southeast gale which almost wrecked the plane on the rocks here Tuesday when it arrived from Attu, most westward of the Aleutian islands.

Favorable flying conditions between here and Seward were indicated by weather reports. From Seward the plane will continue to Sitka and then to Seattle where the pontoons will be replaced with wheels for the flight to New York by way of San Francisco.

The plane arrived at Attu on September 21. It started from Moscow August 23 last, making eight stops en route to the Aleutians.

COVENTRY IS NOW FREE FROM ANY INDEBTEDNESS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 27—The town of Coventry is now free from debt and according to the report of the board of selectmen for the year ending September 1, 1929, has a small surplus of $48.79. Rigid economy and a strong drive for collection of taxes are accountable for this excellent condition of Coventry's treasury. Several unusual circumstances arose last year with the result that the increase of liability strict economy won over these conditions and the debt has been obliterated. The indexing of probate records, a new fire-proof safe and a bridge bill of considerable size paid to the town of Mansfield were among extraordinary expenses to be met last year. With foreclosure proceedings exercised when necessary the tax collector reduced the amount of unpaid taxes from $13,282.13 as of September 1, 1928, to $7,778.24, a gain of $11,514.29 in one year.

The only unusual large expense for the next biennium will be repairs to the town's bridges which are subject to considerable heavy traffic, especially by trucks. The selectmen had these bridges examined with the co-operation of the state highway department. It is planned to repair and strengthen the bridges over a period of years, paying attention to the weakest spans first and thereby avoiding the necessity of any increase in the tax rate.

The budget this year shows an increase of $765.44, this being due to an estimated increase of $1,065.44 in school expenses, such an increase being in line with the experience of virtually all other towns. The present 20 mill tax rate is believed sufficient for the coming year. The tax return plus estimated receipts will enable the town to expend $4,000 annually for several years to come for the graveling of its miles of country roads. The selectmen believe that this is the first time that such a proposition could definitely be worked out without an increase in tax rate. The town meeting to transact the annual business is expected to be held Saturday, October 12.

The efforts of James J. Shea Post, No. 19, American Legion to revive public celebration of Armistice day in this city will bring about the largest street parade ever witnessed in the history of the community. Legionnaires of the fourth district, comprising posts in the towns and cities of Tolland and Windham counties, other local military and patriotic organizations, the local national guard unit and members of the student battalion of the Connecticut Agricultural college are expected to participate in the parade and the general events of the day. The latter will include a public meeting with noted speakers at the state armory following the parade and a dance at the Al-Pierre Tabarin in the evening. In the forenoon a theater will be thrown open to the children with free admission to a war picture. The report was made at the regular meeting of the post held Thursday evening by William F. Mann, chairman of the committee.

Agitation on the part of merchants and others directly affected by changes in train service to and from Willimantic is said to be gaining ground in favor of the restoration of Train No. 112, east bound to Boston, which the New Haven railroad proposed to discontinue with the introduction of the new schedule next Sunday. The project of the railroad is to remove this train which is now arriving at 7:53 a. m., leaving for Boston at 7:58. The new schedule comes into effect with the conclusion of the daylight saving time at 2 a. m. Sunday. The new timetable of the New Haven railroad shows ten trains leaving here on week days: four east bound: 8:58 a. m., 1:06, 7:35 and 7:21 p. m.; and six west bound: 6:28 and 11:19 a. m., 2:07, 4:07, 6:07 and 8:07 p. m. Sunday trains east bound will be at 8:58 a. m., 3:36 and 7:21 p. m.; west bound, 11:19 a. m., 4:07 and 8:07 p. m. The usual two trains in both directions will be continued by the Central Vermont railway, north bound at 6:37 a. m., and 3:15 p. m.; south bound 10:55 a. m. and 5:24 p. m.

A police dog, whose timely barking awakened the family of Judge Frank H. Foss at their home in South Windham about 1:30 o'clock this morning prevented a fire loss that would undoubtedly have been considerable. Upon investigating the cause of the dog's barking it was discovered that fire had broken out in the garage annex in the rear of the residence. Notwithstanding the dog's action the loss was estimated at several hundred dollars, partially covered by insurance. Upon being awakened, Judge Foss telephoned Chief James M. Larkham of the South Windham fire department. The blaze was extinguished after two hours of efficient fire fighting. After notifying the department Judge Foss drove his car out of the garage before it had been reached by the flames. The blaze is believed to have been caused by spontaneous combustion originating in the loft of the one and one-half story annex. The flames were confined to this part of the structure. The only damage to the residence proper was caused by smoke. A hydrant connection was used in combatting the fire.

The highly elevated footbridge that spans the railroad yard and Willimantic river from Main to Pleasant streets afforded the unusual scene of a small blaze about 2 o'clock this afternoon. WESTERLY

FOUR HELD FOLLOWING CHARGE OF FLIMFLAMMING

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 27—The old flimflam game was worked Thursday by a party of Connecticut automobilists from Ansonia, returning to their home from a visit in Providence. There were four in the party and their apprehension followed a warning broadcast by the police of Warwick, R. I., where the colored quartet had been reported as plying their trade. It was received in Westerly at 9 p. m. Their detection and arrest resulted from an automobile collision involving three cars.

Officer LeRoy H. Norman, acting lieutenant in charge of Dixon square, received a summons to investigate a collision near the Dolan store on Franklin street sometime before 11:00 p. m. Here Officers Norman and Knight found that a Nash touring car driven by John T. Grayson, of 77 North Main street, Ansonia, had pulled up quickly and stopped, just behind it was the Ford sedan of Frank Montalto driven by Douglas H. Roberts of 24 Clark street, Westerly and this car also pulled up quickly to stop. A Ford coach, operated by Charles Vaughn of 7 William street, Pawcatuck, had the choice of being struck by a passing car if it had pulled out of the line, but instead the car ahead was bumped and rammed into the rear of the first auto as the driver claimed the other cars were stopped so suddenly he had no chance to avoid a collision.

In the first car were three men and a woman. Driver Grayson, aged 28, James Duen, 28 of 1 Liberty street, Ansonia, William Earl, 34 of 77 North Main street, Ansonia and Miss Essie May Anderson, a hairdresser, 21, also of the North Main street address. After questioning it was decided to lock up the four occupants, especially after Miss Anderson had described herself as a sister to one of the men. In making a search of the colored man a $5 bill was found in his underclothing ing near a garter, a $10 bill came out of a shoe and at least $30 more came to light when the disrobing was completed in a cell. Previous to their being taken to the police station Duen and Earl had nearly made good their escape when they were about to drive away in a taxi.

Just about that time Officer Knight came along with Charles Green, proprietor of the Dunn's Corners filling station on the Boston Post road, who claimed to have been victimized. Their method of operation was to present a $5 bill for a package of cigarettes and then to "discover" that they had change and to ask and receive the return of their five-spot after they had already received the $4.80 change. At this time five or ten one-dollar bills were presented with the request that one bill be given them in return and by this time the victim would have forgotten the return of the original five until the flammers had departed. When charged with such proceedings both Grayson and Miss Anderson denied complicity. Being held for thorough investigation of their activities, the parties were not arraigned at the regular Friday morning court session.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

The 25th annual fair of the New London County Agricultural society was held in this city fifty years ago this week. This is the first year in 75 years that Norwich has been without its annual fair. Excluding the fair there was little of interest that occurred in Norwich that week half a century ago. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Bulletin of September, 1879, are as follows:

Monday, Sept. 22, 1879—The New London County Agricultural society held their 25th annual fair on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week. The attractions, as far as we are able to judge, were never superior. Among them is the grand trial of speed tomorrow afternoon of the fastest horses raised and owned in the county and the fastest horses on the grounds. In addition to these there are to be grand races on Wednesday and Thursday. The Norwich and Worcester railroad offers superior inducements to parties desirous of attending the fair as they offer very low rates of fare and it should be the means of bringing crowds to this exhibition.

Mrs. Caroline Chapman left the city last evening, for Nebraska, expecting to arrive at her destination on Saturday next. She is in her 70th year, smart and active, and has ventured on a trip few young women would presume to undertake alone. A score of friends assembled at the depot to see her off.

The town of Preston received a large safe for the reception of the town records, Saturday from Tomson and Company, New Haven. It weighs 2,400 pounds.

Tuesday, Sept. 23, 1879—Mr. William R. Lathrop of Norwich Town transplanted a young apple tree last spring and it blossomed in its season. Last Sunday afternoon, while examining the fruit, he discovered that it was in blossom the second time, and kindly forwarded to this office a spray of the handsome flowers, yesterday, which were fragrant with the odors of spring.

A boy named Donovan shot himself in the hand, accidentally in Greeneville, Saturday, while carelessly handling a pistol. The wound was not serious.

The weather doors were placed in position at police headquarters yesterday. The big building is getting cool and steam is not to be gotten up before October 1st.

Wednesday, Sept. 24, 1879—W. N. Andrew returned from Baltimore yesterday, where he has been as a representative of the Grand lodge, I. O. O. F., of this state, to attend the annual meeting of the Grand lodge of the United States. About 126 delegates were present from the different states of the union. They were royally entertained and were taken on an excursion up the Blue Ridge mountains and the Horseshoe. The grand body has taken the name of the Sovereign Grand lodge, I. O. O. F., of the United States. The next meeting is to be held in Toronto.

Capt. Smith's boat "Thames" moored near Thamesville, was discovered to be so badly damaged by some miscreant, Monday, as to necessitate the taking of the boat out of the water for immediate repairs.

Gov. Andrews has appointed Mr. Joseph Allen of this city, inspector of boilers for the third district.

Thursday, Sept. 25, 1879—Uncle Tom's Cabin—The superb bill offered to the public at Breed hall, next Wednesday evening, will no doubt be appreciated and the appreciation will be shown by a packed house. Anthony & Ellis company far surpass any other Uncle Tom's Cabin company ever put upon the road, every part being rendered in a life-like manner while the Jubilee Singers with their cotton field songs, and the fine scenery, aid in making the performance a magnificent one.

The funeral obsequies of Eminent Commander David F. Parker, of Worcester county commandery, K. T., will be observed today at 1:30 o'clock p. m. at Plymouth church, Worcester. Sir knights of Columbian commandery, who desire to participate in the observance thereof should leave this morning on the 9:40 train.

There is a double scull race on the river at 6 o'clock this evening. Five crews are expected to compete and make a lively contest.

Friday, Sept. 26, 1879—The Ella is to make an excursion to Greenport and Shelter Island next Wednesday, leaving her dock at eight o'clock, touching at New London. She will connect with a special train on the Long Island railroad for Riverhead, thus giving excursionists an opportunity to visit the Suffolk county fair and a ride of about 20 miles through the most beautiful part of Long Island in addition to the steamboat ride. The fare is made very low.

Tomorrow evening the People's course of entertainments opens at Breed hall with the Ideal Opera company of Boston in Pinafore, with talented and well known artists as the principals. Tickets are now on sale, for the course. No single tickets will be sold until tomorrow.

Co. D (Buckingham Guards) received their guns yesterday. They have been waiting for the arms for some time, and will now proceed to work in earnest.

Saturday, Sept. 27, 1879—A boat containing a young gentleman named Hayward and a lady friend was capsized last evening, while passing beneath the curve bridge over the eastern outlet from Yantic cove, precipitating both of its occupants into the water. They were promptly taken from the river by a boat from the Messrs. Whaley's float close by.

Mr. T. L. Harrison, of Hartford, visited different points of interest in the town on his bicycle yesterday. He propelled the vehicle over Laurel Hill without difficulty.

The out of town attendance at the New London county fair was much less than last year. The attendance over the New London Northern road was one third less than last year and over the Norwich & Worcester, 67 per cent. less.

DANIELSON

MISS N. A. HUTCHINS DIES FOLLOWING BRIEF ILLNESS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 27.—Miss N. Antoinette Hutchins, 74, a native and life-long resident of Danielson, died late this afternoon at the home of her niece, Miss Lillian E. Bailey, 30 Broad street. Miss Hutchins had been in failing health for some time, but had been seriously ill only since the first of the week. It is a strange fact that through all of the years that the members of her family lived without any of them passing to the Beyond, that three members have died within six months. Mrs. Effie F. Bailey, mother of Miss Lillian E. Bailey, a past department commander of the Connecticut W. R. C., and a sister of Miss Hutchins, died May 1 of this year. A brother, Herbert Hutchins, of Moosup, died on July 24.

Miss Hutchins was born in Danielson Feb. 2, 1855, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Dwight Hutchins, at the Hutchins place on the Green Hollow road, where six generations of this family first saw the light of day, and it is indicated by this that the Hutchins family has been for a very long time, and prominently, identified with the affairs of this town.

Miss Hutchins is survived by the following immediate relatives: Mrs. David W. Hutchins and N. Genevieve Leech, sisters, and Marion C. Hutchins, a brother, all of Danielson.

Administration of justice imposed no heavy burden of expense on the taxpayers of Killingly during the last financial year, it will be shown by forthcoming town reports. As a matter of fact, the net cost of the town court was only $256.78. The gross cost of maintaining the court, including salaries of officials and sundry other payments, was $2,747.59. To largely offset this there were receipts from fines and costs amounting to $2,555.87.

Likewise, the annual reports will show careful administration of the town farm. The gross cost for the 12 months covered by the reports and including $257.80 in bills left over from the preceding year was $6,048.40. Against this there were revenues amounting to $2,425.85, making the net cost only $3,622.91. Sale of milk produced $1,069.62; cows and calves, $316; pigs, $90.36; eggs, $297.01; chickens and fowls, $212.46; hay, $140; vegetables, $127.22; team labor, $49; rentals, $25. In addition there were various minor revenues. The cost for each dependent resident at the farm has been at the rate of $3.68 per week.

Mrs. Charles Genung, of Farmington, whose body was brought here for burial in Westfield cemetery this week, was before her marriage Miss Sally Backus Griggs, of Brooklyn, N. Y. She was a daughter of Dr. Stephen Griggs, who practiced medicine in Danielson four score years ago, coming here from Pomfret. Mrs. Genung died in Farmington after a long illness. During her early life she spent a number of summer seasons in Danielson. She was a lover of art, music and literature. The committal service was conducted by Rev. Harding W. Gaylord.

Miss Marion D. Chollar, Mrs. Harding W. Gaylord, Mrs. Burdette C. Hopkins and Mrs. Helen S. Dowe constitute the general committee arranging for the fall meeting of the Eastern district of Congregational Women at the Westfield Congregational church on Thursday of next week. The hospitality committee is made up of Mrs. W. F. Bidwell, Mrs. A. J. Tillinghast, Miss M. J. Mendell and Miss Frances W. Danielson. Mrs. Marjorie Waller and Mrs. Deborah Atwood are the members of the registration committee. Mrs. Aurilia Smith has charge of the luncheon tickets. The committee on literature is made up of Mrs. John Merrick Paine and Miss Carrie Fellows. Miss Miriam Boomhower is the flower committee. Miss Amelia Hutchins has charge of the arrangements for the musical program, while the home exhibit will be in charge of Mrs. Esther Jacobs and Mrs. George Danielson. The luncheon to be served will be prepared by the Ladies' Benevolent society.

Only a few matters aside from routine business are slated for consideration at the coming annual town meeting of Killingly. This is shown by the warning for the meeting that has been prepared by the selectmen—Charles A. Tillinghast, Alcott D. Sayles and Napoleon P. Gingras. The matters aside from routine that are listed have to do with considering the making of an appropriation of $1,200 for the care of shade trees, the removal of trees that are in dangerous condition and the replacing of shade trees; consideration of making an appropriation of $600 to pay an instructor of the Killingly High school band, and to see whether the town will declare its intention, under a specified public act, to improve a section or sections of public roads within the town. This latter proposition is said to have as a background the plan to complete the state-aid highway between Elmville and East Killingly, a project that has much support throughout the town, as East Killingly is the only community of the several within the borders of the town that is without state road facilities, at least part of the way between that point and Elmville.

Sunday at the Baptist church is to be observed as Rally and Promotion day. There is to be a special promotion program at the morning service at 10:45. At noon the church school will have a special Rally day program and promotion of classes. In the evening at 7 o'clock there is to be a song service. The address at this service will have to do with work among sailors in the harbor of New York.

When voters of the town of Brooklyn foregather for their annual business meeting on the first Monday in October they will consider, among other things, whether they will approve of a proposition to build a sidewalk along one side of South street and whether they will vote to abandon as part of the town highway system a short stretch of highway leading from the Brooklyn-Pomfret highway over Barrett hill. This short stretch of highway is in almost complete disuse and can be abandoned, it is claimed, without causing inconvenience to anyone.

Attention was called today to the fact that local cash donations for the Day Kimball hospital fund should be in not later than Saturday of this week. Mrs. R. D. Banigan is receiving them as chairman of the hospital committee of the Killingly Woman's club.

PUTNAM

SEVEN DIVORCES GRANTED BY JUDGE E. M. YEOMANS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 27.— Seven divorces were granted in superior court in Putnam today at a short calendar session by Judge Edward M. Yeomans.

Mrs. Ann Turcotte, wife of Dr. Samuel J. Turcotte of Willimantic, received a decree of divorce on the grounds of intolerace cruelty. In her testimony she stated that she was married to the Willimantic physician on July 15, 1922. According to her testimony Mrs. Turcotte's life during the past two years has been filled with misery because of the attitude of her husband. She stated that on Thanksgiving eve, two years ago, Dr. Turcotte made a serious attack upon her, struck her a ferocious blow on the head, pulled her hair and ruthlessly flung her out of bed. During her testimony Mrs. Turcotte broke down under a nervous strain and burst out crying so that it was necessary for court proceedings to be temporarily halted. Dr. C. E. Simonds, a witness for the plaintiff, took the stand and testified that he had examined Mrs. Turcotte and found her to be suffering from a nervous trouble brought about through her husband's indifference toward her. Mrs. Alida Dubrieul of Prospect street, Willimantic, testified that during the two-year period in which she resided close to the Turcotte home, Mrs. Turcotte had suffered greatly at the hands of her husband. Mrs. Dubrieul stated that the doctor had failed to provide his wife with either clothes or money. The defense, however, failed to contest the case. Judge Yeomans in deciding the case awarded Mrs. Turcotte a decree on the grounds claimed in the action, besides granting her custody of a four-year-old son, Wallace Raymond. In addition the court ordered settlement of $600 and weekly payments of $35.

Mrs. Martha McBride, of Danielson, was successful in securing a divorce from her husband, Theophilus J. McBride, formerly of Danielson, and now of parts unknown, on the grounds of cruelty. She also was awarded custody of two minor children.

After proving that her husband had deserted her in favor of the affections of another woman, Mrs. Florina Gates of Day street, Danielson, was awarded a decree of divorce from her husband, George Gates, of Killingly avenue, Putnam. Mrs. Gates alleged abuse on the part of her husband who deserted her two years after their marriage. Judge Yeomans granted the decree on grounds mentioned in the action.

Mrs. Albina Ratte, of Ballouville, was divorced from her husband, Peter Ratte, who has been legally separated from another wife in a previous court action, on grounds of desertion. Mrs. Ratte told of abusive language employed by her husband when he entered his home in a drunken condition that forced her to resort to police action to protect herself. She also touched upon a few experiences of her husband's former spouse who obtained a legal separation from him. After the introduction of several witnesses, decree of divorce on grounds of desertion was handed down by the presiding justice.

George P. Gee of East Woodstock was granted a decree of divorce on a desertion charge from his wife, Mabel Davidson Gee, of Putnam, in an uncontested action. Gee alleged that his wife's affections were lost to him when he became stricken with a nervous breakdown about three years ago. He testified that his wife has ignored his pleas to return to him and in view of this desired a separation.

Margaret Bennett of Danielson was granted a decree on grounds of desertion and mistreatment from her husband, Fred Bennett, of Danielson.

Edgard J. Meunier, of Danielson, by an order from Judge Edward M. Yeomans, will be forced to pay five dollars weekly for the support of his child, whose mother was granted a decree of divorce today on grounds of cruelty. Custody of the child was awarded to the mother.

WILLIMANTIC YOUTH GETS SUSPENDED SENTENCE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 27.—A verdict of guilty of an attempt to rape was returned against Philippe Geaudreault, 18-year-old Willimantic boy, in superior court in Putnam today. The evidence in the case was completed late yesterday afternoon and following a lengthy charge to the jury at the opening of court this morning by Judge Edward M. Yeomans, the jury retired to chambers at 11 o'clock. The twelve men in whose hands the fate of Geaudreault rested did not return until two o'clock this afternoon. Upon the announcement of their finding Geaudreault was sentenced to an indefinite term in the state reformatory by Judge Yeomans, but the execution of the sentence was suspended and the defendant placed in charge of a probation officer for a period of one year.

Attorney Arthur T. Kelly, of Willimantic, who represented the convicted boy in the action, made a last minute plea before the imposition of sentence, in which he urged the court to be lenient in view of the fact that Geaudreault is the sole support of a widowed mother. Judge Yeomans deliberated several minutes before he meted out the sentence.

Charges against a group of Greek religious fanatics preferred by the town of Plainfield, through the state which claimed that the defendants attempted to sell religious propaganda in Moosup without first procuring a license, were nolled when Judge Yeomans ruled that the state had not prepared a sufficiently strong case.

Court was adjourned late this afternoon until next Thursday morning when criminal action will be taken against Ora L. Smart, former warden of the town farm of Woodstock, who is facing a charge of rape.

Health Officer Peter A. Gardner, who has returned to his duties following a vacation spent in Canada, stated today that only two cases of whooping cough have been entered upon the communicable disease records of the city during the past week. This Mr. Gardner added, constitutes an unusually low mark for the community, especially at this time of the year.

Members of the city street department began work this morning on the repair of the old trolley "Y" at South Main street which is to be converted into a city parking space. A new layer of sand and gravel has been spread over the space of land alloted to the city by the New Haven railroad and next year an application of oil will be given the parking space.

The police department has been informed of the suspension of the operator's licenses of Emil Daigneault and Demetri Petrou of Middle street, who have been convicted of motor vehicle offenses. The suspension was ordered by the state department of motor vehicles.

Members of the hook and ladder and the pumper company at the Central fire station, were called out this afternoon to extinguish a grass and brush fire in an open lot on Arch street. The work of the firemen was directed by Chief R. E. Thurston and the flames extinguished before any property had been threatened.

The engagement of Mrs. Hoppin, widow of Dr. Joseph Clarke Hoppin, of Pomfret, to John J. Whitehead, Jr. was announced yesterday. Mr. White is president of the Patriot Press, Inc., and is well known as an author.

JEWETT CITY

FIRST CONDEMNATION IN VIADUCT LAND CASE

Choppers were at work Friday clearing the trees and brush from the right of way for the Quinebaug viaduct. A great red oak, three feet in diameter, growing on the river bank, is to be made to fall to the east by means of a tackle rigging to overcome its lean toward the stream. The drilling operations Friday disclosed the fact that a stratum of white granite extends through the blue rock which is th main formation of the ledge.

It is found that the depth of rock bottom under the river varies but little from the levels reached on both the Griswold and Lisbon banks. Two big trucks arrived from Providence today with engines and power pumps, which indicates that actual operations by the contractor will begin soon. Relative to the matter of land damages, Wallace H. Payne, having failed of agreement with the state engineers, received notification Thursday from the superior court of New London county that his land, in so far as it is needed by the state of Connecticut, has been condemned.

The water in the Jewett City Water company's reservoir at Stone Hill was 67 inches low Friday evening and dropping at the rate of an inch every 24 hours. It was thought by some that the seven-tenths of an inch of rain that fell throughout this section of September 17th, would operate as a permanent drouth-breaker. Its benefits proving but transient, springs that have never failed are dry, with not a drop of water showing in the beds of many local brooks.

School Pupils Careless

When the St. Mary's and Riverside school children are let out for the noon hour, motor drivers are reporting that the pupils do not use even reasonable care in crossing the state highway. Perfect working brakes with lightning application of the same by Stanley Winroth at the corner of Ashland and Main streets, Thursday, saved a small child from injury. Mr. Winroth was slowed down to a walk, but the girl looked only one way and almost ran into the machine, having given no hint of intending to cross over.

Miss Katherine Brennan and her aunt, Mrs. Helen Walsh, left Friday for New York, where they will make their home. They are two estimable women with many local friends. VOLUNTOWN

Chief of Police Brown and Constable Clinton Brown, of Westerly, R. I., State Trooper Johnson of the Groton barracks and Trooper Henry Mayo of the Danielson barracks were in town Sunday making a search for automobile tires, stolen recently in Westerly. Some of the tires were found at Clark's Falls. In searching the property of Mrs. Cenna Grothe, on the Dennison hill road, the officer uncovered a small still filled with mash, also found a quantity of moonshine, possibly about a gallon and one empty still. All was taken in charge by Officer Mayo, who placed under arrest Mrs. Grothe's son, Fred Grothe, aged 24, as the owner of the illegal property. Grothe was presented before Justice of the Peace George B. Sheldon Monday evening and pleaded guilty to the charge of manufacturing and keeping with the intent to sell. He was fined $100 and costs, $50 of the fine was remitted and Grothe paid $66.90. Grothe proved to the satisfaction of the officers that he was in no way connected with the missing tires.

Saturday the town clerk, selectmen and registrars of voters met in Union hall to pass on the qualifications of those to be made voters before the coming town election. The list this year contains only 20 names, the smallest in years. Of the 20 only eight persons appeared before the officials to be admitted. Today, Saturday, Sept. 28, will be the last opportunity this year.

Sunday evening the local moving picture theatre was reopened after being closed for some time. The local theatre is under the management of John Barnett, of Jewett City. Howard E. James is the operator.

Several local people who have been employed at the plant of the Glasgo Finishing company at Glasgo, have been transferred to the local plant of the Beachdale Co., which is operating the Stone Mill. This plant is now running and turning out orders. There is also a prospect that the Yellow Mill will soon be in operation. An additional story being built to the mill is nearing completion and will soon be ready for expected machinery.

Wednesday evening Miss Regina O'Neil, principal of the local school and the teachers, Mrs. A. Tanner and Miss Bertha Stanky, accompanied by John Lincoln and Alexander Tanner went to Scotland to attend a lecture given by Miss Keller of the Lincoln school of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmond St. John, Mrs. Della Kennedy and son Harvey were in Springfield, Mass., Saturday to attend the marriage of Miss Anna St. John, R. N., of Springfield, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmond St. John of this village, and Rene Fredette, of Pulaski, N. Y., where Mr. and Mrs. Fredette will make their home.

Mrs. Thomas L. Ryder and son Donald Ryder, of Newton, Mass., were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cole, leaving here for a tour of the Berkshires, White mountains and Cape Cod.

Breed Theatre

"Keep your chin up!" That was the psychology "Chico" taught to "Diane" in "7th Heaven," and the idea is being carried out by Director Frank Borzage again with Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor in their first talking picture, 'Lucky Star," which begins a four-day engagement tomorrow night at the Breed theatre.

In their present Fox Movietone talking feature, Farrell once more is the teacher, Miss Gaynor the student. Her first glimpse of him is while he is high above her working on a telephone line. Here he battles the line boss for one of her misdeeds—cheating.

There is much of psychology in "Lucky Star," which was written by Tristram Tupper, using as a theme: "The things we create re-create us." Just as Miss Gaynor begins "looking up" at Farrell, he goes to the World war. When he returns he is a cripple in a wheel chair, but he never lets his physical handicap get the best of him. Miss Gaynor finds inspiration in her association with the war derelict—she changes as a butterfly from the chrysalis.

As she is re-born, he is lifted, too, and when Farrell learns that this girl he has come to love is being forced into a marriage with his former line boss, he "finds" his legs again and, unaided, battles snow and blizzard to win for himself the lass who "kept her chin up."

Broadway Theatre

Given one of the greatest stage successes that has ever crowded blase Broadway, New York, a clever directory with foresight enough to retain the biggest part of the stage cast intact, a tremendous cast of screen favorites, a chorus of Broadway beauties, studio settings on a scale never before attempted in motion pictures, a special musical accompaniment including some brand new lyrics and jazz numbers, liberal use of technicolor, and the terse, vivid dialogue of the original stage production, and you have a faint idea of the first million-dollar talking picture, "Broadway," which has its premiere Connecticut showing on the Broadway screen tomorrow. Universal spared no expense in filming this towering production, which has been playing to capacity in New York at $2 prices a solid year, following closely on the heels of the stage drama at top prices. It tells a vivid story of that side of New York which no one but a New Yorker ever sees, the "behind the scenes" of gangland, with its gentlemen gunmen, its "molls," "bootlegs" and hi-jackers, gamblers and suckers, and all the seething, changing population of that mysterious suburb of New York—"the underworld." Blended with the tense drama of the plot, which depicts the unceasing war between order and disorder, law and lawlessness, is a touching love story, and a singing, dancing musical cabaret background which surpasses anything ever shown on the silent or talking screens. "Broadway" is the voice of New York, telling a story that lays bare the hearts and souls of the men and women who live in a world peculiar to itself—where gaiety runs riot, and sudden tragedy skulks just around the corner—a world gone mad with the pursuit of pleasure and profit at any cost. In the cast are Glenn Tryon and Merna Kennedy, Evelyn Brent, Thomas E. Jackson, Otis Harlan, Robert Ellis, Paul Porcasi, Leslie Fenton and George Ovey, four of whom figured in the original stage production, a selected chorus of Broadway and coast beauties in spectacular dancing ensembles and chorus numbers, and two big orchestras of international fame, featuring Gus Arnheim and his Cocoanut Grove orchestra. The night club cabaret is said to be the biggest single scene ever constructed in any studio, and preserves all the glitter and pageantry of the brightest spots on the Great White Way. The latest Paramount Sound News, and the rollicking Talking Collegians in "Flying High," complete a most interesting program, which will open tomorrow evening with two complete shows.

Palace Theatre

Dolores Costello, wife of John Barrymore, and recognized as perhaps the loveliest star in Hollywood, lends her slim beauty and marvelous talent to the new Vitaphone all-talking, singing picture, "Hearts in Exile," which opens at the Palace theatre today. Set in a Russian background, the action of this im is swift, poignant and dramatic—a triumph for Miss Costello. This is the plot into which Miss Costello's beautiful face, figure and screen genius are woven:

Vera Ivanova lives in the slums of Moscow with her father, Dimitri, who is proprietor of an unpretentious fish market. Their living quarters are upstairs above the market and they have as a roomer Paul Pavloff, a dissolute university student who is in love with Vera, but who neglects his studies to drink and gamble.

Baron Serge Palma has for some time been in reduced circumstances, owing to the fact that he has been unable to secure his rightful inheritance. He sees Vera and is much attracted to her, and thereafter comes daily to the fish market, ostensibly to purchase fish, but in reality to get another glimpse of Vera. Eventually he mentions to Dimitri his feelings toward the beautiful girl, and without further ado the father takes him upstairs, that he may talk with Vera and propose marriage.

LOOKING AFTER CONNECTICUT

In the fight against the tariff there are those in the senate who are ready to employ all kinds of political opposition, and that is about all that the criticism of Senator Bingham of Connecticut amounts to.

Senator Bingham clearly and frankly states that when he took up the duties of the chairman of the subcommittee on cotton and wool to which he was appointed he found that he was not possessed of expert information relative to the tariff requirements in this state. He did not seek the appointment but, inasmuch as it came to him, he was determined to measure up to the responsibilities although recognizing that he did not have the advantages in tariff study obtained during his long service by his predecessor, Senator McLean. In securing as his clerk and tariff aid an executive of the Connecticut Manufacturers' association he picked a man qualified. As he said, he was intent upon looking after the interests of his state, a policy which not a few senators follow and one which cannot arouse much criticism. Senator Bingham had nothing to conceal and he made no attempt to conceal it.

The nub of the whole cry that has been raised concerning the affair lies in the effort to make a great ado about nothing and use it politically. This is to be found in one of the special reports sent out from Washington concerning it when it states: "The democratic national committee this morning was busily at work preparing a verbal broadside against the Bingham-Evanson combine, and . . . the statements issued today will not be the last to be heard from the committee on this matter."

The attitude of southern senators indicated clearly enough that it was a political outcry. In the desperate fight to break down the tariff bill they were ready to jump at each and every opportunity which could be magnified and distorted. There is no offense involved, the aid had no hand in fixing the rates and his presence in the committee room was stopped as soon as attention was called to it. Even those who have had the most to say against it have had to resort to inferences without being able to point to a single harmful act. Looking after Connecticut has never been a derogatory act heretofore.

ENDING DAYLIGHT SAVING

If it were possible to carry out the practice of saving daylight throughout the year, as is done through the daylight-saving period, it would be highly gratifying to a large number of people. We have, however, reached the time of year when daylight is decreasing and while there was the time when daylight saving continued for a month longer we have reached the end of the season under present arrangements.

Daylight saving ends tonight. That means that clocks should be turned back upon retirement tonight in order that they may record eastern standard time during the coming months. Turning back is the common phrase used in reference to this change, but if we follow the advice of the clock makers it will have some consideration for the mechanism of the clock and turn ahead 11 hours instead of turning back one. The result is the same as the time is concerned but any wear to the clock is avoided.

The added hours of daylight have been put to good use in many ways during the five months they have been employed. It would gratify many if the daylight saving season had not been shortened, but more have felt that the shorter season more nearly meets popular requirements. From now on those who get up in the very early morning will find artificial light necessary in many homes, while we are also getting to the season of the year when there is an appreciation of the longer evenings inside.

Even though daylight saving was put forth as a war measure its good points have made such an excellent impression that its retention has been insisted upon, either by state law, or through local option. The way to make use of a greater part of the day has been given deserved recognition.

TRYING TO HELP THE PUBLIC

In connection with the planting of trees along the highway, the suggestion has been made that instead of neglecting them to the ornamental variety, fruit or nut-bearing trees might be set out for the benefit of the public.

Whenever such a proposition is put forth it invariably awakens certain experiences in the minds of those who have undertaken to do something for the public with results which are not by any means pleasing.

Setting out fruit and nut trees beside the road would be a fine thing from a theoretical standpoint but it is not difficult to imagine what would happen to them and their crops if we can judge by the too common treatment that is accorded to such trees on private property. In fact, the experience of Dr. R. T. Morris of New York is not much different than might be anticipated. He declares that many years ago he planted fruit trees along the boundaries of his country estate "with the idea of allowing the passer-by to help himself. The passerby turned out to be a crowd coming from various distances with bags and baskets, breaking down the branches of the trees and getting into fist fights over the gathering of the fruit before it was ripe. The outcome was that an orchard nearby to which they had been attracted had to be cut down. Similar experience followed his setting out of a couple of thousand pine trees along the roadside. They were carried off as soon as large enough for Christmas trees.

Trying to help the public has its serious handicaps and those who undertake to display their generosity in any such manner as the setting out of fruit and nut trees for the public to raid must anticipate actual raids that will have no consideration for trees, fruit or adjoining property. Some of the public will be found so determined to prevent any others from benefiting as the benefactor had planned that they will break down the trees and pull off the fruit before it is anywhere near ripe, while others would not be satisfied unless they had gathered the whole crop to the last apple or pear. There is no more consideration to be expected and no more gratitude can be looked for than is to be found at those picnic places where all kinds of debris is left scattered about as if in thanks for the use of the grounds.

SOME GOOD ADVICE

It is a good impression that Governor-General Davis has made since going to the Philippines. He has found occasions to give the Filipinos some golden advice and what he has had to say has had the right ring to it.

In view of the opportunity to produce sugar in the islands and sell it in this country it was perhaps not unusual to expect that sugar interests in the islands would plan developments so that they could find an outlet for a greater production. On the other hand, in view of the opposition which has already shown itself to the admittance of Philippine sugar free, it ought not to have escaped attention that if there was too great an amount sent here the opposition would increase. Whether it would be substantial enough to result in a tax on imports from the islands is questioned, but Governor-General Davis wisely brought it to the attention of the business men of the islands, showed them the wisdom of diversifying their production instead of specializing in one thing and pointed out that sugar was not the only thing which could be marketed here.

He was telling the islanders what has been repeatedly told to producers in this country. Crop diversification has been urged in several sections and where it has been adopted seriously it has accomplished good results. It has overcome the dependence upon just one crop, subject as it is to weather conditions, insects and other conditions. Instead of huge crops of one product, a crop that would have its effect upon the market, there is an advantage in not trying to raise more than is needed of any one thing but of raising more of all the things that are needed, thus helping to stabilize the situation instead of making it terribly one-sided.

With dependence upon sugar alone and something goes wrong there is a helpless situation for those dependent upon that production, whereas if various crops are raised it is not likely that all will be failures. The variety offers the opportunity to escape the undesirable features of putting all eggs in one basket and trusting to luck that nothing will happen to the basket until marketed.

OVERLOADING BRIDGES

How great a strain is being placed upon modern roads, and at the same time the bridges, in contrast to years ago, is well illustrated by the crashing of a Massachusetts bridge when subjected to the weight of a steam-shovel. Not so many years ago there would be no thought of moving such a piece of machinery except on the railroad. Today the highway is expected to be in such condition as to handle any kind of a load.

Whether the bridge in question was posted relative to the load that it would sustain is not known, but when a bridge that is supposed to carry a weight of five tons is subjected to one of 20 and possibly more there can be no great amount of surprise if it collapses. It is to be expected that some leeway is allowed in the fixing of the weight of load a bridge will sustain but that doesn't mean that chances ought to be taken or that the destruction of the structure should be invited by testing it out with a load four times as heavy as it should be.

Bridges in many instances were never constructed to stand any such strain, if they give way under unjustified demands it would appear to be a case of damaging public property. It shows, nevertheless, what one of the big demands is in connection with the maintenance of highways today. While it was an easy matter to estimate the size of a load that might be expected on highways a decade or two ago such is not the case today. Highways are now required to handle those loads which were once restricted to railroads and the consequence is that the construction of the cement roads and the maintenance of bridges have to be undertaken with those things in mind. But until strong bridges exist there should be no disposition to expect the impossible of those unable to sustain abnormal loads.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

One of the greatest assets that a human being can possibly possess is that of vigorous physical health. Of course he must be the possessor of many other valuable qualities if he is to be a success in life. But as success in life depends so much in the ability to keep at a thing until it is done good health is of the utmost importance. The writer of these items can speak upon this point from personal experience. The present installment of The Man Who Talks is the 500th consecutive weekly contribution which of itself emphasis one thing, and that is the writer during this period has had good health, otherwise this work could not have been done. Do we sufficiently realize what an economic waste poor health is? To say nothing of suffering that it entails and the expense to the sufferer himself, think of what it means in the loss of production. One of the great things of this life is to keep well.

Do you possess the sense of beauty? I do not mean, are you beautiful? for that is not a matter of prime importance anyway, and besides it may be a matter of wide divergence of opinion. But it does mean a great deal to a person if he has an innate sense of the beautiful whether it is seen in nature, are or human character. A person is to be pitied to whom the attractions of this material world makes no appeal whatever. How much a person lost Wednesday evening of last week, when after a rather dark and dismal day, there was a breaking of the clouds as the sun went down in a blaze of splendor that was quite unusual, if he did not have a sense of the beautiful. Every conceivable color in its infinite shadings was displayed on the blue sky as a background; it was the chromatic scale of music translated in terms of light. We are not apt to appreciate such lights because they are not new to us.

At this writing Old Sol has stepped across the equator, and let us hope, without getting burnt, for you know that the equator is a hot old place. He is now just a little more than half way between Cancer (let us hope he did not get infected) and Capricorn in his march southward. One of the best things that can be said about the old fellow is in his travels you always know just where he is to the thousandth part of a mile. That is not always true of us fallible mortals. Human beings, like Old Sol, make journeys into the southland about this time of the year or a little later, but the great difference is that while you always know to a certainty where Old Sol is you don't always know where the tourist is in Miami, Daytona and other resorts. At a certain date you can say that Sol is directly over Panama, at other times over Gogota, Quito or Lima. You are not quite so sure about the dates that men make.

One of the perplexing questions of the ages is a very live question today, and that is in regard to the proper use of the Sabbath. In every age of the world there have been various opinions. Dr. Marvin R. Vincent, an eminent Presbyterian minister of New York made this comment: "The Sabbath was instituted to be man's delight, not his burden: to be his rest in weariness and irritation of spirit. The question that faces us today is this: Are we using the Sabbath to the best advantage?: are we getting out of it all the blessings that God has lodged therein, for us nd our fellow men?" This certainly is looking at the main facts involved clearly. The main question is and always must be: that is the design of the Sabbath and secondly are we measuring up to it. For a standard we cannot take the opinions of this or that theolonian or religious sect.

It certainly needs no argument on my part to show that there has been a wide departure from the Puritan conception and practice of the Sabbath. It is perfectly evident that the Puritans read into it a severity and unreality that was not in the mind of the Master when he said, "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath." This is not intended as a reflection against the Puritans who were remarkably religious and expressed the thought prevailing at the time. But as time advanced and learning increased it was perfectly natural that a more liberal interpretation should be given to the purposes of the Sabbath. Like most revolutions the swing is to the extreme in the opposite direction. This is exactly what has been done in relation to the Sabbath. What we need is a middle ground between the ultra conservative and the loose continental Sunday.

In making the Sabbath a day of rest it exerts a powerful influence over the true home relation. One of the most baneful effects of the intensity of our modern life is seen in the weakening of the family relation. There are today so many divers and intense activities that claim the attention of the family, that the various members having different work hours, and different outside interests, hardly see one another from Monday till the following Sunday. Where so much thought and time are demanded by these outside affairs that unconsciously the members of the family drift away from one another. But a restful, quiet Sunday when they are all together tends to offset the influence of these divergent interests. The greatest possible protection to the family is a restful Sabbath. Rest was one of the great original purposes in the establishment of the Sabbath day, and we must have rest.

Men who understands the principle of psychology see clearly the need of new methods to interest men in charitable affairs. Civilization is constantly changing in its methods of approach to benevolent objects. In the past when money was needed for humanitarian needs, it was the custom to have a speaker, usually a minister, to present the object from some pulpit with the sincere hope that enough sympathy and interest had been aroused to insure a generous collection. This plan is still in vogue, because you can never do away with the magnetism and personality of the living person to arouse interest. But most missionary enterprises make use of the educative method as well, i. e. to inform the givers all about the work, its inception, progress, and results. Literature is sent to the givers showing what has been done, and if interest has been awakened by public speech and the cause seems worthy then money is forthcoming.

A good illustration of this modern method of creating missionary interest on the part of men is through "the men's dinner meeting". Those who attended such a meeting in Willimantic are emphatic in their approval of the method of creating a larger and more vital interest in the great missionary activities of our churches. So successful was the gathering that The New London Association of Congregational Churches and Ministers, through its committee has arranged for a similar meeting at the Mohican hotel, October 8th at 6.30 p. m. After the experts in missionary affairs will make speeches, and as the hearers are the intelligent and benevolent men of our churches their interest will be aroused. Here in New England when a great cause is clearly and ably presented the men usually respond generously with their subscriptions. It is an American trait to meet a great need when it is clearly seen.

UNITED STATES STILL HAS LITTLE KNOWN AREAS

The disappearance of an airplane in New Mexico, and the four-day search before its wrecked remains were found, emphasize the fact that in the heart of the United States are uninhabited areas, some even unseen for long periods by the eye of man. A bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society deals with some of these blank spots on the map of the United States.

"Uncle Sam and his states have taken fairly complete stock in the east," says the bulletin. "Surveying instruments came over with the early colonists and were put to immediate use. Since those early days lines of some sort have been run over almost every square mile of territory east of the Mississippi river.

Some Swamp Areas Little Known.

"But although the eastern states have been rather thoroughly surveyed and are on the whole heavily populated, they are not free from isolated areas. In the forests of north central Maine extensive regions, for many months of the year, still known only the hunter and trapper. In certain sections of the high Appalachians live families of isolated mountaineers whose domains are seldom visited by outsiders.

"The only actual blank spots in the eastern United States, however, are in the swamp regions of southern Florida. There are relatively large tracts that have not been surveyed or mapped.

"It is only after the Mississippi river has been crossed, going westward, that the extensive blank spots appear. Portions of northeastern Minnesota are virtual wildernesses; but the areas are not great; and, as in the remote sections of Maine, hunters and trappers traverse the country. The Bad Lands of southwestern South Dakota form a sizable area, largely barren, in which only a handful of people live; and similar areas are found in northern Nebraska, and eastern Wyoming and Montana.

"All along the Rocky mountains from Canada into New Mexico are uninhabited and practically inaccessible mountain fastnesses. In Texas there are still unfamiliar areas in the 'Big Bend' region, close to the Mexican border, where the Rio Grande river makes a loop far to the south.

"Culture Marks" Show Settled Regions

"In all this country, however, as is noticeable by reference to a large scale map, no very large areas are free from what the mapmaker calls 'culture marks': trails, roads, highways, railways, power lines, dams, canals, flumes, factories, villages, towns and cities—the evidences that man has invaded and taken for his own much of the territory.

"The really remote regions, untouched by man, can be tested by this matter of map-making. In the eastern states maps show railways and highways so close together that they form a fine-meshed network over the entire country. In the first tier of states west of the Mississippi river this network is still closely spaced; but farther to the west the lines become fewer and the unlined spaces greater. In the mountain and intermountain states are the largest areas uncrossed by 'culture lines'.

"Again the story is told by the maps showing the township surveys of the United States general land office. These square sub-divisions have been laid out in general over the surface of all the states west of the Mississippi except Texas. Texas has been excepted because none of that state's area was owned by the United States before it entered the Union, and all public lands were specifically retained by the state.

Big Blank Spot Near Mexican Border.

"Only a few relatively small desert and mountain spaces in New Mexico have not been divided into township by land office surveys. But farther west large spaces appear on the map free from these squares. One of the largest of the blank spots shows up in southwestern Arizona north of the diagonal line that marks the Mexico-Arizona boundary from the 111th meridian westward to the Colorado river. The international boundary commission has surveyed the actual boundary and an adjoining strip two miles wide, but to the north lies a region nearly 200 miles from east to west and from 30 to 50 miles wide that has not been mapped.

"This is one of the most conspicuous of the blank spots on the map of the United States. Other relatively unknown regions of considerable size (aside from Alaska, where there are extensive unexplored tracts) lie in northwestern Arizona, north of the Grand Canyon; in southern Nevada and eastern California, along the boundary between the two states; in Utah, southwest of Great Sale lake; and in southeastern Utah. The latter region was explored in 1924 by an expedition of the National Geographic society which found an area of hundreds of square miles consisting of deeply eroded clay, shale and sandstone, with the sparest of vegetation. Throughout an extensive area the explorers found not a single human inhabitant and very few animals and birds.

"The United States has literally thousands of isolated spots of small extent in which an airplane might crash and its wreckage remain unfound for weeks. But the isolation of most of these places is relative. Many are only a short distance from the beaten paths. It is significant that Mt. Taylor, on which the recent crash occurred, is only ten miles from a trans-continental railway and an improved highway, and is plainly visible from both. It is in a region that has been well mapped and is part of a forest reserve that is frequently patrolled. If a plane should crash in one of the real blank spots of the United States, its fate might remain unknown for months."

A YANKEE ABROAD

By DEWITT MacKENZIE

Wasted Bacon and Eggs.

LONDON—Enough breakfasts to feed a city of 30,000 are "thrown away" daily by travelers using British hotels, most of whom are American tourists.

The estimate is that of a travel specialist here who figures that millions of dollars are paid out annually by guests for breakfasts they never eat.

It is the custom in Great Britain to sell hotel accommodation in the form of "room and breakfast", and most of these breakfasts are eaten. But at least one out of 10 guests, usually an American accustomed to the hotel methods of his own country, engages a room without even asking if the rate includes breakfast, and pays his bill at the end of his stay without having seen any of the breakfasts for which he was automatically charged.

Embarrassing moments have been numerous in telephone history ever since wires were crossed and operators found a way to connect people with wrong numbers.

The most embarrassing recalled by Adam Scott, a pioneer in British telephone development, was the time someone "cut off" Queen Victoria.

The telephone still was a curiosity in those days, and in order to demonstrate it to the queen it was arranged to have her listen to an organ playing "God Save the Queen" 80 miles away.

Just as the momentous program started, some operator interrupted with "Must cut you off now," and to the astonishment and horror of the British telephone world the queen WAS cut off. By the time connections were straightened out again the royal listener had hung up.

Agitation here for a "reform" in men's attire has amused most Englishmen who read about it in the papers, but spokesmen for the tailors and haberdashers have not been inclined to see the funny side of it. After all, this is London, the very shrine and citadel of good form in gentlemen's wear.

"The amenities of polite society," haughtily observes the 'Draper's Record,' "cannot be neglected with impunity. There are fashions in dress for stated occasions which cannot be abandoned lightly. They stand for much more than a capricious custom and have the sanction of experience.

"The wearing of a collar may have a direct influence on conduct, and the advocates of slovenliness and ease, dignified by the name of 'dress reform,' would do well to remember it.

"If there are any cranky males ready to dine or dance in shorts and collarless shirts open at the neck, we doubt whether they will find as partners self-respecting women."

The American cocktail, banished from the land of its birth, is leading a lively life over here.

It is being praised and blamed for many things, always as the "American" cocktail. Neither its long exile from the home country nor its years of association with foreigners seems to have made anyone forget that it is an American drink. One almost expects to be asked how America manages to supply Europe's vast demand for cocktails.

A physician interested in public health has thundered against the "American" cocktail, which he says is undermining the digestion of all Europe. On the other hand, a Londoner, who prowls much among the fashionable West End shops run by fashionable young people as adventures in business says the cocktail is no longer a mere frivolous drink. It has become an aid to business, as befits a beverage from the land of big business.

Proprietors of some of these fashionable shops give cocktail parties in them, and they have found such entertainment a very profitable form of advertising. Many a guest who comes to quaff comes back to buy.

Speaking of fashions, London, long acknowledged to be the world center of fashions for men, has become of late the court of last resort in disputes over what the well dressed god should wear.

The judicial committee of the privy council, appealed to in a controversy between rival factions of a Hindu sect, has ruled that the image of a god in the Jain temple of Antanksha Parasnath at Shirpur should wear a waistband. It had been nude.

For 28 years the two factions had quarreled over the question. The case reached London as an appeal from the court of the judicial commissioner of the central provinces of India.

YOUR HEALTH

Earache.

By Wm. B. Wright, Jr., M. D.
Long Beach, Cal.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Earache is a symptom of trouble in the ear which is accompanied, as a rule, by impairment of hearing, noises in the head described as ringing of bells, or hissing, as of escaping steam or rushing water.

Earache primarily is caused by one of several things; in order of frequency and importance the cause is infection, either of the middle ear cavity or the soft ear canal anterior to the ear drum.

A middle ear infection is potentially a very serious affair. Infection of the soft ear canal usually carries with it no potential danger. It is very important when the ear first begins to ache to call your physician in order that he may determine early in the process of infection whether the pain and other symptoms in the ear are due to the formation of tiny boils or abscesses in the soft exterior canal or whether the pain with accompanying symptoms is due to infection of the middle ear cavity.

The middle ear cavity is a small bony cavity entirely surrounded by dense bone except the anterior wall which is formed by the ear drum.

Infection in the middle ear cavity in the greatest number of such cases is caused by germs travelling up a small tube which begins on the wall of the throat back of the nose and connects directly with the middle ear cavity, the infection having originated in the nasal cavities or throat usually from diseased nasal sinuses or tonsils and adenoids or both.

The germs attack the delicate lining of the middle ear cavity and this region is virgin territory for subsequent propagation of bacteria and destruction of tissue. As they multiply and increase their activities there is an accumulation of pus and serum with consequent pressure on and inflammation of the ear drum which causes the pain.

The middle ear connects directly with the mastoid process which is a bone containing many small cells similar to a honey-comb and is located on the skull just back of the ear.

If the middle ear infection is promptly differentiated from the other most frequent thing that causes earache, namely, boils in the external soft canal and is promptly and correctly treated, most of these conditions clear up without permanent impairment of hearing and without progressing to become a menace to health and possibly life.

It is important therefore that instead of resorting to self-treatment that your physician be called without delay after the initial pain or ache in order to definitely determine the cause of the earache.

Sunday Morning Talk

Christ Our Friend

Christ is our friend. Our very best friend. Always loyal, always true. Always loves us more than we could love Him. Always understands, never misjudges us. He has all the qualities of a friend at their best. He sympathizes with us in our sorrows. He helps and strengthens us in our difficulty. He helps us when all others fail. He cheers us in seasons of discouragement. He inspires us with the highest ideals. He increases our joys.

We are told how the soldiers of Napoleon admired their leader and emperor. One of his men was wounded by a bullet entering his breast just above the heart. The surgeon was probing the wound and as the courageous man felt the knife near his heart, he exclaimed: "A little deeper and you will find the emperor." Have we got Christ the Supreme Friend, in our hearts like that. How much more worthy He is of our very best. If our hearts were laid open, would it be that they should find the name of our Great Captain deeply engraven there. It was said of a very devout Christian that he had thought so much upon Christ and His love that it had become the greatest thing in his life. His life seemed to radiate the love of his master. Oh, that we might love like that and live like that with our best friend! He is worthy of our best —infinitely worthy of it, for He is "the chiefest among ten thousand" and the one "altogether lovely."

"How sweet the name of Jesus sounds in a believer's ear."

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—If you look in the dictionary, as the Bystander had to do, you will find that casein is "a proteid of the nucleoalbumin group precipitated from the milk of various animals."

But that blunt ex-man o'warsman, Senator Howell of Nebraska, was not going to let anybody have any doubts about what was actually being talked about one day when the "Case of Casein" might have been an apt title for a narrative of a battle of those rival tariff giants, Borah of Idaho and Reed of Pennsylvania.

"Casein," allowed the sailor-farmer from Nebraska, "is nothing but cottage cheese."

And for some three hours or more and for tens of thousands of words, the battle of the duty on cottage cheese raged unchecked in the senate.

Borah started it, merely incidentally to his opening fire against the tariff bill framed by the republican majority.

In failure to grant the full 5 cents a pound increase of duty, he charged, the tariff makers had denied American skimmed milk producers their place in the protective tariff sun.

Reed countered with the declaration that the senate committee, in granting a cent a pound increase, had given four-fold the protection justified by the differential between Argentine and American costs of production. No industrial rate had been thus favored, he added.

Wrench Thrower.

The war of words between Borah and Reed and half a dozen others went on apace; yet if you read the record closely you will note that it always was Seadog (retired) Howell rather than Borah who threw the best aimed monkey wrenches.

What allowance, Howell demanded of Reed, had been made for the cost of skimmed milk in the Argentine as compared to its cost in the United States?

Reed said the tariff commission had been unable to find out.

Howell promptly declared the Argentine price was eight-tenths of a cent a gallon. He challenged every defender of the committee rate to say what price American farmers ought to get per gallon of skimmed milk, and got no direct replies. So he answered himself.

"It is worth 2 cents a gallon merely to deliver skimmed milk to the nearest station," he said, and nobody disputed him.

It also was developed that Chairman Smoot of the finance committee, a great champion of protective tariff, had voted in committee for the 5-cent increase on cottage cheese, which, in industry, turns to the coated paper upon which most magazines are printed.

Would Publish Votes.

"If we could have the committee votes of the senator from Utah incorporated in the bill, it would be an infinitely better bill," said Borah.

Robinson of Arkansas demanded publication of all committee votes.

"It is fair," he demanded, "to have senators proud of their records in committee sit silent now and permit the senator from Utah to be glorified and wear his halo without question?"

Apparently it was, for objections by Smoot and Warren of Wyoming blocked the Borah-Robinson attempted raid of the committee vote records.

"Well," said Borah, resignedly, "there probably will be developed from time to time the information we might have had all at once."

And all of this is extracted from "The Case of Casein," in which, again according to Howell, American farmers have at stake but $2,500,000 all told.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Peter Wishes He Had Kept Still.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

You'll find it is the law of fate
That vain regrets are all too late.
—Peter Rabbit.

Little Mrs. Peter had joined Peter Rabbit outside the Briar Patch. In the Briar Patch, Flip the Terrier was whining and yelping as the brambles were scratching him. He had just chased little Mrs. Peter out and he was trying to make his way out himself.

"Now you've done it, Peter Rabbit!" said little Mrs. Peter crossly. "If you had kept still he never would have found us and he wouldn't have tried to get in there."

Peter chuckled. "Don't worry, my dear," said he. "This is fun. When he comes out, we go in. When he goes in, we come out. I haven't had so much fun for a long time. You just stay with me. By and by he'll get tired and give up and go away."

"Just the same, I don't like it," protested little Mrs. Peter. "Who's that coming across the Green Meadows?"

Little Mrs. Peter's voice had a startled note in it and Peter turned quickly to look. "As I live, it is Bowser the Hound!" he exclaimed. "Now, what is that fellow coming over here for? Well, there's one thing about it, he can't get into the dear Old Briar Patch."

"No," retorted little Mrs. Peter, "but he can stay on the outside while that other dog is inside. Then what are we going to do?"

Peter scratched a long ear with a long hindfoot. He was already beginning to wish that he had kept still in the first place. "Perhaps," said he hopefully, "Bowser won't come 'way over here."

But Bowser did. He had heard the barking of Flip and he had come over to investigate. Now, Bowser dearly delights to hunt Peter Rabbit, but Bowser is wise. He knows very well

"Now you have done it, Peter Rabbit," said Little Mrs. Peter crossly.

that he cannot get into the dear Old Briar Patch and not get his long ears torn by brambles and his face scratched. He knows, too, that inside the Briar Patch he cannot move around freely. So never has he bothered Peter Rabbit when Peter was safely at home. But this was different. Flip was inside the Briar Patch and Flip was small. Bowser was quick to see that two of them might do what one couldn't do alone.

"Bow, wow! You drive Peter Rabbit out and I'll catch him!" barked Bowser.

"He is out!" barked Flip in return. "There's another Rabbit with him."

"That must be Mrs. Peter," replied Bowser. Where are they?"

"Just run around the Briar Patch and you'll find them," replied Flip. "I'll wait for them in here."

So Bowser started around the dear Old Briar Patch and in a moment or two his wonderful nose had found the fresh scent of Peter and little Mrs. Peter. "Bow, wow, wow!" roared Bowser, as he took up their trail. Peter and little Mrs. Peter ran around to the other side of the dear Old Briar Patch, but just then Flip poked his head out in front of them. They turned to run back, but there was Bowser, coming around the end of the dear Old Briar Patch. Flip scrambled out. Peter and Mrs. Peter were now between Flip and Bowser. How Peter did wish then that he hadn't been tempted to tease Flip! How he did wish that he had kept perfectly still when Flip had first appeared!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Oliver Dorous An Indian

Mr. Editor:—Will you kindly rectify the statement that Oliver Dorous is of Negro parentage as I read in The Bulletin of Sept. 25. He is an Indian. He did not apply for a license at Hampton at all. He got his license at Woodstock and was married from there. Furthermore, it was the girl that asked him to marry her instead of Oliver asking her. Out of the kindness of his heart he did so to save her from being mistreated.

POETRY

Immortal Autumn

I speak this poem now with grave and level voice
In praise of autumn of the far horn winding fall
I praise the flower barren fields the clouds the tall
Unanswering branches where the wind makes sullen noise

I praise the fall it is the human season
now
No more the foreign sun does meddle at our earth
Enforce the green and thaw the frozen soil to birth
Nor winter yet weigh all with allaspe
the pine bough

But now in autumn with the black and outcast crows
Share we the spacious world the whispering year is gone
There is more room to live now the once secret dawn
Comes late by daylight and the dark unguarded goes

Between the mutinous brave burning of the leaves
And winter's covering of our hearts with his deep snow
We are alone there are no evening birds
we know
The naked moon the tame stars circle at our eaves

It is the human season on this sterile air
Do words outcarry breath the sound goes on and on
I hear a dead man's cry from autumn
long since gone
I cry to you beyond upon this bitter air.

—Archibald MacLeish in the Yale Review.

Prognostication

A hundred years ago the world
Was quite a different place.
Life was more calm; folks did not live
In an incessant race.
There were no trains, no telephones,
No dreams of radio,
And few folks travelled fifty miles
It took so long to go.

A hundred years from now! What will
This old world be like then?
So many wonders we see now;
With more beyond our ken!
Then life will be one constant rush,
With little charm, I fear,
A mad race of the human race—
But I shall not be here.

—Somerville Journal.

A dash of sugar develops these flavors

IT IS one of the wonders of today—thanks to improved canning methods—that we can now have the whole year 'round practically every fruit and vegetable grown. Serve these healthful foods daily and don't forget that a dash of sugar here and there while you are warming the foods for serving will improve their deliciousness and all their appetizing qualities.

Another wonder of modern growing, shipping and marketing is the great number of months that so many fresh fruits and vegetables are now "in season." The fresh fruit and vegetable season is now longer than ever and the modern cannery fills all gaps with delicious full-vitamin-bearing foods. In cooking fresh vegetables, in making salad dressings, in preparing stewed fruits, in serving fresh tart fruits and berries or fruit punches—remember always that sugar is the supreme flavorer of these healthful foods. Expert cooks explain to us that sugar does more than sweeten. It develops entirely new and delightful flavors in the foods.

Serve fruits and vegetables daily. Serve milk drinks and milk desserts. Add a little sugar also in preparing meat dishes, gravies and soups, and notice the better flavor. Sugar is the supreme seasoning. Good food promotes good health. The Sugar Institute.

ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH IS OBSERVING 50TH ANNIVERSARY

St. Patrick's church on Broadway, which celebrates its 50th anniversary with a high mass of thanksgiving at 8 o'clock this (Saturday) morning, is now the church home for a parish of over 4,000, with over 400 children in the parochial school, under the pastoral guidance of Rt. Rev. Msgr. M H. May, Rev. Myles P. Galvin and Rev. John J. Reilly, curates.

Monsignor May has been pastor at St. Patrick's since 1921 and in March, 1925, was honored by his elevation as a monsignor of the Roman Catholic church. He began his pastorate here on June 15, 1921, coming to Norwich from St. Bernard's church, Rockville, where he had been pastor for 11 years, following a pastorate of 14 years at St. Andrew's church, Colchester. Previous to this he had been curate at Middletown and New Britain, after serving as assistant at St Joseph's cathedral in Hartford, which was his first appointment after his ordination, Dec. 20, 1884, at Grand seminary, Montreal, where he pursued his theological studies after taking his classical course at Boston college. Monsignor May is a native of New London.

Rev. Father Galvin, senior curate, was ordained by Bishop John J. Nilan in Hartford on June 24, 1913, and the next month came to St. Patrick's church, where he has given his entire service in the priesthood. He is a native of Waterbury and took his preparatory course at St. Thomas seminary, Hartford, his philosophical Brighton, Mass., and his theological studies at St. Mary's seminary, Baltimore.

NORWICH PARTY PENETRATED WILDS OF CANADIAN WOODS ON HUNTING TRIP

A fishing and hunting party which made a trip into the Canadian woods has just returned with a story of particular interest regarding the sport they enjoyed and some of the privations which accompanied their wanderings in the wilds. The party consisted of Fred Dugas, of Taftville, Ernest DuBrueil, of Plainfield, Albert Murphy, Dr. William T. Driscoll and Dr. James J. Donahue of this city. They were also accompanied by Dr. William Wener, resident physician of the Backus hospital, as far as Montreal, which is his home town.

They left Norwich at 5:30 on a Sunday morning and arrived in Montreal at six o'clock the same evening. While the rest of the party was in the woods, Dr. Wener visited with his mother, who lives in Monteal. He met them in Montreal on the return trip and came home wfth them.

As a fitting prelude to the going-in, Dr. Wener took the party to the Princess theater in Montreal where one of the movie talkies shown was the pathetic story of "Evangeline" from the immortal poem of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

For 200 Miles Above Montreal

Early Monday morning the party set out for the lakes in the country beyond the Mattawan, which is some 200 miles or more above Montreal. From thence on is an unbroken wilderness to the Hudson bay county. On the journey upward, they passed through the little settlement which was the home of Louis Cyr, the famous world's strong man, whose grave is in this little town and beside him rests the grandfather of one of the members of the party, Fred Dugas.

The party was to have made connections with Rev. Frederick Desureault of Taftville, Rev. Uiric Bellerose of Putnam, and some other members of their party at LaBarriere, but they miscued through some accident and failed to connect, although one of the members of the Norwich party stated that the party of clergymen had just missed them by a few hours at this outskirt of civilization.

The party stayed over night at this latter outpost and proceeded on to St. Agnes DuLac. There they camped for the night and met the guides whom they had previously arranged to have meet them at this place. After driving some miles on anything but what might be called a highway, the machines were left in the woods until the return of the party. Three canoes were taken aboard at the latter stopping place and from thence on, they proceeded by portage and canoe and covered a distance of from 90 to 100 miles.

Guides Were Tipped Off

Word had evidently been passed on to the guides that they were going to handle a party who were somewhat in the habit of hunting and fishing and for them not to be afraid to put them up against the real thing so that they would have something to think about for a long time. It was thoroughly agreed at the end of the journey that everybody was well satisfied and that they got the thrill of their lives. They first fished at Lake Desisles. They put up in a hunter's camp on an island in this lake, and got their first taste of what they were going up against. There were two bunks in this cabin and the tenderfoot element of the party were extended the courtesy of using those, while the guides slept on the floor. From thence by portage or canoe, they proceeded to Lake Trembley. This covered a distance of eight or nine miles by woods and by an almost unbroken trail, which had been more or less obliterated because the week had been one of almost constant rain. On part of the trail, they were interrupted by ponds made by beavers which had dammed the streams and were it not for the fact that they had their canoes, they would never had been able to reach Lake Trembley. It was a most interesting sight to the party to see the intelligent type of work done by these little denizens of the forest, and to see the amount of water which was held back by the activities of these little builders.

When the men arrived at Lake Trembley, they were all ready to agree that this was a type of outing which none of them had ever experienced before but from a fishing standpoint, it was worth the effort. It is undoubtedly one of the finest trout lakes in that region and the number of trout ranging from one to five pounds which can be caught in that lake is unbelievable. They are of the golden trout and square-tail variety-most beautiful specimens.

Through Swamps and Thickets

From Lake Trembley part of the outfit proceeded on to a trapper's camp on Boutelle river. As the baggage had been left behind at Lake Des Isles some of the party had to go back with the guides and help to transport it back the next day. That left the members who went on to Boutelle river without any blankets and practically no food. From Lake Trembley to this trapper's camp was a distance of some three miles or more by hike and by canoe. They started for this camp late in the afternoon and darkness overtook them before they reached it. It was a hike through swamps and thickets which no one in the party had been up against before. For nearly two miles, they had to tramp through a swamp more than knee-deep in mud, some of them not having even rubber boots on. This condition was brought about by a sudden rise in the streams below on account of the heavy rains. The party that went forward was composed of the guide, four men and one canoe. On account of the conditions that he was up against, the guide was not sure that he could make the trip. Finally they agreed to have him take two forward and make an attempt to reach the camp. The other two stood in a swamp in water above their knees for more than an hour in darkness waiting for the return of the guide. Night was upon them and it had begun to snow. When the guide came back, they were taken aboard and landed safely at this trapper's hut. The guide told them that in this swamp during the season, he had shot 12 bears and that it was perfect moose country. He said that one of the bears he shot weighed 600 pounds. Of course, standing in the quagmire in the midst of a swamp several miles around in deep darkness and with thoughts of the number of bear that were shot there last season, was not the most consoling feeling in the world for a crowd of tenderfoot hunters.

One of the men said it was the worst swamp that he had ever seen in his life. Every step that they took practically took the rubber boots off their feet, the suction was so great in the quagmire. One of the men became so disgusted with it that he left the boots in the swamp and proceeded stocking-footed as his feet were soaking wet anyway.

As they saw the traper's hut over on the hillside, the lines of Whittier ran through the mind of one of the members of the party, "Once again we sat down to mooss and samp, in trapper's hut and Indian camp." But it might be added that the diet was even simpler than that. When the men reached the trapper's camp, it was a small log cabin eight by ten and contained a stove, some tea and some coffee which had been there for about six months and both seemed to have lost all their flavor. The guide had some raw pork and trout and fried them up for support and made some tea out of the tea which was in the camp. One of the members of the party said, "this would remind you of home, it is so different!"

Night Without Blankets

That night everybody slept with their clothes on in the camp, as they had no blankets or other provisions to take care of them. The next night the rest of the party came up with the blankets and provisions but the size of the camp was anything but commodious—eight by ten, with eight men to sleep in it. There was one bunk which two of the men occupied and the rest of them took the floor. It was impossible to leave the door of the cabin open because it would freeze the men on the floor and when the door was shut with the stove going, they were roasted. One fellow in the middle of the night said, "Open that door—it's 190 in here." But nobody opened the door and everybody slept and stifled.

The next morning the party had breakfast of fried trout and pork and tea without any milk or sugar—besides their backs full of ridges where they had slept on the floor logs of the cabin.

One of the guides told the party that last winter he was a few miles from this trapper's camp and unable to make the camp—so he built a fire and put up his lean-to. During the night a pack of eight wolves howled around him and he succeeded in shooting one of them which weighed 112 pounds, showing that the size of the timber wolf makes him rather a formidable animal of the wilds—but they do not generally attack unless driven to it by desperation.

Wonderful Trout Fishing

In the morning when the party left this trapper's camp to proceed on the journey they carried their canoes to the river and, as the weather was windy and the water rough, the guides were afraid to proceed in their individual canoes with so many aboard and a large mass of baggage. So they lashed the canoes together and sailed several miles down the river until they stopped at another landing where they unlashed the canoes and made another portage through the woods to what is known as Pike lake. Here they fished for pike, breaking the program of trout fishing. After they had fished to their heart's content in this place, they picked up their canoes and went back to the Maitawan. They crossed this river and towards evening made another carry of several miles into the woods to another lake. This lake seemed to have no particular name but the guides called it Trout lake and it was certainly true to that name. The party in a couple of hours caught over a hundred trout—so much that everybody was satiated with trout fishing—and then they quit—thoroughly satisfied that they had all the trout that they would need on this journey. In fact the trout was so easy to catch that it really spoiled the fun of trout fishing. There was no such thing as anticipation in this fishing because there was a fish on the end of the line almost constantly. Everybody gave up, satisfied that they had plenty.

They stayed at this camp a couple of nights, as it was more comfortable than some of the previous ones. On the morning of their departure, they dropped their canoes into the upper reaches of the Mattawan and after having fished in a couple of other trout lakes which yielded trout fishing equally as productive, they began to think of making the journey homeward—at least, they began to think of making a start on the journey homeward.

They were then somewhat over 20 miles from their automobiles. They piled their baggage into their canoes and sailed down the Mattawan, struck a portage and cut across a peninsula which saved them five miles of canoeing—and then got aboard their canoes again.

While crossing the peninsula, they came across a country which was prolific with blueberries. They could be plucked from the bushes by the handfuls and maybe the boys didn't glut themselves on these blueberries. This is the section where the bears satisfy their appetites on berries. It is a beautiful country and that is about the only type of fruit that the crowd had on the entire trip.

Back to Automobiles

After several hours of portage and canoeing, they finally arrived at their destination and found their automobiles just exactly where they had left them—speaking well for the honesty of the individuals who reside in this country.

The guides always seem to be provided with a small axe and one of the blessings of the trip was the speed with which they could knock down a tree and get a camp fire started anywhere the party saw fit to stop. And a good fire, even under almost any disadvantage, is certainly cheering and comforting. The guides can cook a meal of fish and pork in jig-time—but after you have had fish for supper, then breakfast, dinner and supper, and that again for a number of days, you are pretty nearly ready to feel as though you could stand a change of diet. When in one of the equipped camps, the guide did some more elaborate cooking and made some fried cakes that tickled the palates of the fishermen.

During the trip, most of the men carried revolvers or rifles, but did not have any special call to use them—although two moose were shot in the neighborhood by another party which had been out some distance below.

Taftville Cook Sets Up Dinner

A rather interesting incident occurred on the sail down the Mattawan where the Shawinigan Power Co. is building a tremendous dam and shoving the water back to make a lake some 6½ miles long. Along the bank of this river, the party came upon a couple of tents; one of them was a commissary tent, small in size, which took care of some men who were up on the river running the baggage for the power company over the rapids. When the men reached this camp—after being out for somewhat over a week and having been put to the test of endurance on fish and pork feed, to say nothing of hiking through rough country—they had appetites which needed no coaxing. The man in charge of the camp, strange to say, was a man by the name of Racine who came from Taftville—and the dinner which he provided for the party was something that would whet the appetite of the most fastidious. Maybe the boys didn't appreciate it—it was fit for a king and it was the finest feed which they had had on the entire journey.

"As you get well up into the Canadian country," said one of the party, "you cannot help being impressed by the rather simple but pretty little settlements that dot the hillsides as you go along. The first structure which you are impressed with is the little church with its cross. As the country is entirely French-Canadian, you will appreciate the necessity of being able to speak the language. The three guides who had charge of the party were French-Canadian—two of them not speaking a word of English—but as some of the members of the party were very versatile in the use of the French language, the party had no trouble in making themselves understood throughout the entire trip.

"The guides were men in their early 30's. All of them were married, two of them the father of six children and another the father of five—showing that no race suicide exists in this rural country. The lessons of increase and multiply were inculcated within them and that spirit still exists since the olden days. They are still true to the principles of their kinfolks from the days of Gabriel and Evangeline up to the present time.

"Whoever passed the word on to the guides to give the boys a good rough time and let them know that they had seen something, certainly put one over on the party. While it is agreed by all that they would not have missed that trip for a thousand dollars—still they would not go through it again for five thousand. But the feeling exists that they are going to go back and fish in that section again, but they are going to do it in a way that will not incur the hardships which they experienced on this one."

DIVORCES GRANTED TO TWO NORWICH PETITIONERS

Belle Elkin Norman of Lyme, a member of the artist's colony there and an artist of note was on Friday granted a divorce from John Thomas Norman of England on the grounds of desertion alleged since 1904. TENTATIVE PLANS FOR BOY SCOUT ORGANIZATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 27—At a meeting in the chamber of commerce rooms, tentative plans were discussed for the organization of a district committee to have representation on the local council of the eastern Connecticut Boy Scout association with headquarters at Norwich. Local representatives attending the meeting were Frank P. Fenton, president of the chamber of commerce, John J. O'Rourke, secretary, Attorney E. Frank Bugbee, president of the Exchange club, Gerard E. Loiselle, secretary of Rotary, E. Leslie Nichols, representing the Lions club, James H. Hurley, representing the Merchant's bureau, Scoutmaster John Harvey, representing the Willimantic Boy Scout troop.

The meeting was an enthusiastic one. Scoutmaster John Harvey urged that a local committee be formed to serve as a community sponsoring group for the support, maintenance, and enlargement of scouting in many institutions. The representatives of the different civic clubs will report back to their organizations, and if favorable comment is made, the district committee will be organized. It is thought that a community district committee will insure the growth of scouting by providing for troop organization, training, camping, civic service, and financing for from five to ten troops.

Charles Colt, president of the local council representing all eastern Connecticut, H. D. Larrabee, chairman of territorialextension, Henry Lyon, Scout Commissioner A. L. Peale and Scout Executive Sellman from Norwich explained the proposed organization.

GAVE ILLUMINATING TALK ON EUROPEAN CONDITIONS

Rose of New England lodge, No. 98 and Ladies auxiliary, No. 40, Independent Order of B'nai Brith, held a joint social at the B'nai Brith rooms on Thursday evening. The gathering was an open meeting permitting non-members to attend and about 150 people were present.

Max Hanover presided and opened the meeting by singing America followed by Hatikwah. The speakers of the evening were Dr. Boris J. Sohn, who recently returned from a professional study trip to Vienna, Austria, and Rabbi Ira Eisenstein of the Jewish Theological seminary of New York, who came to Norwich to take charge of the high holiday services to be held at the Community house.

Dr. Sohn was the first speaker. In introducing Dr. Sohn, Mr. Hanover said that the observations which Dr. Sohn made while traveling in European countries will illustrate, by way of comparison, the comfortable and advanced life of the people in the United States and that America's civilized life and her contribution to the happiness of her citizens stands on a higher plane than in any other country or any other time in history.

Dr. Sohn began with the remark that after being away for a time from the United States, one has a sensation of enjoying a real happy home when he returns to America. Among his interesting observations Dr. Sohn said that in the number of European countries which he had visited, Germany, although the greatest sufferer from the costly war, seems to show the greatest spirit of recuperation and rehabilitation. The German people are working at a feverish pace to retrieve their losses. In contrast with Germany, Austria, shows a very depressing picture of poverty. From the great empire of Austria Hungary the country has been reduced to a nation of 6,000,000 people. Begging in the streets of an Austrian city seems to be a prolific profession. The lot of the women in Austria is deplorable, especially the women in Vienna, who before the war were known as intellectuals and who are now compelled to do menial work. A marked characteristic of the people in Vienna, the speaker said, is their indolence; and the majority of people not being profitably employed spend much time in the coffee house which is a national institution.

Dr. Sohn also said that there are a large number of American tourists visiting Vienna and other European cities, and that the European people feel that the American dollar is the most consistent token of value and therefore they worship the American dollar and covet it to an extent that is astonishing. The popularity of the American traveler is such that all people serving in hotels and restaurants have learned to speak fairly understandable English.

Dr. Sohn portrayed the poverty of Poland by citing the fact that he had visited a railroad station which was only a large bare room without a particle of furniture and that the poor travelers were lying on the floor dressed in rags and tatters. The terrible poverty of the people is due to the great losses they sustained in the World war and to the large armies which are maintained by their government.

Rabbi Ira Eisenstein was the next speaker, and in very eloquent language addressed himself to the purpose of his coming to Norwich. The rabbi quoted profusely from the Bible to illustrate his talk. In one of his figures of speech Rabbi Eisenstein gave a learned definition of the conception of God and the unity of man. He elucidated upon the essential democracy of man as described in the scriptures, which maintains that all people are the descendants of Adam and therefore have a common ancestor. He made a plea to his listeners to guard against the new heresies of the conception of God made by irresponsible writers whose opinions do not deserve any respect. The speaker also touched upon the aspiration for the Jewish home land in Palestine under the mandate of Great Britain, and that it is now being threatened by those who belittle the sacrifices which the Jewish pioneers are making in Palestine. The rabbi closed with a plea for upholding the synagogue which is being threatened, because anything that stands still in a world that moves is threatened, and that in order to maintain the synagogue it must be an institution not only of worship, but also an institution of learning, and a source of philanthropy, an institution which will bring God into the life of the people and imbue in them friendliness, sociability, an ideal of service which will radiate to all people in the community.

Rabbi Eisenstein's address was received with hearty applause. After the meeting the women of the auxiliary served refreshments.

LOUGHRAN UNABLE TO TELL WHAT HIT HIM BUT CONFIDENT HE CAN WIN NEXT TIME

(By Edward J. Neil, Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The thrills that come when Sailor John Sharkey rages through a ring firing leather held a hangover thrill today for the 42,879 of the faithful who paid $320,365.26 last night to see the Boston bomber knock out Tommy Loughran.

Where fandom gathered arguments arose as to what happened to Loughran in the third round when a right hand punch dropped him for a count of five but let him rise and lose on a technical knockout while standing senseless in a neutral corner gazing smiling out into the astunded crowd. With Sharkey back home again in Boston, only Tommy himself could offer authoritative testimony and he hadn't the faintest idea of what actually occurred.

Tommy did know, however, that he must start all over again in his quest of heavy-weight honors while Sharkey now a "$100,000 fighter" can wait until next March at Miami, Fla., to make his bid for the title Gene Tunney discarded. Loughran, despite his defeat will be given a chance to redeem himself and will box either Phil Scott, the giant Briton, Jimmy Maloney, of Boston, or Otto Von Porat, the Chicago clouter, in the garden Nov. 22.

The elimination rounds to find Sharkey's opponent also will include Tuffy Griffiths, Sioux City youngster now waging war in sensational fashion, and any other leading heavyweights who want action. Tuffy will box an opponent not yet selected in the garden Nov. 18 to start the ball rolling. Max Schmeling, the German who whipped Paulino Uzcudun, will not be sought unless he voluntarily returns from Europe and settles his difficulties with various boxing commissions.

Sharkey signed a contract for the Miami match when he agreed to terms for last night's go. Because of the high value now placed on his services he will not box at the garden this winter.

Loughran, far from discouraged even at the persistent report this morning of his death, will not return to the light heavyweight division where he retired as champion. Admitting only the possibility that he was "dead from the shoulders up," Tommy agreed even to deny his demise over the radio tonight.

Tommy took the defeat philosophically but with the attitude that he should be taken over someone's knee and soundly spanked for getting hit as he did.

"I can't understand how any fighter in the world could hit me on the side of the head with a right hand hard enough to stun me," he said shaking his head. "I've fought every good middleweight and light heavyweight of the present era, including Gene Tunney and Harry Greb, and none of them ever did that.

"As far as I can reconstruct the picture, I hunched my shoulder and drew in my chin to escape that right but it hit me high on the temple. I don't remember another thing until I was under the stands walking to my dressing room. I wouldn't get hit with another punch like that in a lifetime.

"I'm not going to turn into a mushy sportsman and say how great a fighter Sharkey is. My opinion of him has not changed. He could beat me only by a chance punch and was lucky enough to put it over. He didn't hurt me up to that time. I planned to let him punch himself out in the first ten rounds and then beat him in the last five.

"I am absolutely certain that if we were fighting again tonight I'd give him a sound licking."

YALE TROUNCES SCRUBS IN PRACTICE SESSION

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The Yale bowl today resounded to the thuds of footballs for the first time this year, when the Yale varsity, holding its first real secret session, defeated the scrubs, 21 to 0, in a scrimmage lasting 25 minutes.

Previous "secret" sessions this year have been held at Yale field, which is enclosed by a wire fence.

The scrimmage saw Snead, who has been nursing a sprained ankle, in action today. Playing left halfback, Snead got off to a good start scoring two of the three touchdowns. Austin, who replaced him later in the scrimmage, made the third touchdown; while Miller, right halfback, contributed the other three points after the touchdowns by the plunges through the line.

Wilson was used as quarterback in the varsity lineup replacing Booth; while Dunn played fullback.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Sept. 27.—(AP)—A light signal drill and practice on fundamentals completed Army's preparations today, for the opening football game tomorrow against Boston university. Three teams were used in the signal drill and dummy scrimmage.

MISS HICKS TO MEET MISS QUIER IN CANADIAN FINALS

LANCASTER, Ont., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Helen Hicks, long driving New York girl, marched into the final round of the Canadian Women's Open Golf championship and left by the wayside, Glenna Collett, United States champion.

The 19-year-old Long Island star outlasted the American champion in a thrilling 20-hole match and will meet Edith Quier, of Reading, Pa., in the final round tomorrow. Miss Quier eliminated Mrs. Stewart Hanley of Detroit, 2 and 1, in the other semi-final round match.

The downfall of Miss Collett, coming as it did on the eve of her defense of the United States championship at Detroit next week, came as a shock to golfdom. Although Miss Hicks has been playing sensational golf for the last few months, few believed she could halt Miss Collett's march toward her third Canadian crown.

As a matter of fact the United States champion appeared a certain winner as late as the 13th hole, when Miss Hicks was three down. The Long Island girl, however, never quit trying and an amazing 33 on the incoming nine enabled her to square the match and then to win it on the second extra hole with a four to Miss Collett's five.

That 33 was a mark that any leading male player might well be proud of over the 6,200 yard course of the Hamilton club. With a 39 on her outgoing nine Miss Hicks finished the first 18 holes with an approximate medal score of 72 to Miss Collett's 75.

Four one put greens enabled Miss Collett to take a three-hole lead on the first nine which she covered in 36, four under women's par. The first three holes were halved but Miss Collett took the fourth, fifth and eighth and halved the others to be three up. Miss Hicks herself was playing good golf, taking a 39, one under par, but she could not match the brilliant performance of the United States champion.

Miss Collett dropped the, tenth hole, halved the next two and then went three up again when she holed out at the short 13th with a deuce. Miss Hicks reduced her rival's advantage to two up again on the next hole but the next two were halved, leaving Miss Collett dormie two.

Here the older player faltered badly. She needed seven to get down at the 17th where Miss Hicks holed out with 5 and then allowed the Long Island girl to square the match at the 18th where Miss Hicks was down in four.

The first extra hole was halved in 5's but Miss Collett again was in trouble on the 20th, needing 5 while Miss Hicks was getting down in four to win hole and match.

RECORD SET IN BACON INTER-CLASS CROSS-COUNTRY

A new record was set Friday afternoon in the first Bacon academy inter-class track meet of the season when Mortimer Krupnic, a freshman, ran the three-mile course north of the village in 17.37 minutes. Fred Kopp, Jr., came in second with a time of 18.23 minutes while Hyman Falk was third with a time of 20.05 minutes.

The freshmen were represented by Krupnic, and Chmiel; the sophomores by Prokopchuk and Miller; the Juniors by Zenowitz, Falk, Fedus, Gregory and Wallach, and the seniors by Kopp and Jaffe.

At 2:23 o'clock, the contestants were off over their three-mile course extending from the junction of North Main street and Amston avenue north to the Packwoodville corner, then west to the Miller four corners and then south over the old Hebron road to the Lonsdale property on North Main street. Although Krupnic, a freshman, won with a decisive lead over the other contestants, the juniors scored the most points. The freshmen made 13 points, the sophomores 6 points, the juniors 24 points and the seniors 11 points. Principal J. W. Goodrich was the starter and David Horwitz and Samuel Majofes were the judges. A large number of the academy students were in attendance. The Bacon boys feel much elated over their new record of 17:37 minutes for the 3-mile course because the strong Chapman Tech track team holds the previous record on the local course of 17:50 minutes.

Manager Jaffe of the Bacon team is now negotiating with the managers of track teams at Stonington high school and at Chapman Tech, New London and in view of the unusually strong local team some interesting and closely contested track meets are expected during the coming weeks.

Red Arrows Challenge

The Red Arrows would like to play any football team averaging 14 years of age. If accepted answer through this paper.

You've all heard the expression about a man being up a tree, figuratively speaking.

Well, it seems there's a man in our town who was literally up a tree for two hours the other afternoon before he was rescued by the neighbors.

The man, a prominent local barber, has an apple tree on which grow some luscious fruit. Like Adam of old, the man was tempted with the fruit.

As we all know the reddest apples grow on the highest part of the tree and nothing but the very reddest and best apples would satisfy this man's taste.

Being a barber he was used to working on the top of things but always with both feet on the ground. However, he must have the apples and the only way to get them was to climb for them. Which he did.

Up and up he went until he was precariously perched on the topmost branches of the tree. The apples were within easy reach and he soon had acquired a goodly number.

And then he looked at the ground below, yes, far below, for it was a very high tree. And as is common with some people he was seized with a deadly fear, a fear that caused him to grab tightly to the limbs and hang on for dear life.

He could not go higher, neither would his unsteady legs permit him to descend. He was stuck there, the soft blue sky overhead and the hard green earth beneath. Members of his family were summoned to his rescue.

No ladder long enough could be found on the premises, so a canvass of the neighborhood was made to get one that would reach him. It was a good two hours before a suitable ladder was found by which he could be rescued.

But it was a very trying two hours and the man avows that the next time he wants apples he'll either shake the tree or wait for them to fall off. It seems that this same man once went up on a roof and had to nail his trousers to the roof to keep from falling off.

The first world's series prediction that has come to our notice is from Otino Serluca of New London who picks the Cubs to win the series four games to two. He also predicts that Hornsby and Hartnett will be the heroes.

In our opinion Otino's dope is pretty good. Who's next?

CARDS TAKE SECOND IN ROW FROM PIRATES

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The Cardinals won their second straight from Pittsburgh, 4 to 2, today on runs that came in the first two innings. Frankhouse held the Pirates scoreless for seven innings but was replaced by Johnson after Pitsburgh got a run in the eighth on Mosolf's triple scoring P. Waner. Johnson allowed the Pirates one more run. Jim Bottomley was spiked in the second and taken from the game, not badly hurt. The game marked the Cardinals' sixth straight victory. The score:

ACADEMY OPENS 1929 FOOTBALL TODAY AT CAMPUS WITH CHAPMAN TECH

Probable Lineups

N. F. A.	Chapman Tech
Berghinzo (c)	le, Thurber
Hayden, lt	lt, Barrows
Stevens, lg	lg, Saxton
Cruickshank, c	c, Griswold
Wojstasiak, rg	rg, Colver
Hertz, rt	rt, Mansfield
Flather, re	re, Bradshaw
Sherry, qb	qb, Quinn
Armstrong, lhb	lhb, Chihowski or Hewitt
Barber, rhb	rhb, Gaetano
Fontaine or Geer, fb	fb (C) Cupello

A team with a great reputation, wearing Chapman Tech colors, invades the Academy campus today to help the Academy open its 1929 football season and for the first time in years, the New London school is a football favorite over the Wildcats. The game, which starts at 3 p. m., will also open the Eastern Connecticut-Western Rhode Island conference campaign.

Presenting a formidable lineup, strengthened by the presence of ten veterans, the Chapman men are planning on making up for a few of the football defeats that Ice Red and White has handed out to them of recent years. Johnny Conway, recent graduate of the University of Vermont and who did wonders with Tech squads last year, will be starting his second year as coach at that school today and his team will be doubly anxious to come through with a win. Tech's hopes, however, are not quite as bright as they were a few days ago for Fred Hewitt, brilliant halfback and also a sensational pitcher, has turned up with an injured ankle and may not see action. Chihowski, left end, will take his place.

The Academy, with only four veterans and two less weeks of practice, faces probably its stiffest test of the season right in the opening game. The locals finished their practice Friday a determined group, the consensus of opinion being that Tech with their vets, were in for a surprise if they expected to trod over the locals. Coach Court Whitney ran his charges through a light drill, mainly taken up with a snappy signal drill, the setting-up exercises and attention to individuals. The lineup that started the signal drill (named above) will probably be the one to get the call today. Bud Fontaine was at fullback, tossing the passes and was later replaced by Bob Geer, who is about 30 pounds heavier. The team is none too heavy but may offset that by fighting spirit.

The officials for the game are: Referee, Giesson Parker, of New Britain; umpire, Randolph Whapples, Norwich; head linesman, David Mahoney, New Britain. This trio will handle all Academy home games. The field is expected to be in good shape for the game. Members of Engine No. 3 wet down the field after practice Friday, laying the heavy dust that has been troublesome all summer.

Between the halves of the game the varsity and junior varsity cross-country teams of the Academy will engage each other. The course will probably be up through Mohegan park, finishing at the field under the north goal posts.

Canzoneri Kayoes Mack

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Tony Canzoneri, the sturdy little lightweight challenger of New York, exploded the championship aspiration of Eddie Mack, of Denver, tonight, by defeating the western fistic sensation on a technical knockout in the eighth round.

LOCAL N. F. A. BOYS SHOWING WELL WITH COLLEGE TEAMS

From several colleges of the land word has reached here of the deeds of former Academy athletes and it becomes clearly evident that N. F. A. is annually producing more and more college athletic material.

William and Mary college at Williamsburg, Va., seems to command the major portion of the spotlight for five former prominent Wildcat stars are slated for big things there. Jack Marks and Buck LaCroix, who graduated in June have already made the freshman football team, the football coach rating Marks as the best football prospect to enter in the freshman class. LaCroix is also well thought of by the mentor and is sure to make a name for himself. LaCroix was in the freshman lineup when they played and were defeated by Langley field, 7 to 0. Buck played a great game in the backfield. Marks was on the sidelines with an injured chest.

Johnny Greene is out for track and is also working out with the varsity baseball team. Johnny's forte while at the Academy was broad-jumping and he has carried it with him to the southern college. In a recent practice session he leaped 20 feet, 6 inches, which should win first place on the freshman track team. The varsity record is 21 feet, 8 inches and Johnny is after that mark before he graduates down there. Johnny banged the varsity pitcher, Jimmy Wallace for a home run and a double in one practice game. He is playing the outfield.

Mace Goldblatt, catcher, is expected to make the varsity baseball team at W. and M. next spring. Sam Wilcox, another Academy boy, is captain of the golf team and president of the student body.

At Wesleyan, Billy Tirrell is a regular end on the varsity and has made a great hit. He is rated as the hardest tackler on the entire squad.

Pheno Tombari is holding down his old position at end on Conn. Aggies for the second year. Pheno is looked upon as one of the mainstays of the Storrs eleven this season.

Lloyd Jarvis is back at Holy Cross and is one of the squad out for fall baseball practice.

Lawrence Gilman, manager of baseball in 1927 at the Academy, has transferred from William and Mary to the University of Alabama.

RICHARDS AND KOZELUH STARS IN PRO TENNIS

FOREST HILLS N. Y., Sept. 27.—(AP)—Triumphant in the final of the first national professional doubles championship ever staged in the United States as well as in the semi-finals of the singles, Vincent Richards and the great little Czechoslovakian pro, Karel Kozeluh, monopolized the honors on the tennis courts of the West Side Stadium today.

Richards, at the peak of his game, defeated Paul Heston, clever young Washington professional, 6-1, 6-3, 6-4 and Kozeluh beat Howard Kinsey, of San Francisco 6-4, 6-4, 7-5, in the other semi-final.

In the doubles final Kinsey and Wallace F. Johnson, of Philadelphia, were defeated by Richards and Kozeluh, 6-7, 6-1, 6-3, 6-1.

Heston who is the private tutor of young Jock McLean, son of the publisher, E. B. McLean, flashed a game that probably would have beaten any but the five or six best amateurs in the country but against the hard hitting and experienced Richards his efforts were of no avail.

Kozeluh was pressed considerably harder in his match with Kinsey.

PHILLIES NOW HOLD FIFTH PLACE BY FULL GAME

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The Phillies consolidated their forces in fifth place today by defeating the Braves by 11 to 5, as the Robins lay idle in Brooklyn. The Phils now hold the top of the second division by a margin of a full game. Lou Koupal held the Braves safely enough until his mates had pounded out a good lead at the expense of Gorham Leverett and Walter Peery.

Chuck Klein hit his 42nd home run in the first inning with one on base. The blow sent Klein into a tie with Melvin Ott for the league lead, and matched Rogers Hornsby's National league record of 42 homers hit in 1922.

Frank O'Doul virtually clinched the individual batting championship by getting three safeties and a pass as Babe Herman lay idle. O'Doul raised his average to .394, ten points above Herman. The score:

Championship Series at Jewett City

As a result of the Holy Name team claiming the amateur championship of eastern Connecticut, a challenge was issued by the Versailles Cubs, who hold victories over several of the leading teams in this section of the state, including the Taftville legion and Taftville Shyma club. This challenge was met by the H. N. S. with an agreement for a three-game series to be played at Jewett City.

The first of this series will be played at Ashland park, Sunday, at 1:30 (standard time). This game should prove to be a fast and furious encounter, as the Cubs are very anxious to wrest the title from the Jewett City team, who have had a very successful season.

The starting lineup for the Versailles Cubs will be:

SIMPLE FUNERAL FOR MILLER HUGGINS

By BRIAN BELL
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—In a service as simple as the life Miller Huggins led, New York this afternoon, said its prayer for the manager of the New York Yankees and his body left with an escort of baseball players, officials and writers to rest in the soil of his native Cincinnati.

The funeral, held in the Church of the Transfiguration, "the Little Church Around the Corner," was attended by a congregation of less than 500 persons, limited by the capacity of the small edifice, but more than 10,000 others stood massed about the corners of 29th street at Madison and Fifth avenues. Police permitted only those going to the church to enter the street between the two avenues, after the lines twice had broken out of control.

More than half the small congregation was made up of men associated with baseball. All the Yankees, from little Eddie Bennett, the bat-boy, to big Babe Ruth, were there, arriving in a body just before the service began. Eight were pallbearers, Arthur Fletcher, Charley O'Leary, Babe Ruth, Herbert Pennock, Bob Shawkey, Tony Lazzeri, Lou Gehrig and Earle Combs.

Ernest S. Barnard, president of the American league, and John A. Heydler, president of the National league; Thomas S. Shibe, president of the Athletics; William F. Baker, president of the Phillies; Robert Quinn, president of the Red Sox; Charles A. Stoneham, president of the Giants; Wilbert Robinson, president-manager of Brooklyn and Emil E Fuchs, president of the Braves, were among the baseball executives present.

Led by John J. McGraw, virtually every member of the Giants came to the church and most of the Brooklyn team had places. Tris Speaker and dozens of players of yesterday's baseball generation, such as Hans Lobert and Rube Marquard, were there.

Flowers from all parts of the country banked the chancel. Almost every well known organization in baseball, was represented and some were from "just fans."

Every bat and glove in the American league was idle today by order of President Barnard as a tribute of respect to the manager of the retiring world champions.

The Episcopal funeral service was read by the Rev. W. H. Weigle, chaplain of the Episcopal Actors' Guild, assisted by the Rev. B. A. E. McLaughlin, rector of the Church of the Transfiguration. The Rev. J. E. Price, pastor of the Washington Heights Methodist Episcopal church, a close friend of Huggins, delivered the eulogy.

Speaking in intimate veins, Dr. Price drew a picture of a weary Miller Huggins finding rest at last. The speaker first paid tribute to his friend as a baseball manager, and then as a man.

The body of the little manager was taken from the church to a railway station and at 4 o'clock started on its journey west.

Accompanying the body were relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Huggins, brother and sister-in-law, Miss Myrtle Huggins, sister, Miss Matilda Reid, aunt, Clarence Huggins, another brother, will join the funeral party at Cincinnati. Herb Pennock and Charles O'Leary will represent the players and Charles McManus, superintendent of Yankee stadium, the club. A committee from the New York chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association of America, completed the escort.

The Yankees returned to Washington tonight to play a doubleheader tomorrow and a game Sunday.

Tomorrow afternoon at the J. B. Martin diamond the Socony club of New London will battle with the Velvetmen to see which club will hold the title of New London county champions. The game is scheduled to be called at 2:45 p. m. (standard time).

After looking over both lineups it would seem that both teams are evenly matched and names prominent in baseball in eastern Connecticut for the past few years appear in both clubs. Burns, Couillard, Hewitt and Daniels of the Socony outfit are well known in Norwich and vicinity having played here with various clubs. Burns and Couillard played with the Riverview club while Daniels played with Bulkeley and Hewitt with Chapman Tech.

Daniels will probably get the pitching assignment for Sunday, although the Oilmen have two other star twirlers in Chappell and Taylor. Cragan, another youngster who has been going at a great clip, will be on the receiving end.

Both clubs will use their same lineups in this attraction and there will be no strengthening or importing players. The Socony is a strong club as is the J. B. Martin nine and some real baseball can be expected from these two clubs on Sunday. As to the relative merits of the two clubs there is little to choose from, both having played brilliant ball during the season against all kinds of opposition. Morin and Simcox will officiate.

DISAPPROVES COMMERCIALIZING CORNER

Dear Editor and Corner Friends: Do you keep papers and other literature until there comes a time when a general clearing out is a positive necessity? The Corner page for several years was among my treasures, and I had a real treat in looking them over before disposing of them. Many brought back pleasant memories of those who were so active in the Corner before they were called home. I found bright helpful letters from Married and Happy who was always ready with suggestions for the good of the Corner, and was one of the first to open her home on the camp ground to a few friends. From this small circle has grown our large and far reaching family. There was a description of a picnic at Aunt Abbie's where I had my first experience at a Social Corner picnic. Si (who was a live wire) was there dispensing chewing gum, peanuts and a dainty little bouquet to each lady from a huge old fashioned carpet bag. The potato and peanut race also added to the fun. We all remember Aunt Mary whose hospitable home was often opened for a picnic and whose letters were gems of wisdom and right living. There was Grandma H who we all loved for her sweet personality and who thoroughly enjoyed the Corner to the last. I must not leave out the name of Tidy Adly who was the one to suggest our annual Donation day in February, when each one carries to the hall something in the food line to be given to the Salvation Army and the welfare bureau, or Remember Me, who even after her or Remember Me, who even after her the annual picnic in June. All these have left us. There were many more who we old members remember so well, whose letters were always a great help to the page.

I found the obituary of our former editor, H. W. Pearson who was called home March 16, 1920. For 41 years he was on the staff of the Norwich Bulletin, and for nearly 25 years its editor in chief. Ten years before his death he started the Social Corner page, where the members could pass along, or exchange any helpful suggestion. Some of the pages would contain only five or six letters (as our ranks at that time were small). If he thought the interest might be diminishing, he would start something himself, under different pen names for discussion. If the letters became at all personal, he did not hesitate to call the subject off, never allowing anything to lower the standard of the Corner page. Many of his letters were of a humorous nature, keen and to the point. As our leader from the beginning we felt at liberty to refer any question of doubt to him, feeling sure of a straight and unbiased decision. Many of us treasure personal letters from him in that line.

A discussion has been asked for by Clarissa Lyle (Sept. 14) who enlarged on Capricorn's idea (Sept. 7) of making our Corner gatherings a place of commerce.

In reply to questions asked about starting these Corner gatherings, one of the members received a personal letter worded like this: "These gatherings were for sociability alone, where members could meet and exchange ideas that would be of help to not only the members but to the many readers of the Corner page. To guard against any hard feelings, there were to be no officers, but each member enjoy the same privileges."

I know times have changed and that this is a day of progress but is it wise to have our Corner a money making place of business? Would it not be better to try and keep it the same page and organization that he was so proud of and the only one to be run under those conditions.

It was not what the Corner was started for, or what its name implies. We have always taken fancy work, embroideries, etc. and exchanged slips and flower seeds at our gatherings, which is all right, as that helps and promotes good fellowship.

Now may I ask why and where the idea of taking up a collection for our picnic hostesses originated? Until late years it was never known.

At our hall gatherings a hostess volunteers, chooses her helpers and they together furnish the drink and hot dishes. The same idea was carried out at the picnics. At the hall a small collection is taken at the table to pay for the renting of the hall. The surplus (if any) is kept for the flower fund for deceased members and to help in other good work. Now, as Clarissa Lyle says, I may be wrong so let's hear from other members.

ONE OF THE "HAS BEENS"

USES FOR BUTTON HOOK.

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: The high buttoned shoes which were popular for ladies' wear a few years ago, has caused the "button hook" to be laid aside as many of the present models for low shoes substitute lacing for buttons. However, there may be other uses for the button hook than what it was first intended for. To clean the brushes of your carpet sweeper from lint and threads which twist around them, you will find a button hook a handy tool for this purpose. In removing hot pans in the oven, use the button hook to draw them toward you, before you apply the cloth holders with the hands. In the drain outlet of either the set wash tubs, or bath tub, the collected lint may be taken out easily with the button hook. There may be many other places about the household when it can be used to good advantage, if we will but keep it in a conspicuous corner as a daily reminder of its simple usefulness. RECEIPE FOR GRAPE JUICE

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I haven't written a letter for some time. I am sending a recipe for grape juice which I have always had good luck with. Hope Rosary will try this and let us hear from her later.

Grape Juice: To a quart jar put one cup of grapes and one cup of sugar. Put sugar in sauce pan with one cup of boiling water. Let boil about ten minutes, then pour in jar with grapes. Fill jar with hot water and seal.

I attended several Social Corner picnics this summer which I enjoyed very much. Through the kindness of Bay State I went to Lavender's birthday party and had the pleasure of meeting many new Corner sisters, one in particular, Little Spinster of New York, one of the old Corner writers. Hope this will help some in filling up the page. SAREPTA.

SAVING FLOWER SEEDS

Dear Corner Friends: I will break the long silence by a short letter telling how to save flower seeds. The summer has advanced rapidly and the time has arrived to save seeds for another year's planting and to harvest the fruits and vegetables for our winter supply. The first requisite to select the best blossom on the main stalk and mark it with a string or colored strip of cloth and then when time has changed the beautiful flower to an unsightly seed pod, brown and dry, you venture forth on a dry and sunny day with cups and bend the dry seed pods or heads over the cup and crush till the seeds fall out. If the seeds are small they can be sifted through a fine wire strainer and the chaff rejected. Sometimes it is necesary to pick the seed pods just before they open or else the seeds are all scattered and lost. Sometimes one has to tie a small paper bag over the seed as the pod will burst when you least expect and the seed is lost. Sometimes it is necessary to pick the pods just before they open, while still green, and then they need to be thoroughly dried before labelling and storing, and too, it is necesary to cover some seeds while drying out, as the pods will burst and scatter the seed in every direction, as pansies are apt to do. In some flowers like asters, marigolds and zinnias the seed is under the petals. In sweet william, pinks and poppies the seed cup is erect and open at the top and will retain the seed for a long time. In order to have good success be sure the seeds are thoroughly dry, otherwise they may mould and disappoint you in their germinating.

The continued dry weather was almost disastrous to my flowers, but the deferred showers revived them and they took on fresh courage and rewarded me with late blossoms. Those that like to try something different in the floral line try globe amaranth, gilia and cynoglossum and I am sure you will like them as I have this summer.

Tiny: I carried a bouquet to you in the hospital only to find you had returned home. I thought of you even if appearances were otherwise.

Diana: Are you ill? We miss your letters.

Best wishes to all. THEODA

ALWAYS A WELCOME FOR ALL

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: Just a few words to remind you all that Club No. 5 meets in the Buckingham Memorial, Wednesday, Oct. 2. I hope to see a large number of members and their friends that would like to come.

Please remember that members of other clubs are cordially welcome. You all know that the more the merrier.

Those that so generously offered to help serve I hope that you may all be able to come. And everybody bring something good to eat, for you all know we cannot serve a nice dinner unless we have the food. Best wishes and a speedy recovery to those of our members that are sick, if any. May God comfort them. BAY STATE

TRIPS THIS SUMMER

Editor of Social Corner and Sisters: I'm wondering if Clarissa Lyle has her foster completed or is she waiting to add my name among the Y's?

From the letters to the Corner it would seem that a great many of the members are having pleasant outings this summer. Thanks to some kind friends I have had several very pleasant days.

We were invited to Danielson for the week end and while there our friend took us for a delightful ride through the Woodstocks to Webster and home by way of Thompson. The next day we went to my grandfather's old place. I have spent many happy days there but now nothing is left but the cellar and the doorsten. I brought away some roots of old fashioned red roses and am hoping they will live.

A long time wish has been granted and I've been to the Devil's hop yard, such a wild and interesting place. I have a constant reminder of it in a dish of ferns, partridge berry and moss. They are in a tin cake plate set into a reed basket and are growing nicely. I agree heartily with Suma's friend in regard to Block Island. My family are well aware of my idea of a trip to that island, but in spite of it, I'm often asked if I wouldn't like a trip to Block Island.

If my letter is not too long would like to know if any of the sisters are any wiser than I and if so will they tell me why the bag containing powdered sugar is put into the carton upside down? I'm always forgetting and opening the wrong end.

Also why don't the manufacturers of extracts put it into bottles that will stand alone and not tip over, on all possible and impossible occasions?

Best wishes to all from V. E. A.

MY VISIT TO LOST RIVER, N. H.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: As I read of Y. Y.s trip to the White mountains so admirably describing the interesting places visited by her en route, I thought perhaps my visit to Lost River, N. H., might be of interest to readers.

When my party were on the way to the White mountains, we took a side trip to this wonderful place, a few miles from North Woodstock, N. H.

On our way we saw the two boulders nearly meeting, high above on either side of a stream which is called Indians' leap.

Looks as though an agile athlete might be able to jump across, but have never heard of anyone trying the stunt.

A way farther on we came to Agassiz basin which is a body of water surrounded by large uneven rocks.

A third interesting thing is the "Struggle for Life" tree. Although the tree is not large it is a wonder that it can attain any size, as half its roots are exposed to view while the other portions of them seem to be growing from the sides or under an immense boulder.

We enter the journey to Lost river over a frail-looking, narrow bridge and look down on either side upon large jagged rocks. Down we go on a rough ladder, and, right here let me say, all the platforms, bridges, ladders and railings are made of rough-hewn trees, left in natural state with bark on and I know they must be spiked together to make them strong enough to bear the weight of visitors.

The "Hall of Ships" is so named because the gigantic rocks resemble the prows of ships. "Shadow cave" is an awe-inspiring place being a pool of blue water, at times, and surrounded by rocks towering on all sides, but with sufficient light from above to cast dark and light shadows to either side.

Down another ladder to the "Guillotine," a huge overhanging rock that looks as if it might fall down upon another under it at any moment.

Across an inclining bridge or platform, down a ladder and we enter the "Judgment Hall of Pluto," a gruesome spot indeed.

One can see water running over the rocks but very little vegetation.

Next comes the "Lemon Squeezer" and ladies are not permitted to go through unless wearing knickers.

The well worn rocks are placed in such a position as to make an aperture through which a person of ordinary avoirdupois can squeeze. None of the ladies in our party attempted this stunt but one gentleman, rather plump, (I hope he doesn't see and read this account), had to take off his coat and be helped through by the guide.

He remarked afterward that he was really afraid his watch would get broken it was such a tight squeeze.

Lost river, after flowing through Pluto's Judgement hall comes out into the open and glides merrily through a land of beauty.

Here we see fern-covered slopes, mossy rocks beside still pools, fir balsams and sunshine glinting over all, truly "Elysian land" as compared with the "Center of the Earth" so called, another gruesome place disclosing deep, dark caverns.

We next come to the "Giant's Pot Hole" said to be one of the largest pot holes found anywhere.

Down, down we go to the entrance of the "Cave of Lost Souls" and pause a while to look around and wonder, at least I did, how I had dared venture taking such an exciting trip. Hardly think I would have done so had it been a rainy day. "Pulpit" rock should be mentioned as a rock of upstanding, sentinel aspect belonging to this section.

Now we begin climbing up ladders and are soon near the surface of the earth from which we started. Looking down we see beautiful Paradise falls go dashing and leaping into freedom. It takes one hour to go through this massive rock architecture and its unique, dark, gloomy chasms; but it is well worth going the few miles off the Daniel Webster highway to explore.

By scientists it is said to be at least 25,000 or more years old, judging it was formed during the glacial period.

The reservation is now owned by the Society for Protection of New Hampshire Forests.

When next I attend a Social Corner picnic will try to remember and take along my views of Lost river, which gives one some idea of the places passed through while there.

It pleases me greatly to have guesses come as to what my pen name stands for.

One of the members has guessed correctly but I hardly see how Aries can think Amelia the right solution; as I am sure I stated in my first letter it was composed of two names and there is no "y" in Amelia. She better get one "B" out of her bonnet, B come y,y,er and make other guesses. As a help will say it is some very much needed.

Was very sorry to miss the program Sept. 5 which I hear was very good. When the gifts were presented members who had met with loss of their homes by fire this line of the poet came to mind—"Kind hearts are more than coronets and simple faith than Norman blood".

Hoping to meet a large number of members next time I attend so until then adieu.

AMLY.

THE DEAR LITTLE CHICKADEE

Dear Editor and Cornerites: My time is limited, but I want to mention a few facts about the chickadees, as they are the tiniest of all. They will have great confidence in you if you encourage them. They are very fond of nuts, just try a few broken nut meats in your hand when you see a few of them and some of them will be sure to come to your hand if you keep perfectly still.

One bird man says he held a nut meat between his teeth and held his forefinger for a perch and one little fellow came and ate it. He also states he was practicing at a mark with a rifle and a chickadee alighted on the barrel and peered into it as much as to say, "What have you in there?"

Birds seldom tell us their troubles. If they did I fear their sympathetic human neighbors would have little rest, for they are beset by so many dangers and face death in so many forms that it is a wonder how any of them manage to escape, as storms often kill thousands in a few hours.

Severe winters destroy great numbers chiefly from lack of food. According to Forbush, 90 to 95 out of every hundred quail in Massachusetts died of starvation in the winter of 1903-1904. Similar tragedies occur every severe winter. We cannot control the elements, but by providing food and shelters we can help the birds in their battle against cold and storms.

Indeed, they have enough to endure in fighting natural enemies, such as squirrels, weasels, snakes, blue jays and crows without letting stray cats at large. Now, friends, don't you think we need lots of bird clubs? An army of bird friends to help them to overcome at least some of their enemies?

How to use some of those surplus green peppers: Two small packages of cream cheese, 1-2 cup of crushed pineapple, 1 pimento, chopped; 2 tablespoons of nut meats, chopped; 1 teaspoon of gelatine. Soak gelatine in two teaspoons of pineapple juice and dissolve over hot water and add to mixture. Fill 3 or 4 pepper shells and chill. Slice and serve on lettuce leaves with mayonnaise.

Yours Cornerwise,
CANTERBURY BELL.

JOINS THE CORNER.

Dear Social Corner: I am writing about membership in the Social Corner. I lived in Putnam, Conn., and attended the Social Corner and I can say I liked it. I go to most all their times and I wish to join. So I am sending my pen name of PONTIAC.

CLUB No. 1 TO OPEN SEASON.

Dear Sisters: The first meeting of the Social Corner Club No. 1 will be held in the Chamber of Commerce hall, Willimantic, Wednesday, Oct. 9. All come and bring your dishes and something good to eat. ALFARA.

GOOD RECIPES FOR THE THRIFTY HOMEMAKER.

Dear Editor and Social Corner: Grape recipes are submitted for those interested.

Spiced Grapes: Weigh five pounds of firm, ripe grapes. Remove skins and boil them until they are tender. Cook pulp and put through a strainer to remove seeds. Add to skins with two and a half pounds of sugar, three teaspoons cinnamon, two teaspoons allspice, one-half teaspoon cloves and cup of cider vinegar. Boil ten minutes and pour into sterilized fruit jars and seal.

Canned Grapes: Pick grapes from stems and wash. Squeeze pulp from the skins, boil the pulp until the seeds began to loosen, in one kettle, having the skins boiling hard, in a little water in another kettle, as they are tough. When the pulp is tender, put it through a sieve, then add the skins. Use three-quarters of a pound of sugar to every pound of grapes, stirring occasionally. Let cook three hours or more on slow fire until grape skins settle to bottom of kettle, put in jars and seal. When cold will be thick.

Grape Jelly: Use very ripe Concord grapes. Do no use any kind except the ripest. Take fro stems, wash and drain and cook over slow flame. Pour into jelly bag and squeeze out juice. Use measuring cup and fill half full of the hot juice. Then finish filling with sugar. Stir until thoroughly dissolved. Pour into jelly glasses and set aside. It will turn to jelly almost as soon as it is cold. Put covers on glasses. This is a delicious jelly with the fresh grape flavor and does not get glassy like the cooked jelly. NOGO.

A TRICK WORTH REMEMBERING

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: What glorious weather we are having, but I suppose soon we will have the "melancholy days, the saddest of the year."

These days certainly make one feel ambitious, I suppose like myself, many of the sisters are making things with "sugar and spice and everything nice." From every house just now we get delicious whiffs of the good things that will go into the cellar to be brought up and consumed next winter when Jack Frost is playing pranks around the house and our garden is only a memory.

Cretia: You should have seen my batchelor buttons this year. Thought at first I was not going to have any. It was so dry; in spite of all the water I gave them they did not seem to thrive. After that first good rain we had they started to grow and blossom and just when they were doing well the ground moles (nasty little beasts) played havoc with my garden. Oh! was I exasperated when I went out and saw my plants lying on the ground! Those little beasts ran right through the rows under the roots. Still some of the batchelor buttons continue to bloom, and such a beautiful color. No wonder I am fond of them and have so many in my bed. My asters were gorgeous. I heard a doctor that saw a bouquet of them said he never saw such beautiful asters. Aunty No. 1 tell that to uncle. But when I think of all those that were uprooted. Morning after morning I would go out and find lovely plants uprooted and all the blossoms wilted. Maybe I didn't bless ground moles.

Laleet and Strawberry: We seem bound to meet in unexpected places. Suppose Laleet was out getting material for the next performance, eh? Don't you ever give me away again like that or I will do to you what they did to Eddie. Ha, Ha. Get me? Did you like it? I did.

Well, I've missed seeing any letter from C. H. "Dad" Shaw in a week! Hope he is not sick. Every day I eagerly open my Bulletin to see if there is a letter of his there, and am disappointed when I see there is not any. But I know he is a very busy man.

Jennie: I haven't forgotten my promise; am just waiting.

Now here is a little trick I found out that may help other sisters while they are canning:

When canning anything that calls for tomatoes, either green or ripe, leave them until the last. Cut up all the other vegetables first, such as peppers, onions, etc., for you know they stain the hands terribly. Then skin and cut up your tomatoes and you will find the yellow stains left on your hands from the onions, etc., will have vanished. The acid in the tomatoes does the trick. I hope this will help others.

BLACK EYED SUSIE.

USING THE GRAPES

Dear Social Corner Members: My! but you folks have had some time picnicing!

Neily Bly: Should have tried to attend yours but had one stared myself that day.

Aunty No. 1: Was sorry I could not get away the day you had yours.

May B: Had thought to call on you and your sister the other week, as I expected to attend our Sunday school convention which was held at the Baptist church in Groton, but failed to get there after all.

Maybe some would like to hear how I stretched the flavor of grapes. I bought a peck. I took some of them, pulped them, stewed and sifted the centers, added what was sifted to the skins, which had been simmered in a little water about 30 minutes, then added about three-quarters the weight of sugar, and cooked all together on the back of the stone very slowly, for nearly two hours. I had three pints of lovely purple colored preserve.

I took the rest of the grapes, covered them with water, as they got hot and saw every grape was mashed. When it came to a boil, poured it all into a jelly bag and drained. After the juice had all drained out, I took what was in the jelly bag and put it through the potato ricer, added three-quarters its weight in sugar cooked until thick and had two pints of jam. I took half of the clear juice and cooked pears in that sweetened to taste and had 5½ quarts of lovely pink pears with mild grape flavor.

I then took a dozen good-sized green tomatoes, chopped them fine, cooked them in a little water about 20 minutes. Drained well, added them to the remaining grape juice adding about half its weight in sugar and cooked slowly for some time on back of the stove and had three pints of that.

If I have plenty of grapes I fix some as I did the first and to part add the pears cut in small pieces, and to the other the prepared green tomatoes. This way you get a stronger flavor.

I hope to do some more later this way; 12 lbs. grapes, 6 lbs. sugar, 3 oranges, 3-4 lbs. of seeded raisins. Pulp the grapes, cook and strain, add to skins, sugar oranges (cut in small pieces, peel and all) and raisins. Cook until oranges are tender. A delicious preserve, if one is fond of grapes.

AN INTERESTING OLD HOUSE

Dear Editor and Sisters of the Corner: I think it is about time that I added a bit to our Corner page. I too enjoy reading the sisters' letters but I seem to have so little to write that can be of interest to others.

I have been very much interested in the letters about stone sinks, as I used to use one, once upon a time. I lived in an old house where there was a stone sink in the back kitchen which we used in the summer time. There were many interesting things in this house which some of you may like to hear about.

There was a very large fireplace in the kitchen with a large double oven. There was one room which had been used by a widow in the old family, and which had been papered and painted all black. When papering over we found many pieces of the black paper in an upper room was a large ring fastened to a timber in the corner which had been used years before to fasten a man who had been insane. No doubt this was in the years before there were places provided for such patients.

This house has since burned to the ground and with it many interesting things.

Miss New Jersey: I knew a woman in Mystic who canned a great deal of crab meat but don't know how.

Commuter: Hope we may see you this fall.

With best wishes to all, especially to the sick and shut-ins.

SKIPPER.

HOW TO CAN CRAB MEAT.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I always like to be of some help to someone if I can, so I will try to help out Miss New Jersey on how to can crab meat. This is the way I'd can it if I had any. Cook the crabs in boiling water for ten minutes. When cold pick out the meat, pack in a glass jar, add butter, size of a walnut, pepper, salt, or little mustard seed and very little water. Put jars in boiler and let them boil one and one-half hours, then seal tight. One pound of the crab meat will make a very nice salad, adding one cup celery, cut fine. Mix well with any good mayonnaise and serve on lettuce. Garnish with olives and hard boiled eggs. Last week I canned 43 pounds of chicken; I had 20 chickens. After I had them plucked I weighed them; I had 43 pounds. After I had dressed them ready to cook I weighed them again. I had 13 less after removing feet, crop, inwards and gizzard, which left me 30 pounds. I put the cooked chicken in glass jars with about one pint of broth. I got 19 quarts of canned chicken out of the 30 pounds of meat. I had three quarts of broth left, so I made three quarts of soup. I chopped carrots, some lima beans, two onions, some dried peas, some rice and tomatoes. I filled the jar one-third full, filled the rest with chicken broth, cooked three hours in the boiler, then sealed tight. The jars of chicken look real nice.

Here is the way a friend of mine does her ripe tomatoes up without cooking them. She pours boiling water on them and removes the skins. To a large dish pan full, one that will hold 14 quarts, she puts 10 cents worth of benzoate of soda. Fills the jars that have been in boiling water for 15 minutes and seals tight. She says they keep well. BLUE BABY

MORE QUEER ROCKS

Social Corner Members and Editor: This beautiful September morn is a good time to get lots of work done, so my letter must be short. I am busy as a bug in a rug, making beet relish and chopped sour pickles, also sealing bottles with grape juice. Mr. Jack Frost has made me a visit but it was not one of the so-called black frost. I covered up the tomatoes to save the green ones.

Speaking of boulders, when I was a child I used to go up an old road (through the woods) which led from the Joe Cud place to the main Ragged hill road. About half way through was a large stone chair. I always used to run ahead and sit in it and wait for my mother to come along. I understand that woods have grown there which makes it impossible to use now.

Then there is what is called now, The Frog Rock, on the Phoenixville road. Neal Dowe preached a sermon on this rock years ago. Both these rocks are within three miles of where I live. Have seen them many times.

Buffalo: Your letter last week entitled "What Social Corner Means" was good. You certainly ought to get a prize for it. Think it is time for me to sign off and finish my work. With good wishes for all. I remember you as I sat across the table from you at the Congregational church.

Hastily, ANN TENNA

RHODE ISLAND JOHNNY CAKES

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: I have had such a busy summer that I neglected to write, and the ladies of Club No. 6, what a lovely day I had at Atlantic beach. Hope to spend more than one day there next summer.

I was sorry not to be able to attend the meeting in Danielson of Club No. 4, as it proved to be a good day to spend indoors.

Have any of the ladies tried sewing tape, on shoulder seams (of every dress) with a snap at one end, to hold the many straps that one has to wear? And do any of the members add a pinch of soda to Rhode Island johnny cakes? This is my rule:

Rhode Island Johnny Cakes: 1 pt. of bolted meal, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1-4 teaspoon cooking soda. Mix with boiling water, until it is like thick cream, add milk until thin enough to bake on hot griddle, about an inch thick, and eat with butter like griddle cakes. Also they make a good johnny cake toast with the milk sauce. Thicken with butter and salt to flavor the sauce. I find so many people don't use the milk. Just try them once.

RECIPE FOR GRAPE JUICE

Dear Social Corner Members: Last week one of the Corner Sisters wished to know how to make grape juice. I think this is the recipe she wanted.

Grape Juice: One cup grapes, 1 cup sugar; place in a quart jar filled with boiling water and sealed. This will keep one year. Here's a good recipe for Sour Cream Pie: One cup sour cream, 2-3 cup sweet milk, 1 tablespoon flour, pinch of salt, 1 cup sugar, yolks of 2 eggs, 1-2 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-2 cup chopped raisins, and 1-2 tablespoon of vinegar. Mix in order given, bake with one crust and meringue. For the meringue add two tablespoons cold water with egg whites and beat till stiff, add two tablespoons sugar and few drops of vanilla. Return pie to oven until meringue sets.

ENJOYED TOO LATE'S PICNIC

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: I will tell you about what a nice time I had at Too Late's picnic. I went with Bay State and the ride was beautiful. I enjoyed it very much and the dinner was nice. It reminded me of home. I remember my mother when she made corn and beans and it was very nice. I have not seen any little yellow tomatoes since I left home. I enjoyed the ride so much. I can't get out much to the picnics as they have been so far away I could not get the ways and means I could not make plans. It is getting cold and winter is coming. I have been to church recently and heard a good sermon. I will close with good will to all.

WANTS PORK CAKE RECIPE

Dear Social Corner Editor: I would like to join your Corner for I am very much interested in it as I always read all the letters, also use the recipes.

To the member who sent in surprise cake: It is very good as I tried it myself.

I do wish some member would send in an old fashioned pork cake recipe.

I wonder if Queenie will know who I am?

Will take for my pen name

AT THE EASTERN STATES EXPOSITION.

Dear Social Corner Members: I've been wondering what I could write about that would be of interest, but since I attended the Eastern States exposition one day I hope this letter will prove interesting.

Thursday was the day our party of five started for Springfield, a beautiful day to enjoy the grand scenery. We went by the way of Stafford and before I knew it, we were in Springfield and soon on the fairgrounds. The car was parked in an easy place for each of us to find in case we became separated.

Of course we could not see all in one day and evening but we were much pleased with the exhibits we saw in the short time we were there. First we went through the cattle barns, then over to the horses, then to the building of industrial and fine arts. In that building there was nearly everything imaginable from curling irons to airplanes. One exhibit interested me while in there and if one has electricity it's a great invention; that is a dish washer. How nice to pack all those dishes in their own racks, cups in one, saucers, then plates and so on, shut down the cover and press the button and presto! dishes all washed, drain off the water, press the button again and they are rinsed. There I saw the full enjoyment of washing dishes. If one was interested in airplanes, there they were demonstrated.

I must not linger in this building too long, so over to the state buildings we went. Massachusetts was the first. The entrance was so pretty, in the archway was an apple tree bearin its delicious fruit. I never saw so many glasses of apple jell at one time as I saw there; and such nice cranberries. The scenery in back of each exhibit was very effective. I appreciated all I saw in the Maine building. It reminded me of the good times I spent in Katahdin Iron Works and the camp on the summit of Chairback mountain. In this building the background for the exhibits was lofty mountains and beautiful valleys with the famous trout brooks and waterfalls forever dashing and tumbling into the rivers. In front of this scenery were large tanks of water in which trout of different ages were peacefully swimming. In one corner we saw a small live red deer, also a cute bear being fed by the keeper. The stuffed animals were in the other, beaver, lynx and a few more. There were the canoe, the snow shoes (such fun as I had trying to learn to walk on snowshoes; I laugh as I think of it); the Indian blankets and baskets. I am pretty sure I bought a souvenir of an old Indian that day. I strolled around until I saw a partly wooded hillside. On it was a miniature sawmill and to my surprise there were spoolbars stacked, drying for shipment. I quickly recognized it as I spent a winter at the place where the spool bars were sawed and stacked to dry. The corner of forestry was very interesting. Boxes of soil held the seedlings of the pines and other boxes showed the trees at different ages. Then the sad part is where you look up at a picture of a forest fire. It looks so natural, the fire is jumping and eating its way through those beautiful pines and hemlocks. Of course the picture was of electric mechanism.

From Maine we went into Vermont. In there I saw a large aquarium with different kinds of fish and water plants, also more glass tanks of very large speckled beauties. Vermont is noted for its delicious maple sugar. There we saw the sap boiling down and the cakes of sugar being made. Busy little bees were constantly working making their honey and we saw jar after jar of honey on display.

I must not forget to mention the old church, over 100 years old, with benches worn smooth by the many people who came there to worship; little doors at the end of the pews or slips, as some call them, and the elevated pulpit with red plush hangings which seemed so queer.

From the church we looked over the very remarkable work of the Girl Scouts. It is wonderful the different things the Scouts, both boy and girl, are taught to make. It certainly is one of the grandest movements of this age. It makes better citizens of our boys and girls and it has expanded and grown so much in the past few years it is one of the biggest organizations of our country. We walked through the new electric engine, strolled back to the sheds and admired the lovely sheep, gave quick glances at the swine, and went to the arena where the cattle show was taking place. Then we walked to the flower show. They were most gorgeous—dahlias, gladioli, chrysanthemums, and many many flowers I did not know.

In the evening we watched the polo race, the whippet race, the diving girls, the vaudeville. The trained animals I enjoyed the best. The trained dancing horse with the rider on his back was lovely. As the orchestra played the horse kept perfect time. Soon the fire works began—Bang! Bang! Bang!! The Bombardment of Fort McHenry was the feature and it surely was some noisy for a few minutes. After that the display was lovely. At the closing of the entertainment the orchestra played the Star Spangled Banner and the same time the American flag was shown and the crowd commenced to leave the grandstand and for a few minutes it was some jam. We finally got to the car and came home by the way of Hartford, saw tobacco fields on the way and the long sheds for drying the weed. The moon gave us light to enjoy the scenery. We got home in the wee hours of Friday morning and it certainly was an end of a perfect day.

Come on Katrinka and do your bit. I think I have done my share only I hope I left something for you to write about. I'm afraid the sister who suggested shorter letters and more of them won't care about reading this one, but never mind; next time it will be brief.

ATTENDS BRIDGE OPENING

Dear Social Corner: I haven't written to the Corner for a long time so guess I had better before I lose my membership. That wouldn't do for even though I don't go to many of the meetings I do like to read the letters.

I was in Vermont visiting my sister the month of August and while there, we went to the Lake Champlain bridge opening. It is the first bridge to span the lake. is said to have cost $1,000,000 and is a half-mile long. Three of the workmen lost their lives while building it. There was a parade of 12 miles from Vermont and more from New York. The governors officials and so forth met at the center of the bridge, the ribbon was cut and they passed into each state. The floats were wonderful. One that I thought the nicest was a life-size airplane, all made in white flowers. Another represented the state capitol at Montpelier, and another about farm relief. It said the western farmers are asking for farm relief but we are working for it. There were young men sowing and hoeing and some digging potatoes, while young women were pickling garden stuff and washing milk pails. I could go on telling of others, too.

There were airplanes flying around everywhere and one went under the middle arch of the bridge several times. The lake was full of motor boats, yachts and so forth, while the "old ferry" was there blowing her whistle. It certainly was worth seeing. Later we walked across the bridge to Crown Point, N. Y., and visited Fort Gage.

Well Ophelia Pulse, I have written so now its your turn.

Aunt B wants to come and see you. She is to have her operation Sunday if she is over her cold, so she can take ether. I'll be glad when it is over with.

Have written enough for once. With best wishes to all.

KILLING FROSTS IN LOWLANDS

Dear Social Corner Friends: Just a line this nice morning. We have had hard frosts, which have killed most everything in the way of flowers, except those that were hardy. But on the heights not more than a half mile from here, everything is beautiful. Last Sunday I went through one of the most beautiful gardens I was ever in. Some of the dahlias looked like small trees they were full of large blossoms and all the different kinds of flowers one could think of were all in bloom. The frost will stay away up there for some weeks, unless it comes a freeze.

I hope you all can come to our Social Corner picnic, Oct. 3rd. "More the merrier," I have enjoyed reading the letters of sisters that have taken trips this summer, and those that have been abroad.

Buffalo's letter in last Saturday's paper was all that could be asked for. I read it and re-read it.

Come into my garden, old fashioned and sweet
Awaiting you there is an old fashioned treat
For memories of friendships well tried and true
You'll find in my garden and flourishing, too

Here sweet recollections with fragrance abound
Here the joys of our childhood are yet to be found
While the hopes of our youth those perennials rare
Like the dreams of your youth, still grow here and there.
So oft as I sit in the twilight's soft glow
Into my "Memory Garden I go
To find it all bright with the flowers I love best.
And be well assured you're there with the rest.

WANTS PAPER WITH RECIPE

Dear Corner Folks: As our first indoor meeting of Club No. 2, is past and we are nearing the second monthly meeting (second Tuesday) I, as well as the hostess, was pleased to see so many attend the first fall meeting and trust it will increase in number each meeting and make an afternoon visit, which will be enjoyed by all.

My Saturday Corner sheet got used up before I clipped the recipe for surprise cake made of tomato soup. If some one has it, won't you bring me a copy at the next meeting?

Maw B: How goes it? Hope it's O. K., by now.

Aries: Through your kindness I received a nice letter from the Long Lost Cousin; she is 82 years old. Wonder how she knew me in the Social Corner, as she wrote me?

Lavender: Did not know it was you who had the birthday party at the Camp ground. We used to meet often when you came in to Mrs. S.' next to your store when I've visited there. Congratulations and many more. I just had a daddy pass his 87th, Sept. 21. He surely appears and looks good for lots more birthdays.

CHATTY LETTER FROM L. T. H.

Kind Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I will write a few lines before I am called a slacker again. I do enjoy reading all the letters so much. Time flies so fast and am so busy, I put it off. Guess that would have been a good pen name for me.

Lavender: Now, I know who you are, and find you are a much-loved friend for many years. I was so glad to read of your birthday party. Would like to have been one of the many there, but I am a shut-in, and since sick last winter, cannot take the long walk to the mail bus, to get anywhere. But I wish you health, happiness and success for many years to come.

Aries: Your swarm of bees was fine when you took them up. Save me some honey. I am very fond of it. Glad to see you attended the Social Corner picnics at Aunty No. 1's, and Bay State's, also Club No. 4's. Your letters about going were fine. How are the plants, and geese? All fine I hope. What lovely weather we are having.

Nonespopretty: Glad to see your letter Saturday. Sorry you are homesick.

Ann Tenna: Sorry my letter made you cry. Cheer up and write the Corner some more. I love your letters. Reading the poems Saturday made me think of the poem, Smiting the Rock, and what a moral it has. The boy that loves his mother is not quite lost. How many sad and heart-broken mothers there are from a son going wrong. If only he would stop and think of the dear mother who cared for his infant days and smoothed the rough stormy ways and kissed away his tears when hurt in some way. Could he go on doing wrong to break her heart?

Buffalo: Your Social Corner letter was fine. I wish you had written the author's name, or was it you? I will keep it in my scrap book. I have lost my Social Corner book with names in it or would know more pen name owners.

Cecil Bruner: Many thanks for the lovely card of lake in Maine. I bet you did enjoy it. I wanted to send you a package for Barrymore, but didn't get a good chance. I have had two surprise trips through the beautiful country scenes and I did enjoy it more than pen or words can tell. I did not get to seashore this year, but fish man gets fish and clams from Noank, direct to us, so I get a sniff of salt air.

Joan: Your nice letter received and will answer soon. Glad to hear from you.

Olga and Lone Pine: Glad you went to Lavender's party. A good time is assured where you are. Are the dances at your place? Oh! what nice times we used to have in Kenyon's grove, and such nice music and prompting. Many changes since then, but those were happy days. Best wishes to all sick and shut-ins, and Corner members for health, happiness and success for 1929-1930.

GRAPE JUICE AND CANNED LOBSTER

Dear Social Corner Editor and Members: In answer to the sister who asks for a recipe for grape juice where the grapes are put into a jar. This is a rule that many of my friends use: Pluck and wash grapes, put 1 cup grapes in quart jar, 1 cup sugar and fill with boiling water, seal.

Will submit my favorite rule for grape juice as I always make it. Pluck and wash grapes, put into preserving kettle and just cover with water. Set over a slow flame and when you think juice is extracted put into a cloth and hang up to drip. Now measure juice and to every three cups of juice add two cups sugar, dissolve, set over flame and skim off scum as it rises. When all begins to boil, boil just ten minutes, bottle hot and

STOCK MARKET EXPERIENCED ONE OF MOST DRASTIC DECLINES OF THE YEAR

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Under the dark shadow of towering broker's loans, the stock market experienced one of the most drastic declines of the year today. The efforts of pool operators who have frequently been able to send stocks sharply higher in the face of large increases in the loan total, were like straws in the storm of selling, which carried scores of issues down 5 to 25 points.

The only factor mitigating the severity of the market was the volume of trading, which was held to fairly moderate limits, only 4,591,590 shares changing hands. Although professional short selling was undoubtedly in large volume, there was such a flood of real liquidation that short covering in the final transactions caused but neglizible rallies from the day's lowest levels.

The increase of $192,000 000 shown by last night's weekly brokerage loan figures, was wholly unexpected, and in many quarters regarded as unaccountable save on the theory that stock has been passing from strong hands into marginal accounts, and the speculative structure thereby weakened. Furthermore, Wall street dislikes nothing so much as bad news which appears without warning. The market was able to maintain its equilibrium in the face of the increase in the London discount rate yesterday largely because it had been forewarned by several weeks.

The break was the most severe since the collapse during the first session after the New York Federal Reserve bank put up its rate to 6 per cent. last August, according to the Standard Statistical Co., Associated Press indices. Today, the index of 20 utilities dropped 10.6 points, as compared to 14.4 then, the index of 50 industrials, 6.4, as compared to 7.2, and that of 20 rails 3. as compared to 4.

There was practically nothing in the day's news of an adverse nature save for the brokerage loan fixures. Confirmed bulls tried to explain away the figures on the basis of the large volume of new financing. Traders generally have become reconciled to rising loans accompanying rising prices, but sharply rising loans to the accompaniment of sagging prices, has been highly perplexing.

During the past four weeks, the federal reserve loan figures show an increase of $644,000,000. During the period covered by the figures, the price index of 50 industrials has dropped 18.7 points, that of the 20 rails, 7.6 points, while only that of the 20 utilities had gone forward, showing a gain of nearly 27 points.

There was no change in the money market today. Call money holding at 9 per cent., and time money scarce at 9 to 9½. News bearing upon trade and industry appearing during the day was generally satisfactory. The weekly reviews stated that wholesale and retail trade and lighter manufacturing lines were moving forward at a rapid pace, while steel and some of the heavier manufacturing lines continued to hesitate. Heavy buying of railroad equipment, several more large orders appearing today, is expected, however, to bolster the steel industry.

U. S. Steel was heavily sold sagging more than 9 points to 223 1-2, and closing at 226. Such issues as Allied Chemical, American and Foreign Power, American Can, American Telephone, Anaconda, A. M. Byers, Columbia Gas, Consolidated Gas, Du Pont, Eastman Kodak, General Electric, Johns Manville, Macy, Montgomery Ward, New York Central, Nickel Plate Public Service of New Jersey, Republic Steel, Simmons, and Westinghouse Manufacturing, closed about 6 to 12 points lower.

Motors continued to sag, several, including Chrysler and Studebaker reaching new 1929 lows, and General Motors getting within less than a point of its maximum. In the rails Chesapeake Corp. sold at a new low for the year at 78 1-4. Oils sagged moderately. Auburn Auto had one of its characteristically wide movements, dropping 35 points and rallying 10. Columbian Carbon lost 17 and Commercial Solvents 15 points.

A handful of utilities and specialties was bid up violently in a desperate move by bulls. Standard Gas was sent up about 25 points to a new peak, then lost about a third of its gain. American Water Works rose 14 points to a new peak at 139, and closed at 135. Merger prospects kept enthusiasm alive for the Pacific coast utilities. Pacific Lighting and Southern California Edison reaching new peaks. Cutler Hammer reached another new top, and Industrial Rayon was bid up 14 points.

Commodities were somewhat heavy. Wheat lost about 2 cets a bushel on poorer export demand, and corn lost a cent and more. Cotton was quiet, and closed a little lower.

Foreign exchanges moved in narrow ranges, sterling slipping back a little, while the French franc was firmer. Renewed weakness of sterling on Paris was ascribed to withdrawals of French balances in London for month end requirements. The Canadian dollar rallied to 99.32 cents.

The National Catholic School of Social Service was established in 1921 to train Catholic young women for social work. It is a graduate school and is affiliated with the Catholic University of America. Three years ago the Connecticut Council of Catholic Women pledged itself to raise $20,000 for a permanent scholarship fund for the use of Catholic young women of Connecticut who could qualify. MODERN WOODMEN.

Head officers of Modern Woodmen of American, at the national headquarters of the society, at Rock Island, Ill., outlined some of the effects of the recent sweeping decision of the circuit court of Cook county, Illinois, by the terms of which the action of the head camp in session in Chicago last June changing the by-laws and adopting new plans of insurance, was sustained and upheld.

The case was heard before Judge William V. Brothers, who, after hearing the extended arguments for two days by attorneys representing the complainants, as well as the society, entered the decree mentioned. The complainants in the case were five members residing in Chicago, six residing in Beatrice, Nebraska, and two residing in Springfield, Illinois, all of whom appeared by their attorneys, those from outside Illinois having intervened and joined in the suit. The Minnesota objectors were likewise represented by counsel.

As Modern Woodmen of America is an Illinois corporation, this circuit court upholding the action of the head camp is considered to mean that no decree or judgment can now be obtained anywhere that will prevent the society from carrying out its new by-laws. The Nebraska and Illinois groups represented by attorneys, having intervened, are said to be bound by the decree of the Chicago court.

The decree finds that the setting up of the reserve to protect the insurance written since July 1, 1919, was legal and proper and that the allotments of funds to the members who joined prior to July 1, 1919, was fair, equitable, and just and fully authorized; that the re-rating of such members at attained age instead of entry age was reasonable and necessary and did not amount to any impairment of their contracts; that the society has not attempted to transfer any money for purposes prohibited by its articles of association; that the plan does not create separate classes of membership or constitute any unjust or illegal classification of membership; does not deprive any member from continuing membership upon equal terms with other members, but on the other hand, requires all members to pay the cost of their insurance and provides an equitable manner for the collection of contribution rates for that purpose, and that the entire plan is not arbitrary or inequitable as complained of.

The repeal of the former 70-year disability benefits and the substitution of other benefits is fully sustained; likewise, the plan that insurance issued to members prior to July 1, 1919, shall be valued on the accumulation basis, crediting each certificate holder with his credits and contributions and interest and charging him with his share of death losses, according to the actual experience of the society from year to year, where such members do not transfer their insurance to the level premium plan.

The decree further confirms the granting of paid-up insurance or cash withdrawals to members who are 70 years of age or over; finds that the by-laws adopted by the society in June, 1929, embodying all the new plans and options were necessary in order to insure the perpetuity of the society and to make its business solvent and to enable it to meet its obligations, and that by such by-laws all the insurance written by the society was placed upon an adequate basis in the judgment of the court.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 27—(AP)—Jolted by stock market weakness and by sharp falling-off in European demand for wheat from North America, wheat values here underwent material downturns today. Reports of large-sized purchasing of flour at Minneapolis were of only transient effect as a counterbalance. On the other hand, North American clearances of wheat and flour this week were announced as being less than half as much as a year ago, with London today reporting that a cargo of No. 1 hard winter wheat afloat had been sold at 7c per bushel under the price of Chicago December delivery.

Closing quotations on wheat were heavy, 1 1-2c to 2 1-8c below yesterday's finish. Corn closed 7-8c to 2 3-8c down, oats 1-2c to 1 3-8c off, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 20c.

Stock market depression made itself chiefly felt in the wheat pit as the day drew to an end. It was at this stage alleged that news about dearth of trans-Atlantic demand for North American wheat was most in evidence, total European buying today being estimated at but 200,000 bu. In some quarters also, the fact that at one time today wheat future deliveries were up 5c from the recent low point here was regarded as bulge enough for at least the immediate present. Whether or not such an opinion was correct, demand from previous speculative sellers appeared to have been largely satisfied, and many yesterday's buyers were sellers on all price rallies today.

In addition to stock market depression, considerable notice of a Liverpool cotton market failure that involved a member of the Chicago board of trade was taken by wheat speculators here. Final quotations on wheat at Liverpool, however, were firm, and news of rain in Australia which had acted as a bearish factor was more or less offset by trade estimates indicating 18,000,000 bu. less wheat yield in the Canadian prairie provinces than had been shown by official figures. In the late dealings, nevertheless, friends of higher prices were handicapped by word that North American wheat export business from July 1 to date has been only 78,768,000 bu., compared with 126,012,000 bu. for the corresponding time last year, and that stock of grain abroad are sufficient to last importing countries for some time.

Increased rural offerings both of old and new corn did a good deal to pull the corn market down. Freer selling from the country tended also to depress oats.

Provisions were responsive to weakness of grain.

SOCIAL CORNER

sral buffalo have been added to the animals kept at the park since our last visit and these, together with the different kind of deer, fallow deer, Virginia deer, mule deer, etc., proved of the most interest to us. One can well appreciate the descriptions of the stampedes in tales of pioneer life in the west after a look at these huge, shaggy fellows.

Suppose many attended the North Stonington Grange fair last week. We could stay but a short time, but did enjoy the exhibits, especially the needle work and flowers, and little daughter, age 14 months, had her first ride on a merry-go-round. If it made her as dizzy as it did me she will not care for these rides too often.

I miss the Norwich fair and hope the grange fairs may meet with happier results for one does not like to see fine old institutions given up.

BO PEEP.

UNCOOKED GRAPE JUICE

Social Corner Members: Some one was asking for a recipe for grape juice without cooking. Here it is:

Grape Juice: 1 cup grapes (washed) 1 cup sugar, fill sterilized jar with boiling water, seal tight. Put away several weeks before using. Grapes will retain their natural flavor.

KEEPING CONTACT WITH CORNER

Dear Social Corner Editor and Friends: Each week I mean to write but it is Wednesday evening before I know it. Will take these few minutes to thank the sisters for their nice letters.

Primrose: I was sorry not to see you at Club No. 4, as I had planned. Had company I had not seen in a long time.

This is a wonderful day and first day of autumn. Does it seem like summer had gone? Fairs are about over and soon the foliage will be beautiful. October is my birth month and I try to take walks.

Wonder if Bo Beep ever read Ethe. Hurston's books. I am just reading Ginger and Speed. Merry O is another I am quite fond of reading, but don't have much time.

Best wishes to all the readers and [illegible]

JEWELRY AND TWO COATS FIGURE IN NEW LONDON OVER NIGHT BREAKS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 27.—Burglaries and attempted robberies were reported last night and early this morning. While entrance was gained in some places, the loot obtained was not of consequence.

William Linehan, night watchman in the employ of the Central Coal Co., was making his rounds of the yard about 2:30 o'clock this morning when he came upon Fred Flora and Richard Gotwald, New Haven railroad employes, on the tracks, picking up jewelry which they had found. The jewelry consisted of two rings, a watch and chain, lodge emblems, and an Elks' membership card of George R. Hempstead, 50 Pleasant street, Groton. Continuing his rounds, Linehan discovered that an attempt had been made to obtain entrance to the grain store of Bartholomew McCarthy, next adjoining the coal yard. Linehan reported his discoveries at police headquarters and the finding of the jewelry was reported to Lieut. David Marks. New Haven railroad special agent. Marks, accompanied by Officer Leslie Peabody, went to the homes of Flora and Gotwald and recovered the jewelry and Elks' card.

When the Capitol Dyeing & Cleaning Co.'s store, 46 Bank street, was opened for business about 8:30 o'clock, the proprietor, Louis Levy, reported that entrance had been gained there. Thieves got in through a rear window, which had been left open for ventilation. It then developed that the jewelry and Elks' card had been stolen from clothing in the dyeing and cleaning company's store, which had been left there for work to be done. Whether the crooks threw the jewelry away or lost the articles as they fled along the railroad tracks is not known.

Mrs. Rowe, 113 Pequot avenue, reported to the police at 9:30 o'clock that an attempt had been made to gain entrance to her home. Automobile Patrol Officer George Cockell was sent to the house and discovered that the crook had removed a screen from a rear window, but as the window was locked it could not be opened from the outside. It was the efforts of the thief to open it that attracted the attention of Mrs. Rowe.

Nathan Lubchansky, 199 Huntington street, reported at police headquarters at 8 o'clock this forenoon that during last night a thief entered his home, but was discovered and scared away. Lubchansky said that the crook entered his bedroom through a window and that the sleeper was aroused by the presence of the intruder. When Lubchansky yelled at the crook the latter retreated through a window and disappeared. This morning two coats were found in the sleeping room and it is believed that the thief dropped them when he was discovered in the house. SELECTMEN REDUCE DEBT OF TOWN BY $32,000; ADVISE 41-2 MILL TAX

During the past year the board of selectmen, consisting of William S. Murray, Charles P. Bushnell and Patrick T. Connell, have been able to reduce the town debt by $32,000 and they have made up a budget for the coming year on which there will be $199,139.49 to be raised by tax, which will call for a rate of 4 1-2 mills figured on the grand list of $48,304,126. The amount to be raised by tax is $6,032.13 less in the present budget than it was in last year's budget.

The school board is presenting a budget that calls for $330,550.42 to be raised by tax, which is $23,237.50 more than last year, and will call for a rate of between 6 and 7 mills in addition to the rate for the town expenses. Last year the town meeting voted a tax of 13 mills to cover town and school expenses.

The selectmens' report follows:

To the citizens of the town of Norwich:

The following is the report of the town affairs of your board of selectmen for the past year, together with their estimate of expenses and receipts and their recommendations as to the appropriations to be made at the annual town meeting, for the coming year. In nearly all departments of the town, it has been possible to keep expenses within the appropriations made at the last annual town meeting and in a number of cases to expend a lesser sum than was appropriated. The only department in which there was any substantial increase in expenses over and above that expected at the commencement of the year was that of the outside door where the calls for aid demanding attention were larger than usual, due to the unsatisfactory business conditions prevailing in some of our industries which compelled a number of families who are not ordinarily recipients of charity to apply for town aid. Every effort has been made to keep the expenses of this department at as low a figure as is consistent with furnishing necessary support to the deserving poor and your board believes that this result has been accomplished. The number of inmates at Riverside Home was somewhat larger than last year and a considerable sum was necessarily spent for the repair and renewal of some of the outbuildings. At present all of the buildings are believed to be in excellent condition and the home continues under the efficient care of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis who have been in charge for a number of years past.

The highways of the town have received such attention as was necessary in the way of graveling, tarring, oiling, etc., and are now believed to be in good condition. During the past year about ten miles of highway were oiled which was more than ever before and a number of new guard fences and culverts constructed. In connection with the highway work the care of the trees bordering upon them and upon the public greens has been continued and a considerable number of trees have been trimmed and patched and several dead trees removed.

Necessary repairs have been made on the various bridges of the town during the year and the Pleasant street bridge at Norwich Town has been replaced with a concrete bridge, this work being done out of the regular appropriation. Owing to the fact that a number of the principal bridges including the Preston bridge and Eighth street bridge are of steel and wooden construction, a steady expense must be expected on account of the volume of heavy traffic which uses these bridges. This condition affects probably every wooden floored bridge in the town.

The financial condition of the town is more satisfactory than a year ago. The sum of $32,000 has been paid on the town's indebtedness, $20,000 of this being used for the retirement of bonds and the balance applied upon the town's notes. In addition to the above all bills against the town which have been presented have been paid and there is now a balance on hand to the town's credit of $7,385.51, which can be applied upon the expenses of the coming year in addition to the balance on hand in the sinking fund. An increase of $5,000 will be necessary in the appropriation for the sinking fund for the coming year as the first of the bonds issued to pay for the erection of the Huntington school will come due and must be paid.

GAVE ENTERTAINMENT FOR RALLY SOCIAL

A splendid entertainment of piano and banjo selections and whistling numbers, featured the programme at the annual fall rally of the church and Sunday school of the Central Baptist church, Friday evening, at Bushnell chapel. The programme, provided by the Henderson Duo, Beatrice and Jack Henderson, of the White Entertainment bureau, Boston, was one of the most enjoyable heard at the church in some time. Both young and old were highly pleased with the artists' efforts and they were enthusiastically applauded at the close of each number. The numbers included old-time favorites.

After the musical programme the small folks enjoyed spirited games in their assembly room while the adults present had a delightful social hour. Refreshments of ice cream and cookies were served by a committee under the direction of Mrs. Henrietta Tefft. Emery H. Davis made the announcements and the children's games were in charge of Miss Signe Seaberg, the pastor's assistant, and Miss Gwen Pattison. There were over 300 present.

HORSE WAS KILLED BY RUNAWAY AUTOMOBILE

A horse owned by Solomon Pasture of No. 245 West Main street, was struck and killed Friday morning about 7 o'clock by a runaway automobile on West Main street. The accident occurred at the corner of West Main and Forest streets. The horse, attached to a wagon, was standing at the corner, while Mr. Pasture, a milk dealer, was delivering milk. The machine owned by Wilfred M. Lavelle of No. 77 Buckingham street, Hartford, and operated by William Herzog, also of Hartford, was parked on the hill about 20 feet from the horse.

In some manner the emergency brake let go and the machine rolled into the horse. A shaft on the wagon was damaged in the crash. Officer Alfred Patterson investigated the accident, finding the brakes of the automobile in good condition. Humane Agent Frederick Wyant also investigated.

The body of the horse lay in the street until the middle of the afternoon when it was removed to the dump by the police department.

A new horse, with harness and pair of shafts, was bought for Mr. Pasture by the automobilist.

RED ARROW AUCTION FILLS PALACE THEATER

That the auctions of the Red Arrow club of Norwich are creating widespread interest throughout this section of the county was evidenced Friday evening by the capacity audience which attended the record of its 12 auctions after the performance at the Palace theater. Long before the evening's program was finished at least 200 people were waiting in the theater lobby or outside to gain admission to the auction, which got under way shortly after 9.30 o'clock. The seating capacity was taxed, hundreds of people being forced to stand, and probably about 1,500 people were in the house.

Seats were placed in the balcony and loge to accommodate the crowd, and the capable staff of ushers saw to it that aisles were kept open and passageways clear. The ventilating system of the house met the test put upon it by the crowd in excellent shape so that the crowded house was comfortable at all times.

The large number of merchants, who are members of the club had a lavish display of articles artistically arranged on the stage, the value of which is said to have been $1,350. These articles, all of which were distributed to the highest bidders holding Red Arrow money in the closed and open auctions, included a varied line of merchandise, such as household furnishings, hats, shoes, etc. The auction was opened by Max Hanover, who explained the way the auction is conducted, among other things, after which the curtain was raised.

Anthony J. Bernard of the Ideal Service Station, who acted as auctioneer handled the position efficiently and humoriously. After Auctioneer Bernard had announced the winners in the closed auction a number of articles were sold in open auction. The lowest price paid in Red Arrow money for an article was ten cents and the highest was over $2,000, this bid being made by Downer Johnson on the outboard motor. In the course of the announcement of the winners Manager Hamilton of the theater was introduced by Mr. Hanover. In a few well chosen words the manager notified the patrons that the best talkies available would be shown at the theater, with top-notch shows late in the season.

TWO STEAMERS ASHORE ON THE EAST COAST OF FLORIDA

A Third Steamer Sent Out S O S Calls Sunday Afternoon—Coast Guard Service Has Ordered Two of Its Most Powerful Cutters Sent to the Aid of Disabled Vessels—Two Vessels Are Missing and Five Were Reported Aground on the Florida Keys—The Hurricane is Moving Toward the Northern Coast of the Gulf of Mexico.

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 29—(AP)—The Norfolk division of the coast guard service today ordered two of its most powerful cutters sent to the east coast of Florida, hurricane area, where two steamers are ashore and a third still was sending out SOS calls late today. The vessels ashore are the Danish tank steamer Scandia and the American steamer Garnet Huling. The Italian steamer Salina was reported as "off Manzanillo reef still sending out calls for help."

The cutter Yamacraw was sent from Savannah at noon to the aid of the vessels and the cutter Modoc at Wilmington, N. C., was ordered tonight to proceed there also.

STORM NOW PASSING THROUGH GULF OF MEXICO

(By The Associated Press)

The Bahaman hurricane, which rounded the southern tip of Florida Saturday was blowing across the Gulf of Mexico last night at the rate of ten miles an hour toward the northern gulf coast.

The weather bureau predicted that the storm which ravaged Nassau and harrassed southern Florida with gales, was still of hurricane intensity and would strike the coast somewhere between Apalachicola, Fla., and the Mississippi beaches.

Hurricane warnings were up between Pensacola, Fla., and Apalachicola and it was feared the storm might strike some time today. Except for an unidentified ship off Punta Rassa, on the extreme south coast, no distress signals had been heard from gulf shipping.

The storm in the Bahamas however, took heavy toll, with two vessels missing and five still reported aground at various keys. No word has been had of the Isle of June and the Bahamian, both plying between Florida and Nassau, and it was feared they have foundered with all hands.

The Domira, British; the Garnet Hulings, American tanker; the Scandis, Danis; the Princess Montague, American and the Salina, Italian, were aground. The Princess Montague and the Domira were believed to have been abandoned. The E. J. Sadler radioed it was trying to get a line to the Garnet Hulings to take off her crew.

Best available check-ups revealed that no extensive damage was caused by the gale that blew Saturday night and yesterday morning along the lower west coast of Florida. A relief expedition was dispatched to Naples and Everglades to see if aid was needed.

Word still was lacking from some of the Florida Keys over which the storm center hovered in its passage from the Atlantic into the gulf. Reports from No Name Key said several persons had been drowned but this was not verified. A Florida east coast wrecking crew reported the Overseas railway was washed out somewhere near No Name Key and that parts of the state highway to Key West were under water.

Key West, isolated, except by boat, turned to the relief of outlying Keys. The damage at Key West was minor. Normal weather prevailed last night.

Damage was not heavy at Miami, but a survey showed extensive loss along the coast to the south. Homestead, 30 miles below Miami, was flooded yesterday when water from the drenching rains backed into the streets to the depth of one to two feet. No deaths were reported as a result of the storm. A few persons were slightly injured.

STORM MOVING TOWARD NORTH COAST OF GULF

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 29.—(AP) — The hurricane which ravaged Nassau and brought buffeting gales to southeast Florida, passed swiftly northward through the Gulf of Mexico this afternoon, taking threat to a two-hundred mile strip of coast between the mouth of the Mississippi river and Apalachicola, Fla.

The west coast of Florida, which thus was thrown to the east of the storm center as it took a diagonal course in the gulf, experienced high winds which reached gale force south of Tampa, but inflicted minor damage, as the heaviest winds always head east of the hurricane center.

Apparently the storm lost much of its intensity in blowing across the Florida Keys and sparsely inhabited tip of the Florida peninsula, but the weather bureau warned that winds of hurricane intensity probably still prevail near the center.

SEVERAL PERSONS REPORTED DROWNED ON FLORIDA KEYS

KEY WEST, Fla., Sept. 29.—(AP) — Wrecking crews who returned here early today reported that several persons had been drowned on the Florida Keys above No Name Key during the tropical hurricane which passed over that area yesterday.

VOTE WILL BE CLOSE ON FLEXIBLE TARIFF CAUSE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29 —(AP)— With only secondary issues settled and a slim two months left to send the measure to the president before the regular session, the senate tomorrow will enter its fourth week of debate on the tariff bill determined to reach an early vote on the section authorizing the president to readjust custom levies.

The section, known as the flexible clause although not specified as such in the law or bill, is favored by President Hoover in principle and republican leaders are staking all on this important issue realizing a defeat would mean not only a set-back for the president but a shake to the very keystone of the tariff arch they are seeking to rebuild.

Both the democrats and republican independents, who favor repeal of the provision, and the administration group, seeking its retention in virtually the same form as it exists today, are claiming victory. All agree, however, that the vote will be close, perhaps decided by the margin of a single ballot.

Tuesday or Wednesday probably will see the controversy settled.

SHEARER MAY FACE SENATE COMMITTEE TODAY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29—(AP)—The story of the collapse of the tri-partite Geneva naval limitations conference of 1927 will be sought tomorrow by the senate naval committee from two of those behind the scenes at the meeting.

Rear Admiral J. M. Reeves, U. S. N., who was a member of the board of American naval experts at the meeting, will be heard first as he replied to the statement of a Geneva newspaper reporter that he "frequently expressed the hope the conference would not succeed."

Later in the day the committee expects to turn to William B. Shearer, the $125,000 "observer and reporter" of American shipbuilders at the naval meeting, whose suit against the battleship makers for a additional $250,000 started the senate and presidential investigations.

Awaiting Shearer's story, the senate investigators have put the shipbuilders, who already have testified, and American naval experts to the conference on notice to be ready to come before the committee. The futures of the senate investigation hinged tonight on the disclosures of Shearer tomorrow.

NEW TYPE OF AUTOMOBILE PROPELLED BY LIQUID GAS

ESSEN, Germany, Sept. 29—(AP)—A new type of automobile with liquid gas as the propelling agent was successfully tested here today by Max Valier, the inventor. The car was set in motion by the force of the loud sputtering escaping gas from three steel tubes attached to the rear of the driver's seat. Speed and halting the car was controlled by opening and closing the escape valves. Today in its demonstration the car reached a top speed of about 37 miles an hour but the inventor said that with perfection of the method he expects vehicles to surpass all speed records and predicted that the method would revolutionize the motive power for airplanes.

Memorial In France For Ohio's 37th Div.

Community Building Presented to the City of Montfaucon in Memory of Fallen Comrades.

MONTFAUCON, France, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Ohio Thirty Seventh division again stormed Montfaucon today but instead of the rifles, bayonets and machine guns of 1918 they carried only a message of good will to the French republic and a deed to a magnificent community building presented to the city of Montfaucon in memory of their fallen comrades.

Minister of the Interior Andre Tardieu, French high commissioner in Washington during the war, welcomed the delegation, which was headed by General William P. Jackson, in behalf of the French government. The occasion was a sad disappointment to former Premier Raymond Poincare who had long counted on being present to render homage to the late American Ambassador Myron T. Herrick, regarded in France as the greatest citizen Ohio ever produced. The man who was president of France when the Thirty Seventh achieved its fame was unable to attend because of his health.

Just as the American and French flags were hoisted above the community building and the American band rendered the Marseillaise while the French band played the Star Spangled Banner, Maptain McSweeney, on behalf of the Thirty Seventh said:

"Friends of France, we citizens of Ohio and members of the Thirty Seventh division pray you accept this monument commemorating those of our division who died on this battlefield. It is testimony of our sincere affection and profound interest our sister republic has shown in the development of the United States."

Replying, Mr. Tardieu said:

"I bring you the salutations of the French government. After 11 years you soldiers of Ohio's 37th division have wished to revisit the place where you conquered and achieved victory and glory. We made war together and we won together. He did not desire that war and therefore we can evoke its sad memory with serene conscience and clean hands. Clouds since have passed in the clear sky of our friendship but now that are settled the money questions which divide even families, nothing prevents our closer cooperation toward peace. Already the pact which bears the names Briand and Kellogg affirms our fond desire for peace. American soldiers that you are I wish to say in the name of French soldiers to whom I belong that those who waged war are always tomorrow as yesterday the most ardent apostles of peace."

General John J. Pershing and William W. Harts, military attaches at Paris were present.

TEXAS RANGERS ARRESTED MAYOR G. A. PACE OF BORGER

Charge Was That Pace Forced a Witness in a Murder Trial to Leave Town—Penalty For the Offense Carries a Sentence of Two to Five Years—The Rangers Have Prepared to Take Over the County Jail at Stinnett, 12 Miles Distant—Two Score of Murders Have Been Committed in Borger Within Three Years—None of the Murderers Has Been Arrested.

BORGER, Texas, Sept. 29—(AP)— Texas state rangers today arrested Mayor Glenn A. Pace of Borger. Members of the state constabulary have been at the oil town since the murder there of John A. Holmes, district attorney, two weeks ago.

The charge was that Pace forced a witness in a murder case to leave Borger. Ranger Captain Frank Hamer swore out the complaint and the arrest was made by Ranger J. W. Aldrich.

Under Texas law an offense such as is charged carries a sentence of two to five years.

Rangers this afternoon prepared to take over the county jail at Stinnett, 12 miles away.

Pace made a $3,000 bond before H. M. Hood, county judge soon after his arrest. His preliminary hearing was set for tomorrow.

Last week martial law for Borger loomed imminent as Governor Dan Moody received reports from his investigators that officialdom of the picturesque oil town appeared to have connived in the activities of a crime ring that for months has ruled the new settlement. The governor, however, intimated that martial law would not be declared before actual occupation of the town by troops. He further intimated that only the resignation of the mayor and sheriff would avert martial law.

Due to the power and influence exerted by the criminal element of Borger, it had been predicted generally that no arrests would be made in connection with the Holmes killing until troops arrived. Rangers have been working on the case ever since the district attorney fell at his garage door, the victim of an assassin's bullets.

Two score murders have been committed in the town since it sprang up in the wake of an oil boom three years ago. None of the killers has been apprehended and the rangers believe they have been protected.

"Come around tomorrow and I'll show you a copy of the proclamation. The town is already under martial law, I guess."

It is presumed that martial law will extend to Hutchinson county of which Borger is the seat.

POLICE SEARCHING FOR DRIVER WHO CAUSED DEATH

HARTFORD, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Police of Hartford and West Hartford were engaged in a search tonight for the driver of an automobile which shortly before midnight, Saturday, forced another machine from the road on Albany avenue, west of Steele road, in West Hartford, causing it to strike a tree and burst into flames, causing the death of an occupant and the severe burning of the driver.

Walter Johnson, 47, Negro, of Hartford, was driving the machine towards Hartford, when, he told police from his cot in St. Francis hospital today, a car coming from the other direction forced him to leave the road. His car landed against a tree, and the flames which immediately burst forth, severely burned the driver and enveloped Robert Collins, 40, an employe of the Old People's home in Hartford. Collins' body was taken from the wreckage several hours later, after fire apparatus had been summoned to extinguish the flames.

RAMSAY MACDONALD AND DAUGHTER GOOD WALKERS

ABOARD S. S. BERENGARIA, Sept. 29—(AP)—Although today was Sunday, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain, a day out from Southampton and Cherbourg on his way to New York and Washington, hardly made it a day of rest. Mr. MacDonald was up at his usual early hour and on deck he kept to the broad promenade around the deck for the greater part of the day. At intervals he sat quietly reading a book on the sheltered after deck but he tramped many miles around the closed course during daylight hours. He was still hard at it when the bugle announced dinner tonight.

His daughter Ishbel, his companion on the trip as she is his official hostess at home, was not far behind her distinguished father in feats of pedestrianism, if in fact she did not exceed his record. They are both good walkers.

Old doctor's idea still helping Elderly People conquer constipation

DR. CALDWELL made a startling discovery shortly after he graduated from medical school back in 1875. He found great numbers — especially older men and women—suffering from constipation, who were taking harsh laxatives and purgatives. So he concluded that many things people take for constipation do more harm than good, and physicians of today are of the same opinion.

This thought made Dr. Caldwell conduct a search, and out of it came the prescription which made him famous. Over and over he wrote it, when he found people bilious, headachy, out-of-sorts, weak or feverish; with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy. Its action was so thorough even in the most obstinate cases, and yet so gentle with women and children.

The product you get from your drug store, today, when you ask for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is put up exactly in accordance with this prescription. It has become the world's most popular laxative. It is a pleasant tasting mixture of fresh herbs and other pure ingredients; it is a real corrective for constipation for men, women and children.

DANIELSON

PROPERTY OWNERS GET LARGER AWARDS FOR DAMAGES

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 29.—It appears that the state's agents guessed wrong in making awards of damages incident to taking parts of properties here and at Attawaugan as a necessary feature of state highway improvements carried out here in 1928. Two highway construction projects were involved—one having to do with the building of Westcott road, the new cut-off leading out of Danielson on to the Providence highway opposite Hutchins street, the other concerning the building of a mile or more of concrete highway from the southerly border of Attawaugan northward for a distance of about a mile. The state took what it needed in carrying out its highway improvement program, and proposed to pay what its representatives declared was sufficient as awards for damages to property. Four property owners protested against the awards, being dissatisfied and declaring them to be inadequate, and backing their opinions with action, took the matter into the courts.

July 23-24, Judge Leonard J. Nickerson, retired judge of the superior court, came here and held hearings pertaining to the claims in the town court room, Judge Nickerson acting in his capacity of state referee.

The claimants against the state for additional awards were the Westcott and Wilcox Old People's Home, inc., the property of which faces Main street and through which, for part of the way, the new highway route was cut; Chester Codding, owner of Hillside Farm, through which property the route also cut; William Walsh and John Walsh, owning properties of residential nature in Attawaugan. The awards by the state were $3,500 to the Old People's home, $500 to Mr. Codding and $100 in each instance to the Walshes. By the decision of Judge Nickerson, who personally viewed the affected properties, as well as hearing all that was offered in evidence at the hearings, the Old People's home will receive $9,000, Mr. Codding $1,200, William Walsh $500 and John Walsh $1,200.

Michael Skivington, about 80 years of age, died suddenly Saturday night at his home on Broad street. He had been a resident here for approximately half a century, many years of this being spent on a farm that he operaated in the Mashentuck district of the town, about three miles northeast of here. Mr. Skivington was a native of Ireland. He came here as a young man and lived and worked in Canterbury before coming to Killingly to make his home. Mrs. Skivington has been dead a number of years. Though in failing health for some time past, Mr. Skivington's end came suddenly. He was stricken early Saturday evening and Dr. F. P. Todd summoned. Mr. Skivington was beyond human aid, however, and died within an hour. As is customary in cases of sudden death, Dr. George M. Burroughs, medical examiner, visited the home and later declared death due to natural causes. Mr. Skivington leaves his daughter, Annie, who had given him every loving care and consideration since the death of Mrs. Skivington, and two sons, John and Michael.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Miss Lillian Bailey on Broad street funeral services for her aunt, Miss Nancy Antoinette Hutchins, were conducted by Rev. Chester J. Armstrong, pastor of the local Baptist church. There were beautiful floral remembrances. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. The bearers were Archie F. Hutchins, New London; William L. Hutchins, Moosup; Clarence E. Hutchins, Danielson, and J. Arthur Leach, Natic, R. I., all nephews of the deceased. A. F. Wood was in charge of the arrangements.

The people of this town and surrounding communities have a pleasant surprise in store for them Monday evening, Sept. 30. The Killingly High school band, it was announced at the week end, is to give a concert in Davis park at the time mentioned. The band was organized in the late winter of this year. It has, under competent instruction, developed splendidly, plays well now and there seems less than an excuse for giving the assurance that the band will give a completely satisfactory concert in the park tomorrow evening.

For miles around people were a bit perturbed today by blasting where rock is being blown out of a ledge in Brooklyn, eventually to be run through a crusher producing stone of proper size to be used on the Brooklyn-Pomfret state-aid highway now under construction. It so happens that the blasting is necessary. It is not being done for amusement of anyone who likes a loud noise. Incidentally, the work that has been underway all summer is now so far advanced that it appears probable, with good weather, that it will be completed in the late fall. The assurance may be given that when the new road is opened it will be a new route of scenic beauty and, none the less important, a short cut for those who know their highways into northwestern Windham county.

This last week before the annual town election will be more or less filled with political activity, not that it matters. Political wiseacres have the situation all figured out—they may be wrong, but usually they are right. They see, considering the war of ballots, of who of the four candidates for selectmen will be elected. Three of them can win, one must lose. The prediction is, and it is given for what it is worth, that the board of selectmen will be the same for the coming year as it has been for the past year.

Miss Gertrude Stone and Mrs. A. F. Wood are to leave Monday morning for a motor tour through the White Mountains, where the foliage is said to be gorgeous just now, and back by Ausable Chasm and points in New York state.

If your auto is driven by a minor, between 16 and 18, you must file proof of responsibility with the Motor Vehicle department. See Reeves, Insurance, Danielson, Conn.—Adv.

James A. Manton of Holyoke was a visitor with friends in Danielson over the week end.

No rain today. An old story this year. Yet the water supply situation is growing more serious from day to day. One heard this at the week end. In one sector of the town the first use of water for members of the family is for baths, as to quantity of water. This is used to give the dog a bath. Its third use is for scrubbing floors and, fourthly, to water such flowers out in the gardens as have not been killed by the frost.

Business is said to be better at the mill of the Assawaga Woolen Co. in Dayville, a plant that has not been in steady operation since the first of the year, though regularly busy for years past, even during periods of depression.

Chief A. P. Woodward of the fire department has distributed boxes into which contributions may be dropped for the Firemen's Uniform fund. It has also been suggested that checks for the fund may be sent direct to Chief Woodward, who will apply them to the fund, which it is hoped to complete within the next two weeks.

Your Chance! Most attractive, well-located residence in center—exceptionally planned; hardwood floors, steam heat, open and sun porches; every improvement, fine fixtures, landscaped grounds. Priced right for quick sale. See Reimer, 16 Furnace St., Danielson. —Adv.

Danielson and all of the surrounding territory clicked back to standard time either last night or this morning without any upset whatever to the normal operation of things. A surprisingly large number of people stressed the point that they gained an extra hour's sleep out of the change-over. There were others, without a doubt, who lost several hours of rest because of the change-over—and got a delightful kick out of it.

In view of the fact that the Danielson Chamber of Commerce at its recent meeting talked, among other things, about traffic congestion Sunday mornings during the time of the masses, about St. James' church, Chief John McFarland spent a few minutes down there this morning checking on the situation after the 9:15 mass. His recommendations will be made later, and it was indicated he will have some.

It appears that a clause in the warning for the annual town meeting of the town of Brooklyn having to do with a proposed sidewalk improvement through South street, on the West Side, contemplates only making a layout for a proposed walk, and not the actual construction of the same.

PUTNAM

CONN. TAXI DRIVERS MUST WATCH STEP IN MASS.

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 29—The arrest recently of William DeForrest and Henry Auger, Webster taxi cab drivers by officers of the state police barracks at Danielson, on a charge of improper registration, on Saturday resulted in Chief James H. Hetherman of Webster police issuing an order to all patrolmen to strictly enforce the laws of reciprocity existing between Massachusetts and Connecticut, relative to the transporting of passengers in taxi cabs back and forth over the border line. Chief Hetherman in his announcement stated that if any infractions are noted on the part of Connecticut drivers they will be arrested and accorded the same treatment as the two Webster cabmen who were arrested in Danielson recently.

The Webster drivers were taken into custody when they were carrying textile workers residing in Massachusetts to their places of employment in Danielson. At the time of their arrest they had not procured a Connecticut registration as required by law, to preform such interstate business. In town court in Killingly charges against them were nolled and the case placed on file.

The arrest of the Webster drivers became a source of protest by other taxi men to the Webster police chief and served to bring about his drastic order, which will require all Connecticut cab-drivers who are daily transparting mill employes living in Connecticut to their work in Webster, to take out Massachusetts registration if they desire to carry on unmoleated by police. The action of the Webster police head is expected to bring about dissention from local cab drivers who in no way are entangled in the controversy created Saturday.

When asked for a reason for his sudden attitude toward the Connecticut taxi organizations, the chief stated that in the past drivers beyond the Massachusetts border have invaded the state and went about unmolested but the failure of the Connecticut authorities to comply with this leniency towards Webster drivers forced him to take a similar action.

Samuel Hebert, 18, of North Gros-venrdale was arrested late this afternoon by Capt. of Police William J. Jarvis following the investigation of an auto accident which occurred on Mechanics street near the residence of Ralph Simond. Hebert was the operator of a car involved in the crash, which after a test, was found to possess insufficient brakes. The police allege that Hebert, traveling in a southerly direction struck the car of Albert Latice of George street, Putnam, which was about to leave the state highway onto a private thoroughfare. Frank Bologni of Main street, a passenger in the Latice car, sustained a severe gash in the head and a laceration of the thumb. Albert Sabourin of North Grosvernddale who was riding with Hebert was injured when struck by flying glass. His face was cut and a bad gash in the neck was also received by him. They were taken to the Day Kimball hospital where they were given medical attention.

Hebert was released on bonds of $50 for his appearance in city court Tuesday morning.

In superior court last Friday Judge Edward M. Yeomans confirmed the motion of Stuart Campbell of Providence and others against the National Rhea company, a Rhode Island corporation with a textile plant in this city, for the appointment of the temporary receiver as a permanent receiver and limited the time for the presentation of claims to four months.

A crowd of residents of this city gathered today at Mantup flying field in the Gary district where they witnessed an air circus staged by the H. and H. Flying company of West Haven, Conn. The large planes arrived at the field early Saturday morning from West Haven and on Saturday afternoon the meet began.

Word was received here today of the death of Mrs. William M. Leonard of Cliftondale, Mass., who for many years was a resident of Putnam. Mrs. Leonard expired at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. F. Wood, at the age of 89. She was born in Woodstock and came to Putnam at an early age. For over fifty years Mrs. Leonard resided at 15 Providence street. About twelve years ago she left Putnam to make her home in Cliftondale with her daughter. Mrs. Leonard was widely known in this city where she had spent the greater part of her life and the news of her death will be received with regret by her many friends and acquaintances here.

Surviving Mrs. Leonard are two daughters, Mrs. Wood, of Cliftondale; Mrs. Stillman Morse, of Worcester; a son William Leonard, of Springfield; two nieces, Mrs. George W. Perry, of 15 Providence street, Putnam, and Mrs. Carl Johnson of Jafferie N. H. Mrs. Leonard also leaves seven grandchildren, four great grandchildren and two great-great grandchildren.

Plans of a pair of midnight burglars to enter the store of Earl N Austin, on Woodstock avenue, were frustrated Friday evening by the timely intervention of police. A woman living in the neighborhood of the provisions house observed the attempted break and reported their activities to the police. Captain Jarvis and Officer Page responded to the summons. Their arrival was viewed by the burglars and they made a hasty escape over a fence in the rear of the store disappearing in the brush thicket known as Tourtellotte's south of Woodstock avenue. Investigation by the police officers revealed that the thieves had failed to force an entrance into the store.

Through the efforts of the super-intendent, Charles T. Thayer, of the fire alarm service, two boxes have been installed at the central fire station in Union square to sound a four stroke alarm, used in summoning firemen to extinguish chimney fires and small blazes and a box to sound the combination 3-3-3 code for out of town fires. The signal boxes were made by Supt. Thayer from obsolete telegraph stations were replaced with new and up to date equipment. In the past firemen sounding four and out of town calls by using the break key have experienced difficulty in opening the alarm circuit at the proper moment the result being an improper combination of strokes being struck on the system. With the converted boxes in use the alarm will be sounded by a series of electrical contacts, rendering a perfect combination of strokes.

In city court Saturday morning Emil Brenick of South Meadow street was found guilty of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor and was fined $100 and costs of court. Brendick was arrested Friday evening by Officer Joseph G. Page of the local police following an auto accident which occurred on Main street. Brenick was operating one of the cars involved.

A chief petty officer from the Naval training station at Newport, R. I., enroute to Providence Friday evening on one of the Springfield buses were arrested by Officers Benoit and Page of the local police on a charge of breach of peace and intoxication. In police court Saturday morning he was fined $2 and costs, when found guilty of the charge.

Word has been received here of the success of William E. From Wallingford For Visit

Thomas McBroome, for the week past, has been host to George A. Barber, a resident of the Masonic home, Wallingford. Mr. McBroome has taken his guest on several automobile rides through the familiar surrounding country. One of these trips included a visit to Packer, where Mr. Barber was employed in the old cotton mill for 15 years, a half century ago. During the time when Mr. McBroome owned the local Whitehouse lunch, Mr. Barber was his star chef. One of the oldest members of Mt. Vernon lodge, No. 75 F. & A. M. Mr. Barber has lived in Jewett City, 40 years, a large part of which time he was an expert mule spinner for Ashland Cotton Co. Although born in 1850, he finds it hard work to convince his friends that such is the fact. Mr. McBroome's automobile was at his guest's service when the latter returned to Wallingford, Saturday.

RALLY DAY EXERCISES AT BAPTIST CHURCH SCHOOL

The roll call totalled 142 at Pally day of the Bantist Sunday school. The exercises were under direction of Supt. Earle H. Palmer. Dorothy Wilbur, and Miriam Scates, repeated the books of the old and new testaments respectively, without the slightest hesitation. The crade roll, as usual, was a leading number. POWER COMPANY'S POLES NOT TO BE ON WHALLEY FARM

Twenty-odd years ago the Connecticut company purchased a right-of-way 5 rods wide through several Lisbon farms, for a proposed new trolley line from Versailles to Central Village. Only a part of the survey was completed. The trolleys were operated over the steam iron of the New Haven railroad from Taftville to Central Village, and the Lisbon project was abandoned. Now the Connecticut Light & Power company is to use a part of the old trolley survey, through which to carry a high tension electric line. The 5 rod strip has been acquired by the power company. At John Whalley's farm in Lisbon, adjustments have been completed, with favorable results to both, so that the poles, instead of being set along in front of his home, will be placed on a right of way passing through the land below his residence.

CHAIRMAN LEGGE SCORES

When Chairman Legge of the farm board appeared before the senate committee on agriculture he made it apparent in a brief time that he was seriously engaged, along with the other members, in endeavoring to determine what the farm legislation called for and putting it into operation. He made it clear that he was not playing politics, when he as much as told the committee that if such policies as had been put into operation before the board has been accepted are not liked it isn't necessary to accept them.

The inference to be gained there is that the board is convinced that it is conscientiously endeavoring to face and meet the problem, trying to place the money where it will do good without squandering it and at the same time looking carefully to see that it doesn't fall into the many pitfalls which are set for it.

Long since there has been reason for feeling that Chairman Legge was just the man for the place, that the president knew full well who was being chosen for that important place and that the inquisition to which the members were being subjected was entirely unnecessary. Chairman Legge takes the attitude that no senate inquiry is going to cause the board, or at least the chairman, to alter its plans. They have been developed because they are considered important. It is not to be gained that the board would not be ready to make any such changes as it felt experience or conditions called for, but it isn't disposed to be swayed from its course by senatorial questioning.

Evidently the committee thought that the farm board ought to make up for the time that congress lost bargaining over farm legislation. Chairman Legge reminded it that it ought not to be expected that the board would do in a few weeks what it took congress eight years to provide for. He simply asked for sufficient time to work out a constructive plan and not simply blow in $500,000,000 on pie-in-the-sky propositions. To the country that sounds like common sense.

GETTING PRESIDENT'S HELP

It would seem that the situation between West Point and Annapolis as regards the annual football game had reached an immovable deadlock when it was considered necessary to suggest that the influence of President Hoover be secured to obtain an adjustment. It will be admitted without any quibbling that if anyone could accomplish this it certainly ought to be the president, but it is generally considered that the president is too busy a man to have his time occupied by any such question.

It is unfortunate when two educational institutions get to the point where they cannot agree among themselves in regard to the eligibility of players in them. It has, nevertheless, brought to a sudden end the always popular gridiron contests between the army and navy representatives and as long as the deadlock continues there is bound to be a feeling that ought not to prevail.

It is a well known claim that when such conditions exist they will right themselves if allowed to continue long enough. Those who were concerned in bringing about the break in relations will not always have a voice in the situation. In several colleges and universities there have been very similar differences which have interrupted contests between the teams of those institutions, but sooner or later they are patched up and a return made to former schedules.

In order to hasten reconciliation, efforts have been set on foot this year. Seriously, it cannot be expected that the president is going to have time to go into any such lack of understanding even though these institutions are closely connected with the government. They should be big enough to settle the matter themselves. However, if all is needed is a suggestion by the president that they get together and put forth their best efforts in order to reach an understanding they would probably respond if the president urged it where they might ignore it coming from most any other source.

INTEREST IN GENEVA

Even though we are not a member of the League of Nations and there is no probability that we will be, it is apparent that there are matters which are considered and acted upon by the league in which this country is naturally interested.

When the assembly of the league completed its work at Geneva it arranged a programme for the league whereby it will be concerned in conferences much of the time during the next year. That is part of the league's work but in such steps as the league takes there is an indirect interest which this country cannot disregard if it wanted to. It cannot remain blind to the fact that the league is carrying on certain activities without ascertaining if and how such steps as planned or discussed affect us. It wants the information as to what is contemplated, what the attitude of the various nations is and what action is taken and why. It wants not only the black and white statements but it wants to know the manner in which they were said.

For that reason the United States finds it desirable to have an unofficial representative at Geneva whenever it is known that matters in which we have an interest are coming up and at other times when there is no telling what the developments may be. They are not participants in the discussions but they keep their eyes and ears open for whatever goes on and particularly with reference to what may concern the United States.

Thus, even though it is indirect, we are interested in Geneva. We are certain to watch keenly whatever development there is to change the league covenant so as to have it conform with the Kellogg pact, whatever steps are taken regarding the United States of Europe, whatever progress is made in the codification of international law, in the limitation of drug manufacture and in other matters which may or may not be on the programme but which may come with the march of time. We are interested in Geneva because international conditions make it necessary.

NO SPEEDING UNIFORMITY

There are numerous points upon which there is need for agreement among the various states concerning automobile traffic. One of them has to do with speeding. Just what speeding is, the encouragement given to it and the efforts to prevent it, is not the same in all the states.

Speeding in Connecticut depends upon the conditions under which fast driving is done. Here there is much criticism of the slow driver and encouragement is given to the speeding up of traffic in order, as it is argued, to increase safety on the highways.

In Rhode Island there has long since been a requirement that auto traffic should not go slower than 35 miles an hour on the main thoroughfares. The aim is to avoid congestion.

In some sections of Massachusetts the state police are maintaining speed traps with orders to get all speeders, and at a point in Westfield one afternoon last week 31 arrests were made in a period of two hours, and the drivers came from all parts of the country. It was reported that it was the first of a series of traps aimed at the prevention of speeding and the officers were clocking the machines for speed in excess of 35 miles an hour.

Thus you stand a chance of being arrested in Massachusetts if you drive over 35 miles an hour, though not indulging in any reckless driving, and yet across the border in Rhode Island you are liable to arrest if you do not force your car along at 35 miles an hour or better. In Connecticut the question of speeding is left to the judgment of the driver to insure safety.

Here, certainly, is a group of states where there is need for greater safety but where there is also need for greater uniformity.

SUSPENDED SENTENCES

There are times when leniency is needed, when it is justified, but there are opportunities for grossly abusing the provisions which have been made for meeting deserving cases.

For the purpose of dealing with a certain class of first offenders there is the possibility of imposing a sentence and then deferring it. This gives the accused a chance to escape the penalty and a chance to recognize the error of his way and go straight. To many it is a Godsend. To others it is simply a means of escaping what they richly deserve.

In the superior court in Rhode Island there has recently been brought to attention an example of the way a deferred sentence should not work. An accused was presented on the charge of larceny. After hearing the case he was given a deferred sentence, or, in other words, a chance. It doesn't appear that there was anything wrong with that disposition, but the judge who was asked to defer the sentence on the same person when arrested for carrying a revolver while out under suspension refused and imposed a prison sentence. That judge understood the danger of overdoing leniency.

Did you make good use of that extra hour after readjusting the clock to standard time?

Considering what the shipbuilders think of the Shearer reports, he got pretty well paid for his work in Geneva.

Probably the slayer of the bride who was found dead near the scene of the Peacox burning will expect to get off as lightly as Peacox.

It will not be long now before the boys will be furnishing reminders that the Thanksgiving night fires cannot be fed without barrels and boxes.

Up in Maine they are not only seeing snakes but snakes with horns. You wouldn't have suspected anything like that in Maine a few years ago.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

The rubber apron has become a kitchen necessity.

Lettuce is good for the nerves.

Use the best cider vinegar for pickling.

Keep crackers in air-tight tin boxes in a dry place.

Spiced grapes are good to serve with roast fowl.

Never handle an electric fan while the current is on.

Peanuts make a delightful loaf for the meatless meal.

Pour paraffine over paint left unused in a can and it will not harden.

If the windows stick after the house has been painted, brush the inside of the frames with black lead.

A tablespoon of brown or white sugar are added to roast beef gravy improves the flavor and color.

Don't peel rhubarb before it is cooked. The red skin gives it an attractive color.

Add a few maraschino cherries and blanched almonds to grape conserve if you wish to give it an unusual flavor.

To whiten ivory ornaments that have become yellow, wash them with soap and water and set them in the sunshine to dry. Repeat this process if necessary.

Never attempt to sweep up at once soot that has fallen onto a rug. Cover the soot with dry salt, let it stand for a short while, then sweep up.

If green vegetables such as spinach, lettuce, peas and beans are a few days old they may be made fresh by soaking them in cold water for a half-hour, then putting them in the ice box.

When making a cake containing fruit or nuts, either roll them in flour before adding, or add them to the creamed shortening and sugar. Either will keep them from sinking to the bottom.

If you have mint growing in your garden cut it, tie in small bunches and dry. When quite dry reduce to a powder and bottle. It may be used for sauces when fresh mint is not to be had.

FOOD CHOPPER.

If the food chopper is inclined to skid around on the table, before fastening the grinder to the table, place a square of sandpaper under the clamps, rough side up. Then screw the chopper tight and the clamps will not work loose.

KITCHEN SPIGOTS.

When you are cleaning the doorknob and bell, just take the rag with the polish on it and rub up the kitchen spigots. They are so often forgotten and yet, when clean and shining, they give such a well-kept appearance to the kitchen.

CLEANING SILVER.

A way to clean silver in hot weather, when everything should be simplified, is to let it stand a few hours in sour milk in an aluminum pan.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Never use a towel to remove your facial cream. You'll just cram your pores full of excess fat. Use a cream that will dissolve away.

If the hands are stained with fruits at preserving time, rub them with tomato juice and the stains will quickly disappear.

To shampoo the hair, use plenty of hot water and hot towels. A small bath spray makes your home shampoo as good as a professional one. First, wet the hair with warm water, using a spray. Now rub in the shampoo mixture, either a liquid soap or a good cake soap shaved and dissolved in a little warm water. Rinse with hot water, then repeat the soaping. You should rinse again, gradually cooling the water until it is quite cold. Now spray with water again and dry with hot towels by hand. The specialist who uses this shampoo routine declares that the final spraying is what keeps the hair light and fluffy.

BATHS.

When collars wilt and people begin to insist that "it isn't the heat, it's the humidity," then is the time for a warm bath, or several warm baths, if you want to keep cool.

They needn't be of long duration. Just dip in for a moment, lather away the perspiration on your body, and step out again. Or if you prefer a shower, stand under the spray, apply a liberal coating of soap, and let the water run until you feel clean and cool.

In either case it will require less energy to turn the tap than to engage in vigorous fanning or in futile conversation concerning the weather.

Paradoxical though it may seem, cold baths are only cooling as long as you remain immersed in them. For more lasting results it is better to regulate the water so that it is just a little warmer than body heat. Soap all over with a creamy lather, then let the water run cooler until it is just a little less than body heat.

KEEPING FLOWERS FRESH.

Many flower lovers complain that they are unable to keep blossoms fresh in vases for more than a day.

Flowers must be cut at the proper stage of their development, says the August American Home. It is obvious that they must not be cut when in bud, with the exception perhaps of gladiolus, which may be cut after the first bud has opened. The general rule is to cut them when the buds begin to open.

The safest rule, too, is to cut flowers in the early morning or in the evening, not in midday, when the sun is shining down on them brightly.

Use a sharp knife to pluck the blossoms and plunge them immediately into water. Wherever possible, take a pail or vase into the garden with you. Dip the stems deeply into the water.

CHEESE.

To prevent cheese from getting hard, spread a thick film of butter over the cut part and cover the piece with clean cloth. Grate stale cheese and keep it in a glass container with a perforated top, to be used in an au gratin dish, cheese straws, cheese sauces, etc.

DICTATES OF FASHION.

New hats for fall wear are of felt, with draped velvet in the ever-becoming beret shape.

A snug black sisol turban with the smallest of eye veils has a ruby beetle crawling right up the front of it.

All the new fall models sponsor the normal waistline and longer skirts which give a long-limbed silhouette that flares low.

Extremely modernistic is a ring made entirely of a huge piece of crystal and carved in the center with initials or a flower design.

Berets made of tweed, velvet and of braided fabrics are being sent over in large quantities, in such variety that there is really a type for every face.

New fall coats make much of fur trim, using the following furs extensively: skunk, red fox, natural and pointed wolf, dog and kit fox. Brown furs on black coats are very smart.

Velvet tailored suits promise to be a feature of the fall season because the material lends itself so wonderfully to expert tailoring and falls so gracefully and maintains its uncreased freshness so long.

Constant reminders of the fashion importance of the long glove for formal wear are seen on the avenue. In white or off-white glace kid this glove will be worn with the new evening furs.

Soft woolly tams in white, pastel, the bright, and the dark shades are shown for wear with sports costumes of the late summer. These bear no resemblance to the Scotch tams of angora, but fit the head closely and are similar to the French wool beret.

In many of the smart Paris houses, the baga are made of leather, exactly to match the tone of the costume. The newest shape is an oblong affair with rounded corners.

WHITE FOR EVENING

The vogue for suntan has made white of even greater importance in summer fashions. One of the most exclusive specialty shops is featuring white evening frocks with accessories in color. These consist of satin slippers and bag with a matching chiffon handkerchief. Chartreuse, turquoise, coral and flame are some of the colors that are smartly combined with white.

SHORT EVENING WRAPS.

With the new length in evening gowns the short wrap is decidedly chic, and when of fur for fall it will be very new indeed. A striking wrap of fine white ermine skins shown in one of the shops is bordered all around with white fox. Other ermine evening wraps are trimmed with dark furs, such as sable and sable-eyed pelts.

NEGLIGEE SILHOUETTES.

Straight and slender negligees have faded out of the picture, for creators of these delicate garments of lace and silk take their cue from the evening mode. Skirt sections droop toward the rear and flare in soft voluminousness, sleeves widening to an appreciable flare.

LAUNDRY HINTS.

When preparing bluing water in which to rinse clothes, add a little salt to the water. Bluing will not then streak the clothes.

Peach stains may be removed from table linen if the part that is stained is dipped first in cold water, then covered with cream of tartar. Hang the cloth in the sun.

Table linens should be ironed entirely dry to prevent massing. The same is true of a frock. Hang either silk or linen frocks up in the air after ironing and they will stay fresh-looking longer than if worn immediately.

The best thing with which to rub irons is a fairly large pad of folded brown paper. This will also serve to test their heat. In addition a cloth should be kept at hand on which to wipe off any flakes of soot or dirt. A small piece of wax is excellent for producing a gloss when rubbed on the iron. Paraffin has the same effect.

STAINS ON THE RUG.

Oil spilled on a rug should be immediately covered with cornmeal or oatmeal, and after two days it should be well brushed. For kerosene oil use buckwheat flour.

To remove grease spots from rugs rub cornstarch, French chalk or fuller's earth into the nap and leave it a couple of days, then brush it out.

Blotting paper and a warm iron will also be effective.

Ink spots will disappear if soaked up as much as possible with blotting paper, then saturated with milk and after a while blotting them up. Use plenty of milk and repeat as often as necessary, then rub with a clean cloth. If a grease spot remains from the milk wash it with ammonia water.

RUBBER GLOVES REQUIRE CARE.

For many forms of housecleaning rubber gloves furnish a convenient protection for the hands. They will give long and useful service if properly cared for—otherwise they are likely to become an expensive item.

The same glove should not always be worn on the same hand. Changing them about and turning them inside out will help to distribute the wear more evenly. Cuts and tears should be mended with adhesive tape as soon as they appear.

Mild soapsuds and tepid water are best for washing rubber gloves. Each time they are used, dip them in a basin of suds, rinse thoroughly in clear water of the same temperature and pat them dry with a soft cloth. Talcum powder dusted inside and out will absorb any traces of moisture that remain, thus preventing the rubber from sticking and tearing.

SOAP.

Soft, slimy soap is never pleasant and always wasteful. To obviate this sliminess is very easy. Dampen the under part of the cake and stick it onto an ordinary piece of silver paper. When firmly attached, trim the edges and always lay the soap silver-paper-side-down in the soap dish. The soap will remain hard and the soap dish clean.

FLAT SILVER.

If you wash your flat silver in hot sudsy water and scald with boiling water each time it is used, your actual silver cleaning will not amount to much.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

China now has several hundred women actresses engaged in a profession formerly exclusively that of men.

Miss Katherine L. Berninger, aged 24, was recently made secretary of the chamber of commerce in Sunbury, Pa.

The only woman registrar of a government land office is Miss Clara M. Crisler, registrar at the Carson City, Nev., office. Her compensation is $1,-000 plus fees and commissions.

In Russia, women are now employed in offices, in government departments and in the law courts as lawyers and often as judges.

The only woman dentist in Shanghai, China, is Dr. Antonina Kazimiroff, a Russian who fled St. Petersburg when the bolsheviks overthrew the czar.

The first cotton bloom to be shown in Mississippi is credited to Mrs. Lillian R. Thompson, owner and operator of a large plantation in Marshall county.

RUSTY SCREWS.

When removing rusty screws or those that stick, insert a little vinegar and leave a while before using the screwdriver.

BUTTERING CRUMBS.

Buttered crumbs used for making scalloped foods are made by mixing dried crumbs with melted butter, using a fourth of a cup of butter to one cut of crumbs.

RECIPES.

Chocolate Roll: Separate four eggs and beat the yolks until thick and creamy. Add six teaspoons of cocoa, six teaspoons of powdered sugar, one teaspoon of vanilla and fold in the egg whites beaten stiff. Pour onto a shallow half-inch pan lined with waxed paper and bake very slowly for 20 minutes. Let stand for five minutes and then remove waxed paper. Whip half a pint of heavy cream and pour over the top. Roll gently and slice when ready to serve. Serve with the following sauce: Boil together one cup of milk, one teaspoonful of vanilla, five tablespoons of cocoa and six tablespoons of powdered sugar. Cool before serving. This makes a delicious dessert.

Lamb Pie: Cut left-over lamb in medium-sized pieces and place in a saucepan with two or three carrots, a turnip, two or three small onions, and three potatoes, all cut into dice. Add pepper and salt, cover with water and bring to a boil and simmer for one hour, or until meat is tender, then drain off the liquid. Blend a tablespoon of butter and two teaspoons of flour in a saucepan, add the liquid drained from the meat and vegetables, season to taste and mix well; then add the meat and vegetables and cook for five minutes. Line a buttered pie or pudding dish with pastry, fill with stewed meat and vegetables and cover with pastry, making a slip or two

Diarrhea.

By H. M. Stretcher, M. D.
University of Illinois
Chicago
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Diarrhea is one of the most important digestive disturbances which we encounter. Briefly, we define diarrhea as any exaggerated activity of the bowel, evidenced by frequent fluidy evacuations. Diarrhea may originate as result of—

1. Dietary Errors such as excess intake of fatty foods, oils, certain vegetables, (coarse).
2. Excessive use of cathartics, especially vegetable drugs.
3. Diseases of the large bowel such as inflammation, ulceration, tumor formation.
4. Diseases of stomach itself such as high acid formation in stomach, or absolute absence of acid in the stomach.
5. Nervous disturbances such as hysteria or neurasthenia.
6. Foci of infections as infected teeth or tonsils.

This condition in general is evidenced by passage of a large number of stools, which may or may not contain blood and flakes of mucus. As a result of frequent evacuations, marked inflammation of the large bowel sets in, thus resulting in a griping or colicky pain during and between evacuations. It is self-evident that inasmuch as the bowel in cases of diarrhea is depleted of considerable fluid and nourishment, marked loss in weight rapidly ensues. Associated with the above picture of this disease, marked anemia and exhaustion may set in if the disease is not checked rapidly. Generalized symptoms such as headache, backache, loss of appetite, and nervous manifestations very frequently are present.

Inasmuch as various conditions may cause diarrhea, a positive diagnosis as to the primary source is therefore essential. Where errors of diet or excessive use of cathartics is the source, the condition is not serious and lends itself readily to simple management. In cases where the diarrhea is secondary to disease of the stomach, or due to nervous disturbances, it is, of course, essential to get at the bottom of these conditions in detail as to their physiological comprehension.

The most important group of cases of diarrheas with which we deal in private practice are those that are brought about by ulcerations of the large bowel or by tumors. It is true that we are practically helpless in diarrheas produced by tumors unless they are diagnosed early and removed surgically. The group that produces diarrhea due to ulceration and shows blood and mucus in the stool requires careful survey.

It has been discovered just recently that infected teeth and tonsils may be the background source for a large group of these cases. In general, it may be said that ulcerations in the large bowel, as a rule, are brought about by parasites and bacteria of various strains that may be peculiar to each individual case. These wander into the intestinal canal with various types of foods. Parasitic infestations are treated specifically. At the present time, physicians who are specially interested in this field of work attack these cases in the following manner:—The bowel is examined with a special instrument, electrically lighted, and through this instrument is obtained cultures of all bacteria that grow in the large bowel. Then vaccines are prepared from each bacteria, and patients are injected once or twice weekly with progressively increasing dosages in accordance with the severity of the disease.

Experience with these cases has been very encouraging. It is, of course, important to remember that the earlier these cases are diagnosed the better are the results. The above suggestions are supplemented with a special diet and at times with irrigations. As this problem is purely a medical problem our advice, therefore, to the reader is to determine the cause of the diarrhea early and seek the advice of one especially trained to properly manage diseases of the digestive tract in order that serious complications may be prevented.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

A Narrow Escape.

By Thornton W. Burgess

Lessons taught by dangers past,
Should, but do not always, last.
—Old Mother Nature.

Peter Rabbit and little Mrs. Peter were in a tight place. Bowser the Hound was coming around one end of the dear Old Briar Patch and Flip the Terrier around the other end. Thus, Peter and Mrs. Peter were between the two, and right at that particular place there was no handy little path into the dear Old Briar Patch. Instead, there was a very thick and close growth of brambles. It certainly looked bad for Peter and Mrs. Peter.

Peter knew that the one to fear most was Flip. He knew that Flip was very, very much quicker than Bowser. It would be easier to dodge Flip. He signaled little Mrs. Peter to follow him and started towards Bowser. Little Mrs. Peter was right at Peter's heels. Peter began to circle out so as to go around Bowser. Bowser saw this and changed his direction. Bowser's big voice was ringing across the Green Meadows. Flip was coming just as fast as he could run and that was very fast indeed. Peter and little Mrs. Peter, watching Flip by rolling their eyes back as they ran, both realized that Flip was the real danger. If they could once get past Bowser, they could make for the nearest entrance to one of Peter's little paths through the briars.

"I hope Fuzzy," as Peter calls little Mrs. Peter, "will dodge the opposite way from the way I dodge when it comes time," thought Peter. But there was no way of telling her this.

It looked as if Peter was going to run right into Bowser's mouth. Right at Peter's heels was little Mrs. Peter. Behind them was coming Flip, and he certainly was coming fast. Now, if there is one thing that Peter can do better than another, it is to dodge. When running at full speed he can change his direction as few others can. He did this now. He suddenly shot off to one side. Little Mrs. Peter did the same thing. But she didn't dodge in the same direction as Peter. She dodged in the opposite direction. This was very clever. It made confusion. Bowser was in doubt which way to turn. And so was Flip. They didn't know which one to chase. This gave a chance for Peter and little Mrs. Peter to gain. Both Bowser and Flip turned towards Peter. This gave little Mrs. Peter a chance and she made the most of it. How she did run, lipperty-lipperty-lip! She reached an entrance to one of the little paths into the dear Old Briar Patch and in she popped. She was safe. Then she turned to see where Peter was.

She saw Peter's white tail flashing in the sun, and Peter was running as only he can run when he has to. Behind him was racing Flip. The little black-and-white dog certainly was traveling. He was gaining on Peter. Behind Flip came Bowser the Hound with his nose to the round, for that is the way he loves to run when following a trail, and telling the whole world what he is doing.

"Oh dear!" whimpered little Mrs. Peter. "He'll catch Peter! He'll surely catch Peter!"

It did look as if Flip would catch Peter. But just then Peter dodged. He changed his direction abruptly, and now he was headed straight towards the dear Old Briar Patch. Flip was running so fast that he couldn't slow down to make the turn as quickly as Peter did. So he over-ran; that is, he ran quite a little distance beyond the point where Peter made his turn. Then he managed to turn and start for Peter again. Once more he was almost up to Peter. They were close to the dear Old Briar Patch this time. Once more Peter dodged. This time Flip couldn't stop himself before he crashed right into the brambles. How he did yelp! By the time he had backed out, Peter was safe in the dear Old Briar Patch. It was a narrow escape. But then, as Peter says, "An escape is an escape," so what does it matter how narrow it was.

Threatened With Revolver

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 29—Paul Trozzolo, 12 Amity street and driver of a taxicab, reported to the police early this morning that while driving on Williams street, he encountered queer actions by occupants of another car. Trozzolo said that when between Gallows lane and Mohegan avenue, the driver of the other car, a Cadillac sedan and in which were four occupants drove to the left hand side of the highway as if to cause the cab to stop. Trozzolo inquired why the driver did not keep on his right and claims that one of the occupants pulled a revolver, the car then turning and heading for Norwich. The Norwich police were requested to arrest the occupants of the Cadillac, but they were not found.

LUTHERAN CONFERENCE TO MEET HERE THIS WEEK

The first meeting of the New England conference of the United Lutheran Synod of New York will be held here Tuesday and Wednesday in the First Lutheran church on Franklin street of which the Rev. Carl Storek is pastor. Rev. William R. Meyer, of Waterbury, Conn., will preside. The president of Synod, Rev. Dr. Samuel Trexler, and the secretary, Rev. Paul Andrew Kirsch, will come from New York to attend the meeting.

The New England conference is one of eight district conferences now being formed to carry on the work of the United Lutheran Synod of New York which was formed in June this year at Albany, N. Y., as a merger of the New York Ministerium, the New York Synod and the New York and New England Synod. It is by the organizing of these conferences that the needs of the 410 congregations in the synod are met.

The New England conference includes the churches in Connecticut and eastern Massachusetts from which about 60 delegates are expected to be here and will be entertained in the homes of the members and friends of the local church.

REV. DR. SAMUEL TREXLER

The conference session will open at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning at the church with a communion service for the pastors and delegates. The business session will be called to order at 10 o'clock, and after the reception of credentials and roll call, the principal business will be the adoption of constitution and by-laws. There will be addresses by visiting pastors.

In the afternoon at 4 o'clock the delegates and guests will be taken on automobiles rides around the city by their hosts and friends and it is hoped by the church officers that enough automobiles will be available to extend this courtesy to all attending this conference.

The conference will continue through Wednesday with business sessions and officers are to be elected. Rev. Mr. Meyer of Waterbury, who is president, and Rev. George Selzer of Hartford, who is secretary, were appointed to these offices by the bishop when the conference was formed.

SKULL FRACTURED WHEN THROWN FROM AUTOMOBILE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 29—Stephen Awezec, 51, of Montville, employed at the plant of the American Fishers, Groton, was injured Saturday afternoon, getting a fractured skull, lacerations and abrasions of the face and head, lacerations of the left ear and lacerations of the right hand by the overturning of the automobile in which he was riding on the New London-Norwich turnpike. He is a patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital where his condition is reported as critical.

Awezec concluded work about 1 o'clock and with another employe, Alfred Vallieri, 19, also of Montville, started to drive to their home in the latter's car. When on Williams street, and approaching Gallows lane, the automobile, which was tarveling at a fast rate of speed, overtook a car driven by Frank W. Woodworth, 751 Williams street. Woodworth was about to make a left turn and gave a signal of his intention. Vallieri, instead of driving to the rear of Woodworth's auto, attempted to drive in front of it, in a further endeavor to pass it before the intended turn was made. Vallieri's car struck Woodworth's machine a glancing blow, causing the former auto to overturn and hurl the occupants to the highway. Awezec landed on the concrete on his head and was rendered unconscious and the car was reduced to wreckage. A telephone message to police headquarters summoned Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh. Awezec was rushed to the hospital and Vallieri was arrested on a charge of reckless driving. He was released upon furnishing a surety on his bond of $1,000 and will be in court tomorrow.

CHILDREN WITH MATCHES AND THE USUAL RESULT

The two and a half story brick dwelling at No. 99 School street owned by Joseph Bradford and occupied by Walter Allen was slightly damaged by fire Saturday afternoon. The blaze was caused by children playing with matches. Mr. and Mrs. Allen left their five children in the house in charge of a young girl. While they were away one of the children is believed to have set fire to a broom and inserted it beneath a shelf near the sink.

E. O. Browning, who lives upstairs, and Mrs. Augusta Morris heard the children screaming and investigating found the blaze under the shelf, which was slightly damaged, and the fire department was notified, the call being received at 2:28 p. m. On the arrival of the firemen the fire was practically out after several pails of water were thrown on it by the two neighbors. Engines 3 and 5, a small car from the Central station and Chief Henry R. Taft responded.

For some reason which he could not explain Beruby's car hit the other machine on the left rear fender, causing damage, and then continued to the left of the road, coming to a stop against a tree, smashing the left front end of the Hudson. LED COMMUNITY SING AT CENTRAL BAPTIST CHURCH

The Sunday evening service at the Central Baptist church was a most interesting and delightful one for the large congregation. Miss Rosabelle Temple, of Boston, teacher of singing, personality and lecturer on musical topics, was the leader of the service and gave interesting and instructive interpretations of a number of the popular and better known hymns. She also spoke of the history connected with several of the hymns and their authors, and led in community singing, assisted by the church choir and organist. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., pastor of the church. Just before the service closed Rev. Dr. Pitt announced that plans are under way for a harvest moon service and that it is to be a community service. The pastor announced that anyone who desired to provide donations of vegetables and fruits for worthy people should communicate with him.

POST ROAD SUMMER TRAFFIC 22,500 CARS

That the Boston Post road between New Haven and Bridgeport was traversed by upwards of 22,500 motor vehicles each day during the past summer is shown by traffic checks taken by the Connecticut highway department on main highway bridges at various times during the season. The results of these checks, announced by Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald, afford an interesting view of the startling volume of traffic upon Connecticut highways.

One of the most amazing results of the check on the Washington bridge over the Housatonic river at Devon was that obtained on Labor day. From midnight to midnight on the season's end holiday, exactly 42,254 automobiles passed over the bridge! On the day previous the 24 hour check found 36,610 cars passing. Upwards of 30,000 vehicles move over that section of the Post road on the average Sunday. The daily average of 22,500 was an increase of approximately 2,500 per day over last year.

While the New Haven-Bridgeport section of the Post road is unquestionably used more than any other, checks on bridges both east and west of those points show a vast increase in traffic. On the Westport bridge, over the Saugatuck river, only a 12 hour check, 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. was taken, but it revealed a daily fixure of approximately 12,500 cars and a Labor day total of 20,297. There was a daily increase over 1928 of about 1,500.

In the other direction, the 24 hour checks on the Thames river bridge at New London revealed a daily average of about 13,000 vehicles, 2,800 greater than last year, and a Labor day total of 18,394.

Nearly 8,000 cars passed the Middletown-Portland bridge on a midsummer day, according to the check, and the total swells to 14,443 on the holiday. The daily increase was 1,800.

PROCEEDING WITH PLANS FOR COMMUNITY SYNAGOGUE

At a general meeting Sunday evening at the B'Nai Brith headquarters on Shetucket street, further plans were discussed for the organization of the new Community synagogue of Norwich. Close to 100 men and women were in attendance and the meeting was presided over by Rabbi Ira Eisenstein from the Jewish Theological seminary of America, who was tendered a welcome reception in these rooms last Thursday evening.

In discoursing upon the qualities which any modern religious institution must possess, Rabbi Eisenstein said in part: "Our young people have come in contact with forces for education which bear closely upon their personal lives. The science they study, the literature with its vivid realism, the psychology with its penetrating and inexorable search for the verities of human life, and the history of real and vital movements which they learn and are fascinated by; create for them high standards which they apply to their religious institutions. They demand, and rightly so, that the house of worship and of religious instruction be relevant to their needs, satisfy their aesthetic sensibilities, and clarify for them the problems that confront them. The Community synagogue, he hoped, would measure up to those standards and he concluded with the presentation of some practical suggestions to realize the hope. The meeting was adjourned at 10 o'clock.

The services held Saturday at midnite at the Community house, for repentance and forgiveness in preparation for the high holidays, were also well attended. Mr. Schleiffer who assisted Rabbi Eisenstein, chanted the traditional liturgy.

BISHOP LAYS CORNERSTONE OF GREEK ORTHODOX CHURCH

The cornerstone of the Greek Orthodox church on Boswell avenue was laid Sunday morning by Bishop Geoakin Alexopoulos of Boston, assisted by the pastor, Rev. Ph. Sebastiades, with a mass from 9 to 12 o'clock attended by a large congregation. At the conclusion of the mass, the bishop and the pastor led the procession to the basement of the church for the cornerstone ceremonies. Accompanying them were the officers of the church, Chris Alexopontos, president; John James, vice-president; Th. Philipacopoulos, secretary; Ulysses Sakellarides, treasurer, and six boys in different colored robes, carrying lighted candles and crucifixes.

In his address, Bishop Alexopoulos spoke upon the Golden Rule and called upon the people to fulfill the religious traditions of their fathers, to become good and useful citizens of this country, setting this example to their children, and do the utmost for the progress and welfare of this land in which they live.

Among contributions made in response to an appeal for funds to complete improvements in the building were the following: Ulysses Sakellarides, $200; George Belemezos, $150, and George Colopoulos, 100. The programme of improvement calls for an expenditure of $15,000.

Bishop Alexopoulos was entertained in the evening by one of the trustees of the church, George Belemezos. The pastor of the church, Phip Sabastiach, Th. Philipacopoulos, and William Stavron were also present.

RETAIL AND WHOLESALE TRADE BRISK FEATURE OF BUSINESS WORLD LAST WEEK

NEW YORK, Sept. 29—(AP)—Vitality of retail and wholesale trade presented the brightest aspect of the business situation last week, while heavy industries, such as steel and automotive, were inclined to falter somewhat.

Steel mill operations sagged to below 85 per cent of rated capacity, which is in contrast to the trend a year ago. There was some easing in the prices of steel products, heavy buying of railway equipment was a favorable factor.

Owing to the protracted drought of the summer, farm crops have not come up to expectations, but there has been no evidence of a curtailment of public purchasing power. Owing to accumulating stocks at the markets wheat prices sagged to the lowest levels since mid-July, but rallied considerably late in the week. Freight car loadings as reported for the latest week continued to show a high level of distribution of goods, substantially above the like period of a year ago.

The lighter lines of manufacturing, such as makers of wearing apparel, radio sets and furniture, were active, with some signs of increasing output. The textile markets were steady to firm, with good fall buying in progress, wholesale buyers were said to be exercising some caution, but the demand was fully up to that of this time last year.

The building industry continued to slump. Heavy construction continued fairly active, but residential building lagged in pronounced fashion.

The American Petroleum institute reported a substantial decline in crude oil production for the first time in months, and the industry was inclined to regard the over-production problem as well on the way to solution.

Non-ferrous metals were steady and in fair demand, copper holding at 18 cents a pound, domestic delivery. Hides sagged somewhat, owing to conditions in the Argentine market.

RAYMOND KING, NEW LONDON, KILLED WHEN MORGAN CAR RUNS INTO TREE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 29.—Raymond King, about 18, residing on Ocean avenue, was almost instantly killed in Waterford Saturday night, and Reginald Morgan, 22, of 129 Willetts avenue, and Edwin Jackson, of 839 Montauk avenue, were painfully injured, when the Ford runabout Morgan was driving struck a tree. King sustained a broken neck, fractured right leg and broken hip. Morgan and Jackson got head injuries. They were taken to Lawrence-Memorial hospital, where they will remain but a day or two unless more serious injuries develop. Morgan will be arrested as soon as his condition will permit and will be charged with manslaughter.

Morgan, Jackson and King had attended a dance at Goshen and about 11 o'clock when the two first-named young men decided to start for New London, King requested a ride. He was accommodated and the three dancers entered the small auto. When the car was being driven at an estimated rate of 35 miles an hour, near the residence of Edward Hammond, Goshen, the car rounded a curve just at the time another car was approaching from the opposite direction. The headlights of the approaching auto hampered the vision of Morgan, causing the car to leave the highway and crash against a tree. King was thrown to the highway and landed upon his head. Patrolman Thomas Cavanaugh, of New London police department, who happened along at the time, took charge of the injured and summoned the ambulance. Although a record run was made, King was dead when the ambulance arrived.

ASSEMBLED FOR LECTURE, POLICE MAKE 14 RAIDS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 29.—New London police conducted a series of raids Saturday night and as a result 13 persons were charged with violation of the liquor law on two counts, and one arrest for conducting a disorderly house was made. The arrests were made possible by three stool pigeons obtained through the state police, Groton barracks, who operated among stores and residences where liquor is sold. When the stool pigeons had obtained the necessary evidence to bring about convictions, Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer issued warrants for the arrests, while search warrants were issued by Judge Daniel M. Cronin. The raiding force had no knowledge of the plans of the raids, for every officer, including the street sergeants, had received instructions early in the week from Captain Charles S. Pinney to report at headquarters last night at 7:30 to listen to the first of a series of lectures, the speaker to be Prosecuting Max Boyer. The officers off duty reported in raiment more fitting for a wedding than a raid. A short time after the entire force had been assembled it was made known that there would be no lecture, but that the officers would be utilized in accomplishing raids. The officers then started out to serve the warrants, some of them in taxicabs, especially where the stores or houses were far from headquarters. When the raids had been concluded those arrested were: George Silva, 91 North Bank street; Max Markoff, 91 North Bank street; Eugene Conway, 107 Main street; Marty Russell, 8 Cross street; Sebastian Friars, 207 Main street; Joseph Connolly, 207 Main street; Nicholas Polildino, 12 Home street; Tony Menghi, 87 Smith street; Jack Halpern, 195 Main street; Joseph Verdi, 18 Brewer street; Josephine Truken, 211 North Bank street; Helen Kolanski, 79 Crystal avenue; Joseph O'Connor, 19 Atlantic street, and Arthur May, State street. All the frequenters found in the places were arrested also. The men and women charged with violation of the liquor law were released upon furnishing sureties on their respective bonds of $1,000; the frequenters furnished sureties on their bonds of $50 each. Mrs. Lottie Naples, 22 Pearl street, was charged with conducting a disorderly house and Bobbie Mariano was charged with frequenting. Both women furnished sureties on their bonds and all will be in court tomorrow.

Woman Caught With Wet Goods

This afternoon, Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith, Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray and Patrolman Clarence Wells raided the home of Mrs. Lillian Pozzello, 43 Woodbridge street, and arrested the woman on a charge of violation of the liquor law. She was released on furnishing a surety on her bond. Mahigil is a prisoner at police tomorrow. A quantity of wine, whiskey and alcohol was seized.

Michael Ward, a sailor, was arrested on State street Saturday night by Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray and Patrolman Clarence Wells, charged with begging. He will be in court Monday.

Wife Beater Arrested

Louis Mahigil, 22, a salesman, residing in Bridgeport, was arrested in Boston Friday night at the request of the New London police on a charge of assault. He was returned to New London Saturday and will be tried Monday. In default of a surety on his bond, Mahigil is a prisoner at police headquarters. Mahigil, a Syrian, disappeared after administering a brutal beating to his wife a few weeks ago and when he was traced to Boston his arrest resulted.

John J. O'Malley, formerly of Norwich, now employed by the Merritt-Chapman Scott Co., was arrested Saturday night charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. He was released upon furnishing a surety on his bond of $100.

SAILORS AND WOMEN IN EARLY MORNING BRAWL

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 29—William T. Allen, submarine base, and Charles Miller, destroyer Fox, were arrested early this morning charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. Lauretta (Queenie) Mitchell, 21, a millworker, and her sister, Edith Helen Beckman, 25, a cook, were arrested charged with breach of the peace. Today the two women were released upon furnishing a surety on their respective bonds of $35 and will be tried Monday. The sailors and the women engaged in a quarrel on State street, the sisters engaging in a verbal tirade in the middle of the street. Patrolmen Frank Linehan and Dennis Cavanaugh and Sergeant John Courtney arrested the gang. Both women are married and both reside at 14 Wightman street.

WEDDING

Parks-Hynes

Herbert W. Parks and Miss Elizabeth W. Hynes, both of New London, were married Saturday at the parsonage of the First Church of Christ by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth.

DESTROYER'S MEN WILD ON GETTING SHORE LEAVE

The destroyer Fox put into port Saturday and the crew ran wild about the streets at night, their actions causing the police to make numerous arrests on charges of intoxication and resisting an officer. Included among those arrested was one of the Fox's officers, Walter Lee. He was turned over to the custody of another of the officers of the destroyer and, with the sailors, will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow.

THREE BAD ACTORS FINED FOR GROTON EVIL-DOING

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 29.—George Brown, of Groton and New York, was in Groton town court Saturday afternoon charged with violation of the liquor law, enticing minor females for purposes of prostitution and conducting a house of assignation. He was fined an aggregate of $200 which, with added costs, brought his penalty to $300. Arthur Wright, New London, was charged with enticing females for purposes of prostitution and was fined $50 and costs and Pasquale Campagna, Groton, on the same charge was also fined $50 and costs. Several frequenters were fined $5 and costs. Brown was rearrested immediately following court on a charge of forgery and will be tried within a few days. It is claimed he negotiated a check for $33 when there were not funds to his account in the Corn Exchange bank, New York.

Brown, Wright and Campagna recently opened a sporting house at Eastern Point, in the midst of owners of summer residences, and which was patronized principally by fishermen on boats at the American Fisheries. The state police obtained evidence as to the nature of the business conducted at the house and early Saturday night a raiding force swooped down on the resort, arresting all the occupants.

THAMES CLUB ROBBERY FOILED BY RAY HARDING

The gang of thieves that caused a stir in police circles Thursday night, continued their operations Friday night, for the Thames club, corner of State and Washington streets, New London's most exclusive club, was entered and, but for the awakening of one of the residents there much plunder undoubtedly would have been obtained. The thief went to the rear of the club house about 2 o'clock and finding a window unlocked, it was raised, permitting the crook to enter. Going to the third story where the residents are quartered, the thief started his search for loot. Entering the room occupied by Ray Harding the crook was in the act of searching a dresser when Harding was aroused. Harding called to the crook and the fellow fled to the ground floor, where he departed in the same manner that he had entered. Harding secured his revolver and, going to the window, fired several shots. Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh and Patrolman Dennis Murphy were standing at the corner of State and Main streets and commandeering an automobile speeded to the club house. About the same time, Patrolman Henry Hick, who patrols the beat where the club house is located, arrived on the run and in a few minutes Sergeant Samuel Hick and an automobile patrol officer reached there, followed by Patrolman Frank Linehan and Automobile Patrol Officer Harry Watterson. The officers made a hurried search of premises in the vicinity of the club house, as well as the neighborhood, but could not find the thief.

In the police court Saturday a batch of cases of intoxication and vagrancy were presented and with one exception judgment was suspended. In the exceptional case the man, an old offender, was sentenced to three months in jail. The only other case presented was that of Leonard Williams, Waterford, charged with driving without a license, he having been arrested by Automobile Patrol Officer George Cockell. The charge was nolled.

Geiret Brouwer, of 41 Keeney lane; John Veller, United States Coast Guard; Samuel Cole, Berlin; Clement Glanty, 28 Alger place; Enoch Crandall, Hebron; Mrs. George Williams and infant son, 57 Raymond street; Mrs. Harold Rogers and infant daughter, 629 Main street; Mrs. Charles Cushman, 4 Morse avenue, Groton; Louis Chapman, 15 Fort street, Groton and Roberta Voicer, 79 Garfield avenue, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged Saturday.

He is survived by his wife and a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Hurd, of Newark, N. J. Mr. Williams was one of the oldest members of the Jibboom club. He was born in Waterford, March 7, 1847, but had resided in New London the greater part of his life. He was for many years employed on whaling boats sailing from this port, but in later years was employed as a painter.

Mrs. Michael L. Moriarty

Mrs. Susan Moriarty, widow of Michael L. Moriarty, died early Saturday at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Charles Peterson, Station 14, Waterford, after a lingering illness. Besides her daughter she is survived by four sons, Jeremiah, a resident of Massachusetts; John, Peter and Charles Moriarty, of this city. Mrs. Moriarty was born in Ireland but moved to New London when she was a young woman and continued to reside here until moving to Waterford several years ago.

Theodore Bodenwein has sold an undivided one-half interest in a building lot on Norwod avenue to Harry and Cecelia Wheeler. The remaining one-half interest has been sold to Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler by Alton T. Miner, administrator of the estate of Bryan F. Mahan.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel Saturday ordered the return of the driver's license of Irving F. Labensky, 39 Blinman street. Labensky is employed as electrician by the New London fire department.

Runaway Boys Held

James Devine, Dominic Murgolo and Samuel Senatore, of Jersey City, N. J., youths, all about 15, were arrested on State street at 3 o'clock Saturday morning charged with being runaways when Patrolmen Dennis Cavanaugh and Frank Linehan observed the youths loitering. They are being held pending the arrival of relatives to escort them back home.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Feldman of Montauk avenue, left Saturday on a motor trip to Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. They will be absent from New London about two weeks.

TAXI DRIVER'S BUSINESS PROVES NOT SO PROFITABLE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 29.—Joseph Sableski, public service operator, was arrested this afternoon by Sergeant John Courtney, charged with soliciting for purposes of immorality. He was held in bail of $500 for appearance in the police court Monday. Sableski, it is claimed, has been making a practice of driving men to houses which provide female companionship and the driver conveyed one of the stool pigeons, who obtained evidence against 14 men and women for selling liquor and who were arrested Saturday night, also drove the man to the home of Mrs. Lottie Naples, 22 Pearl street, who was arrested in the raids, charged with conducting a house of ill fame. It is claimed that the stool pigeon was provided with female company there.

John J. Jordan, 77 Howard street, had been drinking this afternoon and drove his automobile to Crystal avenue, where he parked it. Jordan absented himself and when he returned he was in a state of near-collapse. He attempted to start the engine and was observed in his act. A resident communicated with headquarters and Patrolmen Clarence Wells and Louis Pine arrested Jordan.

Fishermen again caused the police trouble this afternoon but were not arrested. The fishermen were passengers on the New Haven railroad train that arrived in New London at 4:01 o'clock and between New Haven and this city they caused a disturbance. A request was made of the police to meet the train here and several bluecoats were at the union station to make arrests. The conductor, however, refused to make a complaint against the fishermen, so they were ordered off the streets. They hired a taxicab and disappeared, but later one of their number was arrested on Main street.

The Merchants' Limited, the New Haven railroad's fastest train, passed through New London this evening without making a stop, the first time in the history of the railroad that this train has not stopped at New London. The westbound train, scheduled to pass through here at 7:17 o'clock, was 10 minutes late, but the westbound at 7:44 o'clock was on time.

NAMEAUG CO. HELPS SAVE BENWAY HOUSE, WATERFORD

NEW LONDON, Sept. 29.—Fire caused estimated damage of $500 to the residence on the Nevins estate, Waterford, early today. The fire was discovered by the occupant of the house, Edward N. Benway. The Waterford fire department was summoned, but because of the headway the blaze had gained it was believed that the fire would destroy the house, so a call for assistance from New London was requested. Nameaug Engine company responded and the fire was subdued within a short time.

Artemio Angelone, 790 Main street, was arrested this evening by State Police Officer Donald Brown, charged with failing to grant right of way, and was ordered to appear in the police court Monday.

Broadway Theatre

Vivid intense drama of a side of life often imagined but seldom seen by the average person—the real underworld of New York with its illicit traffic, its bootleggers and hi-jackers, both in constant warfare with the police, the gaudy night clubs with their glamor and colod hiding the dross and artificiality underneath, the loves and passions of the denizens of the demimonde—all this against a background of color, light and music, is thrown in a dazzling miracle of singing, dancing and talking, in the super-production "Broadway," which thrilled capacity audiences at the popular Broadway theatre last evening, and which will will continue through Wednesday. Filmed with the dialog intact from the original stupendous stage play, which thrilled New York for a two year run, this film sensation tons all other attempts to transfer a stage drama to the screen. The cast includes Glenn Tryon and Merna Kennedy, Evelyn Brent, Otis Harlan, Leslie Fenton, Robert Ellis, Thomas E. Jackson and Paul Porcasi, the two latter playing their original roles as in the stage play. The chorus numbers are striking, with liberal use of natural color, and Gus Arnheim and his famous Cocoanut Grove orchestra playing the lilting and jazzy melodies which were especially written for this production. The program is augmented with the Talking Collegians in their best release so far, "Flying High," and the latest issue of the Paramount Sound News.

Palace Theatre

In presenting "Hearts in Exile," Manager Hamilton of the Palace theater is bringing to Norwich a flash of that old gay life in Russia—the last autocratic days before the Red hand of Revolution descended upon Russian nobility and swept the monarchy of the Czars from the face of the earth. This is the Russia of the cruel, cold rule of the aristocrats—yet a vivid colorful Russia in which love burned its way through the deepest snows and found a resting place in the wildest hills of Siberia.

Altogether the music, setting and acting of "Hearts in Exile" mark it as one of the best contributions yet made to the American screen by Warner Brothers, the sponsors of the Palace theatre.

CANTERBURY GREEN

As usual Canterbury was much in evidence at the Brooklyn fair, contributing largely to the entries there, as well as to the attendance. Several local societies bore off prizes. Canterbury grange exhibit, which represented much time and work on the part of its members, took second premium and the juvenile grange had a special premium. Three Canterbury schools had displays of various lines of work, all taking prizes in the order mentioned: Green school, Frost and Westminster. The Ladies' Aid society of the Congregational church secured third premium on its showing.

Former residents of Canterbury met at the fair were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hoxsie, of Westbrook and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lecraw, of Scituate, R. I.

Rev. Sherrod Soule, of Hartford, was a visitor here Sunday and gave the morning address. Plans are being made for the every member canvass, to take place at an early date. Mrs. Clinton Frink is chairman of the committee.

Mrs. Harold Norton, of New York, who is recovering from a serious illness, is spending a few weeks at the home of her parents, Rev. and Mrs. Harry Small.

James Wells, who is boarding at Henry Larkham's, has been entertaining his daughter.

Mrs. Walter Sager and Mrs. Fred Willoughby, of Scotland, recently enjoyed an outing at Westbrook, Conn.

Several thousand men and women who went to the Klondike in the great gold rush of 1898 held a convention—a "sourdough stampede," they called it—in Seattle, Wash. Among the delegates were 16 gray-haired, bent, old men who registered from the King county poor farm.

LITTLE DIFFERENCE IN PITCHING ABILITY OF THE WORLD SERIES CONTENDERS

By BRIAN BELL
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—(AP)—If the world's series were a mid-summer baseball festival instead of an autumn event, selection of the prospective pitching stars would have been simple.

When the spring campaign moved into the summer stretch, Bob Grove of the Athletics and Guy Bush of the Cubs were mowing down the opposition with relentless regularity. They were not so good later. That they were able to lead their respective leagues in pitching in late September was due to their early drives. Grove has won a scant half dozen games in the last three months and Bush was not able to finish the tasks he started in six straight attempts.

To assume the burden when the two stars faltered, Managers Mack and McCarthy, fortunately for their championship aspirations, had other pitchers to hurl into the battle line's front. Earnshaw and Walberg gave the A's a lift and Malone and Root held out helping hands to the Cubs. Earnshaw finally passed Grove in number of games won and Malone swept past Bush's total of victories although their losses also were greater.

With each champion boasting a big three, Grove, Earnshaw and Walberg for the American leaguers and Malone, Root and Bush for the Nationals, the records show that the Athletics trio has won more than 60 games between them with the Cubs leading three only a few games behind. And yet it is possible that the opposing managers in the supreme baseball test may not pin all their hopes on their leading pitchers. Jack Quinn, one of the few spitball pitchers left is ready for a fling and Joe McCarthy doubtless will recall that Hal Carlson gave the A's plenty of trouble when he pitched for the Phillies against them in the Philadelphia city series.

The Athletics have a trio of hurlers with great possibilities as relief or "one game" pitchers in Rommel, Shores and Ehmke. To match the opposition reinforcements, McCarthy is able to offer Blake, a right-hander, and two southpaws Cvengros and Nebf, the latter a giant veteran of four world's series.

The two world series managers of 1929 pursue the same line of pitching strategy in one respect. They play today's game today and let tomorrow's take care of itself. If he thinks he can win the first game with Grove, Earnshaw and Walberg, Manager Mack will not hesitate to throw them all in. Manager McCarthy will be quite willing to take a victory at the expense of the use of Malone, Bush and Root.

No outstanding advantage can be seen for either team in the pitching. The A's rebuttal to claims of Cub partisans that an almost solid array of right hand batsmen will confuse Mack's great left handers is that a good pitcher is a good pitcher, regardless of the arm he uses in throwing the ball.

The Cubs think their right handed fast ball pitchers will stop the Athletics and when the American league fans retort that the A's hit hard all season, the Chicago fans point out that Malone and Bush are in the National league.

MARTINS SCORE EASY WIN OVER NEW LONDON SOCONY

J. B. Martin defeated the Socony team of New London in their New London county championship game Sunday afternoon at Martin park, 6 to 1, having little trouble in gaining the verdict. The locals took the lead in the first inning with two runs, added two more in the third and finished with another pair in the sixth. Socony scored once in the fourth. Jim Murphy and Nap Liberty were the heavy hitters for the Velvetmen with three safeties apiece, while Carlie Krauss and Walter Dabrowski each connected for two hits. Russ Fisher pitched for J. B., keeping nine Socony hits well scattered, while Chappell was on the hill for the losers and was found for 12 hits.

Four fast double plays, three by the visiting team, proved the fielding features. The game was run off in 1 hour, 25 minutes. Next Sunday, in probably the last game of the season, the Martins meet a picked team of Eastern league stars.

LOWLY RED SOX HUMBLE THE MIGHTY ATHLETICS

BOSTON, Sept. 29.—(AP) —The tail end Red Sox turned on the pennant winning Athletics and their pitching ace, Bob (Lefty) Grove, for a 10 to 0 victory at Braves field, here today.

The Red Sox made eight of their ten runs in the first five innings off Grove and scored two more off Yerkes and Rommell, who finished out the game. Ruffing, meanwhile, held the coming American league champions to one scratch hit during the five innings he pitched and the Athletics collected only three infield bingles off Milt Gaston, who relieved him. For the second successive day, Simmons and Foxx, Athletic sluggers, went hitless.

Joe Cicero, a rookie not yet old enough to vote, drove in three runs with a double and two singles and scored twice himself. He played a fine game in left field for the Red Sox. Score:

ROOT HANGS UP HIS 18TH WIN BEATING REDS

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—(AP) —Charley Root turned in his eighteenth victory and became the logical choice to open the world's series with the Athletics when he let Cincinnati down with six hits as Chicago beat the Reds, 1 to 0 here today.

Four of the six hits were infield scratches.

Hornsby's thirty-ninth home run of the season in the fourth inning was the only score of the game. Rogers also got two singles and a double.

Hack Wilson knocked out Pitcher Ben Frey with a line drive to the Reds' pitcher's stomach in the fourth but Frey recovered and pitched great ball the rest of the way.

Don't you just love these emotional girls who get weepy and snuffly at the motion pictures?

You know, those kind who open the flood-gates of their eyes when the callous villian deceives the pretty little country girl. And how she weeps copiously when the angels take little Eva.

Well, I went to the theatre the other night with one of these very emotional young women. The picture wasn't one of those weepy kind but it had plenty of tense situations.

The girl had bought a package of chocolate peppermints, after the nature of all girls who must have candy in order to enjoy their pictures. The young woman also had a new pair of white kid gloves.

Well, the picture as it unfolded, got more gripping every minute and the young lady, losing herself in the dramatic situations, got more gripping herself. She clutched her chair with a death-like grip, also her chocolate peppermints.

Finally, the picture came to a happy conclusion and the lights came on. The young lady bethought herself of the chocolate peppermints. She looked down into her lap. The peppermints were there all right but not recognizable.

During her intense excitement the young lady had clutched the package of peppermints with the same grip that she had the chair. The peppermints being of more fragile construction had yielded.

In fact they had yielded so much that they had oozed out between the fingers on her new kids and come to rest on her dress. She was literally plastered with chocolate peppermints.

Although highly laughable it was a pathetic sight to see the young woman trying to separate herself and the peppermints. To the question, "Did you enjoy the picture?" her answer was, "Sure, don't I look it?"

Well, three more local baseball fans have declared themselves on the coming world's series. Sergeant Matt Delaney picks the Cubs, Officer Pat Shahan is backing the Athletics to win, Bill Maynard says the A's will win the series 4 games to 3. He looks for a close series.

Whose next?

TIGERS SHADE WHITE SOX IN LAST HOME CONTEST

DETROIT, Sept. 29—(AP)—While cold breezes blew and 1,500 fans shivered, the Tigers nosed out the White Sox, 9 to 8 in 11 innings in the last home game of the season here today.

BARBER AND BERGHINZO HEROES AS ACADEMY DEFEAT CHAPMAN TECH, 14-2

Sensational runs by Frank (Gink) Barber and Capt. Chet Berghinzo gave the Academy a last minute 14-2 victory over Chapman Tech Saturday afternoon at the campus in the opening grid tussle of the season. These Frank Merriwell stunts, first by Barber early in the last period and a few minutes later by Berghinzo resulted in touchdowns and the Wildcats rallied from a 2 to 0 defeat to the victory. About 2,500 saw the game.

Chapman Tech gained two points in the last minute of the first half on a safety when Cruickshank passed over Crowell's head and Thurber tackled the Norwich man behind the goal line. As the minutes went by in the second half these points looked like a hundred until the big blowoff came.

It was no more than deserving that Barber and Berghinzo should reap the glory, for they, with "Fat" Stevens, right guard, and Bud Fontaine, halfback, were the individual stars of the afternoon for the Red and White. Barber gained more than his share of yardage, mostly on line thrusts while also getting more than his share of tackles on the defensive. Stevens and Berghinzo were in on the majority of the plays, the former especially nailing the Tech backs for losses. Fontaine, who did not start the game, pulled off a couple of sensational runs, one in the last period for 25 yards that was a beauty. Fontaine also tossed the pass to Berghinzo for the second score.

Chapman Tech, presenting almost an all-veteran team, was outplayed by the locals for the greater part of the distance. Neither team, however, showed any sustained drive. A short forward pass, with Quinn on the receiving end, was Tech's most effective ground-gaining weapon. They worked it three times successfully for gains of close to 20 yards each time. The Academy was bewildered by this formation and had just one or two more of these tosses not been dropped by the receiver, when he had a clear field, the story might have been different. The Academy, aside from the one pass on which Berghinzo scored the touchdown, gained mostly on center rushes.

Play in the first quarter was within the 30 yard lines, the Academy receiving a short kick on their 35 yard line and both teams punting on second or third downs. Neither outfit scored a first down in this quarter, although the Academy lost one on a penalty.

In the second period the play opened up a bit with Tech rattling off two first downs, one a pass to Quinn, good for 20 yards, in between kicks until, late in the session, the local found themselves with the ball on their own 20 yard line. They could not gain and elected to kick. It was then that the bad pass came, the ball rolling over the goal-line and Tech getting two points. The Academy kicked out to Tech and after Quinn had received another pass for a 15-yard advance, the half ended.

The Academy received to open the second half. They could not gain and kicked the ball going offside at midfield. Tech made one first down and then kicked to the Academy 15 yard line. The Academy started what looked like a march to a score with two first downs in succession but a pass was intercepted at midfield and Chapman then punted to the Academy 10 yard line as the quarter ended with Tech still in front, 2 to 0.

The last period had barely opened when Barber pulled off his stunt that electrified the large crowd. The Academy had punted from their own 10 yard line to their 40. Tech tried to pass and Barber snared the ball from amidst a flock of Red and Black jerseys and eluded most of the team in his run for the score. He was aided by fine interference and the rugged little halfback then added the extra point on a smash through right guard.

Chapman received and, after an exchange of kicks, Armstrong intercepted a forward on the Academy 40 yard line. Fontaine passed to Berghinzo, who sprinted for the score through a maze of Tech tacklers. Berghinzo took a pass from Fontaine for the extra point. Chapman resorted to long passes for the remainder of the time but never seriously threatened, and the game ended with the ball around midfield.

Notes

One of the largest opening day crowds on hand.

The Academy started with brand new light yellow helmets but they were stiff and some discarded them for old ones in the second half.

Three out of town officials handled the game in faultless style.

Tech had plenty of rooters and two cheer-leaders while the Academy had no one to lead them in their school yells.

The field was all bedecked with markers for each ten yard line and red and white sticks for the linesmen.

Barber's run set the crowd going and he was given a big hand but it was no larger than that given to Berghinzo a few minutes later.

Next week the Academy meets Bulkeley high of Hartford.

Johnson and Lambert finished in a tie for first place in a cross-country run between members of the Academy squad. The event was staged between the halves of the game.

Accept Challenge.

Malek's All Stars accept the challenge of the Red Arrows and will play them Saturday or Sunday at Slaters park, in Jewett City at 12.30.

PUTNAM BEATS DOUGLAS BY LAST PERIOD TOUCHDOWN

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 29.— After three off-tackle plays by John Elliott, halfback of the 1929 edition of the Blue and White squad, had brought the ball within inches of the Douglas goal in the fourth period after a scoreless half, a center rush by Reynold Deredinis, plucky little veteran quarterback of the Noyesmen, accounted for the only touchdown as Putnam high won 7 to 0 over the heavy Douglas high eleven of East Douglas, Mass., in the season's opening game played at the campus Saturday afternoon. A balmy September sun set the mercury at about the 85 mark was responsible for the many time-out periods and did much to slow up the work of both teams. Although the local eleven, eastern Connecticut grid champs, by virtue of their victorious season last year, failed to run up any sensational score but they furnished plenty of thrills for the large crowd of onlookers and it was not until the final whistle that the Noyesmen clinched the game.

Putnam kicked off to Douglas and the ball was taken by Smith, the only threat of the visitors, who ran 40 yards before he was brought down. The veteran Putnam line proved invincible when the Noyesmen assumed the offensive following the Douglas failure to make the first ten yard gain.

The backfield combination of Reynolds, quarterback; John Elliott, veteran right half; Cacciotuti, left half, and Sabin, at fullback, performed remarkably well. On two occasions in the second period, Reynolds carried the ball around left end, reaching the 1-yard line but in each instance Putnam was unable to cross the goal line. In the remaining minutes of the final quarter Putnam opened a determined attack. Sabin, in a 12-yard run, brought the ball within reach of the goal, then came Reynolds' center rush for the touchdown, which climaxed in Sabin going through right tackle for the extra point.

Douglas played hard but the inability of their backfield to break the Noyesmen defense and several incomplete passes left little for them to do in the way of scoring.

WEDDING

Ricketts-Dawson

A very pretty fall wedding took place Saturday afternoon at four o'clock when Miss Agnes Louise Dawson daughter of the late Avery and Agnes Wallace Dawson was united in marriage to John Bradford Ricketts, son of Rev. and Mrs. Charles H. Ricketts of Prospect street. The ceremony was performed by the groom's father, Rev. Mr. Ricketts, pastor of the Greeneville Congregational church at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Howard A. Spalding of Hamilton avenue. The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, wore a gown of ivory satin and a nun's cap, plain with tulle veil, which was short caught up with orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of lilies of the valley and white rosebuds. Miss Evelyn Sauer of Hartford, who was the bridesmaid, wore a gown of coral chiffon and carried an arm bouquet of coral color gladioli. Kirk F. Ricketts, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

After the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Ricketts left for a two week's unannounced honeymoon trip. The bride wore for traveling a three-piece brown suit with an egg-shell blouse. After Oct. 13, Mr. and Mrs. Ricketts will live in New York. Relatives were present from Syracuse, Hartford, Springfield, New Haven and New York. Prof. Herbert Rich and his orchestra played during the wedding and reception. The home was artistically decorated with the color scheme of yellow and burnt orange, while foliage and choice flowers were arranged by Otto Ernst. Mrs. Berkoff catered. Mr. Ricketts is a graduate of the Norwich Free Academy and attended Connecticut Agricultural college. The newly married couple have a large circle of friends in this vicinity who extend them best wishes for a happy and prosperous married life.

Miss Zahn Returns to Home

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT LEAVES SHRUBS FOR BIRD FEED

During the past summer Connecticut highway department employes at work clearing wild plants and undergrowth from the shoulders of state roads have been instructed by Commissioner John A. Macdonald to leave standing certain types of growths upon which feed various song, plumage and game birds. In many cases, these species of shrubs have been planted along the roads under the supervision of the highway division superintendents.

Among the species which have been left standing or which have been planted during the summer are the following which have a special appeal to game birds: Holly, raspberry, button bush, mulberry, choke cherry, sumac in variety, wild grape, hackberry and elderberry. Upon these and other types of plants which bear only Latin names, feed such game birds as partridge, pheasant, quail, snipe, wild geese and woodcock.

Practically the same growths with the addition of silverberry, arbor vitae, buckthorn and red cedar furnish food for such song and plumage birds as the blackbird, bluebird, bobolink, cardinal, chickadee, cuckoo, finch, flicker, kingbird, lark, meadowlark, mockingbird, oriole, starling, swallow, tanager, thrush, waxwing, woodpecker and wren.

Frank Stanley Returning

Frank Stanley, who was with the Porteous & Mitchell Co. about 15 years ago and has been with a New Haven department store, is to return to the Porteous & Mitchell Co. next month.

COLCHESTER CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH TO OBSERVE 226TH ANNIVERSARY

The 226th anniversary of the founding of the Congregational church in Colchester will be celebrated with appropriate ceremonies on Saturday afternoon, October 5. The ceremonies will begin at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The church building has been restored to its original design in the interior of the structure during the past summer, and the celebration on Saturday will also serve for the rededication of the newly furnished building.

The exercises will be opened by an organ prelude with Prof. William Churchill Hammond of Holyoke at the organ. The scriptures will be read by Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey of Norwich Town, and Rev. J. Beveridge Lee of New London will offer the prayer of rededication. The historical address will be by Rev. Sherrod Soule of Hartford and Rev. Rockwell Harmon Potter, dean of the Hartford Theological seminary, will give the address of rededication. There will be greetings from the following, some of whom were former pastors of the church: Rev. Henry A. Blake, Rev. Curtis M. Geer, Rev. Charles N. Ransom and David S. Day.

In addition to the organ numbers by Prof. Hammond there will be a violin duet by A. T. Bunyan and W. B. Gerhardt, and a song by a male chorus.

The pastor of the church, Rev. H. Herbert Tompkins will preside and lead the rededicatory responses.

Prof. Hammond's organ numbers will be "Occasional Overture" by Handel, Adagio (symphony in B flat) by Pleyel, and "Postlude March." "Now Thank We All Our God," by Karg-Elert. Mrs. W. O. Seyms, the church organist, will accompany the singers and lead the hymns.

Neighboring churches are invited to attend the service.

THANKSGIVING MASS ON ST. PATRICK'S ANNIVERSARY

A good sized congregation assembled in St. Patrick's church Saturday at 8 o'clock for a special high mass of thanksgiving to God for having brought the parish to the completion of a half century of prosperity. The children of the school occupied center aisle pews under supervision of their teachers, the Sisters of Mercy from the Perkins avenue convent. Members of the altar society had adorned the sanctuary with tall vases and decorative baskets holding golden blossoms-chrysanthemums, dahlias and daisies. Vestments and altar hangings were of white and gold.

The rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. Michael Henry May sang the mass. Throughout the service members of the choir sang, the solos being by Roderick F. Sullivan. At the offertory, Mr. Sullivan gave the late Dr. Jules Jordan's beautiful setting of "Ave, Maria," with most sympathetic accompaniment by the organist, Henry J. LaFontaine. Just before the Canon of the Mass, Mr. Sullivan and Mr. LaFontaine were heard in the duet, "Hosanna in excelsis," in a fine blending of voices. One of Mr. LaFontaine's interludes was the melody of the ancient hymn, Hail, Glorious Apostle, to St. Patrick, patron saint of the church, while at the conclusion of the last gospel and as the recessional there were sung two stanzas of the parish hymn, its refrain, "St. Patrick, for You and For God," dedicated to the rector by its composer.

FORECLOSURE IS GRANTED FOR SUM OF $3,729.83

Judgment of foreclosure of $3,729.83 in favor of Thomas T. Wetmore, Jr., against Richard E. Belden, both of New London, was entered by Judge Earnest C. Simpson Friday at the superior court short calendar session here. The foreclosure was on a $3,500 mortgage on property in Henderson road, which the realtor valued at $10,000. The Mariners Savings bank holds a mortgage of $5,500 and Wetmore testified that Mr. Belden had paid him $2,000. Nov. 4 was set as the limitation of time for redemption.

Statutory continuance of three months and further order of notice for Charles Reynolds was granted in the case of the Norwich Savings society against Reynolds and others.

Allowance to defend of $100 was granted in the case of Harry W. Smith against Florence Tucker Smith.

Allowance to defend of $50 was granted in the case of George F. Tiffany against Nina Barrows Tiffany.

Default against non-appearing defendants was granted and disclosure of defense within one week or judgment was ordered in the case of the Eastern Connecticut Bond and Mortgage Corp. against Vincent, and others. A motion for foreclosure went off the list.

ALABAMA MISSIONARY PLEADS NEGROES' CAUSE

Seven or eight years ago, with the permission of his bishop, Rev. John Loftus left his flourishing parish in Watertown, Conn., that he might labor for the spiritual and industrial welfare of the southern Negroes. From Alabama he has now come north, to plead the cause of his spiritual charges and from the pulpit of St. Patrick's church at the four masses Sunday he besought the interest in and material help of the well-to-do northern Catholics for the helpless people under his care. Of the 12,000,000 Negroes, only 250,000 are Catholics. The blacks were freed—but due to age-old prejudice and the way in which they are kept down, they are still not much better off than when in slavery, he said.

Father Loftus described conditions among which he lives and labors; through the accident of color, the black race is not acceptable to the whites, the Negroes being despised, oppressed, contemned, in spite of the fact that they have been given immortal souls as have others. Under the oppression of prejudice and discrimination, when it is simply impossible for them to rise above depressing handicaps they are held up to the world for their laziness, ignorance, dirt, when others have made them that way. The mission where Father Loftus is stationed has bought a 1,200-acre plantation upon which to work with the blacks, adults and children, in the school and industrially, and with the aim of eventually raising up priests, sisters and lay workers who can better the deplorable conditions as they now exist. He spoke of the belief that, as soon as a proper candidate is found, it is the intention of Pope Pius XI to raise up a bishop from the ranks of the colored race, to minister to his own people as they need and crave.

The missionary asked his hearers to aid the oppressed Negroes not alone by their material help—but to pray earnestly for them through a new devotion to the Holy Ghost, through weekly communions, through supplication. Graphically he sketched the urgent needs of the race which has in its veins the blood of black, white and Indians, an entire family living in a one-room cabin, lacking clothing, lacking food, given no chance to rise above present degradation. As teacher and preacher, Father Loftus is very hopeful of the future of the Negro, once the latter is given justice and opportunity.

His appeal met with a liberal response on the part of the congregations hearing him.

RELIGIOUS POLICY OF BOY SCOUTS

"The Boy Scouts of America maintains that no boy can grow into the best kind of citizenship without recognizing his obligation to God," says Rev. Harry Brothwell, scoutmaster and pastor at the Third Baptist church. "In the first part of the Boy Scout's oath or pledge the boy promises, 'On my honor I will do my best to do my duty to God and my country, and to obey the Scout law.' The recognition of God as the ruling and leading power in the universe, and the grateful acknowledgment of His favors and blessings, are necessary to the best type of citizenship, and are wholesome things in the education of the growing boy. No matter what the boy may be—Catholic or Protestant or Jew— this fundamental need of good citizenship should be kept before him. The Boy Scouts of America therefore recognizes the religious element in the training of a boy, but it is absolutely non-sectarian in its attitude toward that religious training. Its policy is that the organization or institution with which the Boy Scout is connected shall give definite attention to his religious life.

"Ex-Pres. Coolidge in speaking of religion said, 'The government of a country never gets ahead of the religion of a country. There is no way by which we can substitute the authority of law for the virtue of man. We cannot depend on the government to do the work of religion. We cannot escape all personal responsibility for our own conduct. We cannot regard those as wise or safe counselors in public affairs who deny those principles and seek to support the theory that society can succeed where the individual fails.'

"The opportunity must be given every boy," Rev. Mr. Brothwell declares, 'to learn of religious truths and to worship God. The form of the religion does not concern scout authorities; that is a matter to be decided by the parents of a scout, but a scout should be strengthened and confirmed in his chosen faith and encouraged to follow its precepts. If our experience in scouting has proven anything, it is that religion is essential in the training of boys and that no lasting good can be achieved when their spiritual development is neglected."

NORWICH TOWN

METHODIST BOY SCOUTS VOTE TO GIVE A PLAY

The weekly meeting of Troop 2 Boy Scouts of the M. E. church, was held Friday night at their headquarters in charge of the scoutmaster, Rev. George Warren Potter. The Scouts voted to have a Father and Son banquet during anniversary week. Also to assist in the evening services of the church, by acting as ushers in uniform. A committee was appointed by the Scoutmaster to look up the matter of a play, as the Scouts voted to include that among their winter activities. The committee appointed was Donald Olsen, Arthur Bennett and Donald Waterman.

The usual opening ritual carried out began with the bugle call by Edward Jordan. During the inter-patrol period the quiz method was used and the questions were asked by the patrol leaders instead of the scoutmaster. Bugler Jordan was assisted in the calls during the meeting by Albert Eyberse who also played a bugle. Two new game tables were added to the furnishings of the scout rooms and were used by those who arrived at the meeting early. One table was given by Miss Florence Bennett and the other was bought by the Wolf Cub Pack of Scouts. The Scouts voted to hold a Scout song writing contest, entries to be made at the next meetings. A vote was taken to hold another over-night hike, if possible, before cold weather sets in. In the efficiency contest which ends Oct. 15th, the points scored by the Scouts are: Donald Olsen, 985; Clayton Rowe in second place with a score of 360 points and Arthur Bennett, Edward Jordan and Leon Ladd tied for third place; with a score of 80 points each. Edward Gallagher is in fourth place with 745 points. There was an attendance of 17, including officers.
